THE AUTOMOBILE—MONARCH OF THE WORLD

Illustrations by HENRI LANOS, the Famous French Imaginative Artist.

In a Very Few Years Automobiles Will Have Become Terrible Engines of War Which Will Cut Through a Future Field of Battle as if They Were Like So Many Huge Human Battering Rams, Thunder and Lightning on Wheels.

By the MARQUIS DE DION.

The Eminent French Promoter of the Automobile.

THE Marquis of Dion of France, the celebrated promoter of motoring, and who may be said to be the father of the automobile, predicts that in a quarter of a century it will be the dominating locomotive force of the earth. Various other prophesies he makes in perfect good faith for the development of the motor which are as interesting as they are daring and stupendous.

SUPPOSE it to be the year of the automobile, 1930.

Let us take the aspect of our towns first.

It is Paris; the Place de l'Opera; the time is 5 o'clock in the morning. The late "night birds," the idlers of the clubs, who have just left the gaming tables with the dawn, the noctambulists of joy, are leaping into the automobiles which stand waiting for them. The mechanician in his seat pushes a lever. The motors depart.

But already the automobile street sweepers and the automobile street sprinklers are filing along the length of the boulevards. In the twinkling of an eye the thoroughfares are purified and made healthful. Paris is rubbing its eyes, yawning and awakening. And here, in fact, behold the first trucks appearing to gather up the refuse of the kitchens and the factories. From door to door watch them go, swiftly, surely; a little mechanical windlass governed from the motor hoists each receptacle to the height of the wagon, to descend again for the next garbage pail after its see-sawing of lifting and emptying. This harvesting of the great city's refuse is going on all over, rapidly, completely.

The huge milk wagons coming from the suburbs at the rate of fifteen miles an hour are bringing us our morning breakfast, while the trucks of the hucksters, who, during the night have reached the markets with their huge burdens of carrots and cabbages and salad leaves and what not, are returning with all celerity again to the country and the farms.

Seven o'clock! Then all Paris is really wide awake; the day has begun; from one end of the city to the other all is life, life intense, strenuous, frenzied. The auto omnibuses, three times again as quickly as their schedule of to-day, empty their fares from all the outlying quarters of the town, the humdrum army of clerks and petty employes by thousands and tens of thousands.

Other auto 'buses speed to the outskirts and speed back again, bringing in less than ten minutes the workmen of Paris to their shops. Every one of them has been able to snatch an extra half hour of blessed sleep as against our benighted time of asthmatic tramways and bulky omnibuses drawn by lumpish horses.

And now consider the letter-carriers, who are gathered at the great central office where all the postal matter for Paris is received. In light, agile motor mail wagons they are scattered with their mail in one-quarter of an hour in all the eighty quarters of the vast city. The first mail will be entirely distributed by half-past 7 o'clock. The newspaper kiosks are already open. All the journals have been spread over all Paris in twenty minutes after they have left the presses. And, furthermore, the newspaper automobiles of all the great dailies have an hour before delivered at the railway stations all the editions for the country. Leaving by the same trains as in the times when horses were used for the same service, the newspapers have been able to receive and publish the news of the entire world a half an hour later. The value of this thirty minutes gained is inestimable in the eyes of newspaper people, and incalculable, too, to their subscribers.

The shops are opening; the waiters in the restaurants, their eyes still heavy with sleep, are dusting up. And from every corner of the street surge the auto wagons of delivery. There is no longer any place of business of any consideration which has not its own motor runabout. They glide, quick and nimble, steal about and worm themselves everywhere, and every one of them supplies the place of ten shop boys of the stores of other times.

In the hubbub and midst all these errand motors there begin to be noticed now the indispensable miniature machines, veritable playthings almost, that one buys for the price of a motor-cyclette in 1906. The dust which powders them or the mud which has spattered over their wheels and fenders show that they have thus early done a good bit of travelling.

This motorette, in fact, is his little gray nag which has whisked its owner into town in a jiffy from away out in the country. Grace to its surety and speed, and because one does not have to feed it with oats, your little shopkeeper or mechanic is now able to live under the blue sky among the fields, where he has a nice comfortable cottage all his own. And for his convenience, too, there is now in every street in town a stable or garage or a court sheltered for the purpose where one may put up his gadabout till evening comes, unless he happens to use it or hire it out for an afternoon spin on business or pleasure. At night he is off again and home at a very considerable saving of time as against the old time.

The country butcher and the country baker whose clientage may extend all about to several miles sometimes each also has his own little motor delivery cart, in which he blithesomely gets nicely over the ground at a pretty twenty miles an hour.

And finally there are the changes that have come about in agriculture. How conditions have been modified and improved for the farmer since the motor came into its own. The toilers in the field have found in it in their work a powerful auxiliary which has simplified their labors in a most extraordinary manner. Where formerly twenty hands were necessary during entire months, one has now one machine and one conductor during a few days. The motor has revolutionized our agriculture.

But it is necessary to take a look elsewhere in considering the profound penetration of motor power into all branches of life and all conditions of civilization. If in the town—if in the country—the motor is being put to every usage conceivable, it is to the army itself we must look to find perhaps its most stupendous service. Grace to the motor, modern strategy has been tremendously modified, and cavalry has utterly disappeared. Artillery has become extraordinarily lively and the commissariat can revictual an army with a sureness and rapidity than was never dreamt of till the entry on the scene of action of the little nimble motor. It has become, in a word, the indispensable collaborator with the modern god of battles.

Two or three times during the past ten years there have taken place valuable experiments in mobilization and the automobiles of our biggest manufacturers as well as those of private parties have been pressed into requisition just as formerly were horses, and in a few hours they were massed at the frontier, a formidable force both by their numbers and the celerity of their evolutions.

As to the artillery, it counts at the present moment a vast number of celebrated rapid fire guns in armor which are capable of 30 miles speed over good roads, and 20 miles an hour over rough. The conductor drives without being seen, while the artillerymen themselves are hidden in their "disappearing turret." The whole outfit the men, the gun, the motive machinery of the apparatus—all are absolutely out of reach of ball or shrapnel, which strike and flatten themselves out like spit balls upon the special blinds of armor which incase the machine, and are absolutely invulnerable. These particular automobile armored guns can betake themselves from one point of the field of battle to another with a speed that is dizzying, succor a menaced wing, reinforce the next moment a body of soldiery that is just losing its advantage, recover the advantage and in an incredibly short time assure a victory.

As to the infantry, the automobile is forever now its precious, its invaluable aid. Twenty years ago, and the troops were handicapped and delayed always by the indispensable convoys of munitions for the guns and provisions for the stomach.

Now we have military supply wagons, motor cars strong and quick and regular which follow the columns without embarrassment to them, sometimes even preceding them when it is necessary, and working in a radius of action of a very great extent. The impediments which used in other times to so discommode marching infantry is among the things that were.

When a halt is called, the soldier gets his warm soup. He is no longer compelled as he used to be to make it himself in his little pot which he carried for the purpose in his knapsack. In short, each company, like each battery of artillery, etc., has his rolling automobile kitchen on wheels, which has found en route the beef and vegetables necessary for its preparation, all the time rolling along with the regiment—and cooking the good hot soup which will make your soldier forget his fatigue and fit for fighting the next day. Do not smile. It has been found that a soldiers bellyful of good, hot soup has had a decisive effect on the fortunes of war.

Moreover, thanks, and yet again thanks, to the new automobile, the officers who are in charge of directing and coordinating all movements of the troops can, with the help of the military motor be in all parts of the field almost at the same time, to see everything that is going on from all important points; rush hither and thither about the battle ground with amazing swiftness; reach in the twinkling of an eye wherever their presence is imperative. They have at their disposal the best perfected motors put into requisition the first day of the mobilization; they are steered by the most famous champions of the big motor competitions for speed and endurance, some among them even who won their triumphs in the now defunct Gordon Bennett tournaments.

So the whole fabric of the army has been revolutionized. Modern tactics have completely new means at its disposal, and powerful means which it knows how to efficiently employ, owing to all the successive experiments in the national drills which have been held each year from 1910 or 1915.

DO YOU KNOW THIS SKULL?

Dining room in the Cooper residence where the shooting occurred—the small table stands where the prosecution says young Northy was sitting in a rocking chair.

Mrs. Alice F. Cooper, who is charged with murder.

The Strikingly Gruesome Way in Which the Mysterious Killing of Charles Northy Is Being Dramatized in a Maine Court at the Trial of Mrs. Cooper for Murder

IN these enlightened times it is still lawful to put human beings to the torture—even to torture a woman. The horrors of the Inquisition of the Middle Ages, when the victim's bones were crushed with the thumbscrew or his limbs broken on the wheel, were not more frightful as practised in those black-draped secret chambers, than the frightful, prolonged mental torture which men and women suffer in modern courts of justice.

Repeatedly during the last three weeks, in the Criminal Court of Augusta, Me., a delicate and refined young woman, charged with murder on purely circumstantial evidence, has been subjected to such torture as this. At times she has borne it with unflinching courage; at other times she has wept, wrung her hands, cried out, swooned. And still the torture continues in a chamber crowded with men and women with avid eyes and ears.

The supreme moment of Sardou's great drama, "La Tosca," when the heroine is compelled to listen to the shrieks of the man she loves, whose torture must go on until she yields to his rival, is considered to represent the limit of mental anguish possible of portrayal on the stage. It is more than La Tosca can bear; she succumbs. Yet, in this Maine court room mental torture no less poignant has been borne again and again by frail, young, refined Mrs. Alice F. Cooper, who is on trial charged with the murder of the youth—little more than a boy—who loved her and whom she confessed she loved.

Alone in Her House.

All the facts that are known are brought out in these torture scenes in the Augusta court room, where, before the Judge and the jury, the supposed scene of the murder is set with all the skill of a stage director.

When the shot was fired that stretched young Charles D. Northy dead at the feet of Mrs. Cooper, only these two were in her house—there were no other witnesses of the tragedy, nor of the scene which preceded it.

The theory of the prosecution is: That the husband of Mrs. Cooper, though having the fullest confidence in her fidelity to himself, became impatient of the gossip of neighbors, and asked her to cease receiving young Northy except in the presence of others; that she summoned the young man to her house for a final interview; that she was really infatuated with him, and that, when he called in response to her summons, in a transport of jealous love she killed him, being unable to endure the thought of his marrying Miss Marion Carey, the girl to whom he was engaged.

When arrested and arraigned Mrs. Cooper pleaded "not guilty." Although indicted, she was admitted to bail, and continued, seemingly undismayed by the terrible charge hanging over her, her customary duties as a good housewife, mother of two young children, and as active church worker. Three weeks ago the prolonged torture began, when she was placed on trial.

The trial was heralded as Maine's most celebrated murder inquiry. The trial judge was to be Henry C. Peabody, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Foremost in the prosecution was Hannibal E. Hamlin, Attorney-General, with brilliant resourceful, aggressive Thomas Leigh, Prosecuting Attorney for the county—Kennebec. Herbert M. Heath, in the front rank of lawyers at the criminal bar of Maine, was attorney for Mrs. Cooper.

The trial began with crowded court room, women predominating—women who had criticised Mrs. Cooper among themselves, yet had not held themselves aloof from her. Each day slender little Mrs. Cooper, exquisitely neat and tidy, is escorted into court by her faithful husband. She bows and smiles to acquaintances and takes a seat beside her attorney just within the railed enclosure. Just outside the rail sits her husband—so near she can grasp his hand and whisper in his ear—as she does frequently.

Always at the opening of the court session Mrs. Cooper is apparently as serene as she is neat. It is hard for the audience to believe her a guilty woman. Soon the almost daily torture begins.

Apparently unmoved, she hears Thomas Leigh's coldly logical story of her infatuation and her crime, as the State conceives it. She cannot help observing the significant smiles and nods of women in the audience, which seem to say: "I told you as much." But she makes no sign—except to return the sympathetic pressure of her husband's hand over the rail.

Now there is a stir of expectation in court. Four men bring in something in a large square frame, followed by another with a rocking chair, and another with a door lifted from its hinges. The prosecution is arranging the space in front of the judge to represent that part of Mrs. Cooper's sitting room where young Northy was found dying with a bullet hole through his head.

The frame contains a section taken from the wall containing a curtain draped window and bearing splashes of significant red. There is a dark stain on the arm of the rocker. In setting this tragedy stage the attorneys for the State are clumsy. Mrs. Cooper's attorney assists them. She seems only interested. Then she smiles and goes to their assistance.

"No, the curtains were not draped that way," she says in matter-of-fact tones—while several jurors gasp at her self-possession. "They were this way," and she deftly pins up the folds.

She Buys a Revolver.

The stage is set—now for testimony. It is not yet the time for putting Mrs. Cooper on the witness stand, but a court stenographer is ready with the statement he took down when Deputy Sheriff Pinkham interrogated her soon after the shooting. He reads his verbatim notes, in which Mrs. Cooper tells how young Northy lived for a year and a half in her house, as a member of the family, while he learned the trade of blacksmithing in her husband's shop; how his infatuation for her grew, and how her sympathy and affection for him increased while she strove to make him see matters in the right light.

When she finds it necessary to send for the boy to tell him finally that he can come to see her no more except when others are present, she has grown to fear that he will harm her. She buys a revolver and makes a pocket in her skirt to hold it. He comes. He puts his head down on the table and weeps. She soothes him and they had a last talk.

Q. What did you say to him and he to you. A. I said, "Now, Charlie, this is to be our last talk on this subject." I told him he must not come any more. Of course, I knew and he knew that he wanted me and couldn't have me. Of course, that was the only trouble. There was no other reason why he couldn't come. Nothing improper at all, but simply that. He said, "All right." I said, "Charley, don't you know that no good can come from a wrong?" "Yes," he said, "I know we could never gain happiness." We kept on talking about this all the time.

Q. What happened next? A. As he got up to say good-bye and slipped his arm around me he felt the revolver and he quickly pulled it from my pocket. We both grabbed it and it must have gone off.

Q. You are sure it went off. A. Yes, sir, because I thought I was hit. I don't know how many times it went off.

Q. What did you do then? A. We wrestled for the revolver. Of course, he was stronger than I and in a minute he had it. Then I ran.

Q. What did you do after that? A. I rushed as fast as I could for my husband. I screamed, and he said that I said, "Charley has shot himself." I said either, "Charley is shot," or "is going to shoot himself," or that I was shot. I asked my husband to get a doctor.

The stenographic statement is rambling and full of repetitions. The audience is breathless. Mrs. Cooper grows whiter and whiter.

Now there are witnesses who describe how young Northy was found lying on the floor near the rocking chair. They describe the revolver bullet wound above the right temple, the blood on the wall, the blood on the arm of the rocker, the second bullet went through the door—the two empty chambers in Mrs. Cooper's weapon.

The Torture Begins.

Attorney Thomas Leigh is on his feet, to press home the contention that there was no struggle, that young Northy was sitting in the rocker; that Mrs. Cooper stood at a little distance, for the course of the bullet was downward and could not have ranged thus in a struggle.

He makes George Haddock—a young attorney on his staff—sit in the chair while he holds the revolver standing. He places Haddock on the floor near the chair, as the dying youth was found.

It is a tense moment. Mrs. Cooper shows the strain. She shudders and covers her eyes with her handkerchief.

But this is only the beginning of the torture. There are many witnesses. Day after day the gruesome stage settings occupies the space in front of the Judge—day after day there are additional details with ghastly illustrations.

One day when Mrs. Cooper's nerves are stretched to the breaking point the theory of the downward course of the bullet has fresh and ghastly illustrations. Dr. H. A. Sturtevant is on the stand—he made the autopsy. The eyes of Mrs. Cooper, though fascinated, are on every movement of the terrible County Attorney, Thomas Leigh. Suddenly from a place of concealment he takes and holds aloft a white and glistening human skull, with lower jaw and teeth intact. Mrs. Cooper seems turned to marble in her chair.

"Dr. Sturtevant, do you recognize this object?"

"Have you noted the course of the bullet?"

"I have. It entered above and a little back of the right temple, ranged downward and came out below and back of the left ear, lodging in muscles under the scalp."

"You say it ranged downward?"

"Necessarily."

"Could such a wound be made by a bullet from a revolver for the possession of which two persons were struggling when the shot was fired?"

Miss Marion Carey, whom Northy was engaged to marry.

"That would appear impossible."

The County Attorney holds the skull at the height of the head of a man sitting in the rocker, and asks:

"Now, doctor, could a person standing a pace or so distant so direct a bullet at a man's head in this position that it would have the range of the shot that pierced this skull?"

"That appears self-evident."

Thomas Leigh's illustrations are nothing if not thorough. He produces a slender white pointer and thrusts it into the hole in the skull so that an end protrudes on each side.

With a gasp that is half a shriek Mrs. Cooper collapses, with her head on her husband's arm. The attorney is unmoved. He knows that the jurors note the direction of the white pointer.

After adjournment it is the gossip about the court that Mrs. Cooper is prostrated, that she can bear up under no more torture. But the next day she comes to court as usual, neat as ever, again serene. Perhaps she thinks the worst must be over. Events of the next hour woefully disappoint her. There are grisly details of illustration yet to come of which she has not dreamed.

Witnesses favorable to the defence have testified that there were burnt-powder marks in young Northy's hair near the spot where the bullet entered. These marks would tend to support Mrs. Cooper's statement that the shot was fired while the boy's hand was on the revolver—while the muzzle was within a few inches of his head.

The Acme of Horrors.

Dr. Sturtevant is recalled to the witness stand. Thomas Leigh questions him. The County Atorney has a paper-wrapped parcel in his hand, which Mrs. Cooper seems to view with apprehension. In fact, she has grown quite white.

"Doctor," begins Mr. Leigh, "after the body of young Northy was exhumed did you examine the scalp closely?"

"I did."

"Did you observe any powder marks in the hair near the entrance of the wound?"

"I did not."

"Please relate the circumstances of your examination."

The witness tells how he removed the scalp, together with the ears, noted the direction of the hole through the skull, found the bullet lodged under the scalp in muscles back of the left ear and removed it with pincers.

Mrs. Cooper is swaying in her chair. Attorney Leigh begins to unwrap his paper parcel. The tortured woman divines what he has there. She covers her eyes and moans and suddenly falls in a heap—to be cared for by her husband and attendants.

The cause of justice is not delayed by her collapse. Mr. Leigh produces a human scalp, with ears attached, which Dr. Sturtevant identifies as that of Charles D. Northy, Jr. He fits it on the skull. Witness and jurors—some of the latter quite white about their jaws—examine the ghastly exhibit. No, there are no powder marks.

Perhaps, out of sympathy for Mrs. Cooper, who is barely able to hold up her head, the court takes an early adjournment.

Thus goes the trial in this torture chamber—and the State is not yet through with the frail victim, which it accuses and racks with mental anguish.

People who crowd the court room to witness the torture find little to interest them in the probable outcome. Is Mrs. Cooper guilty? Will she go free? That is a matter of small interest compared with the daily spectacle of a woman put to the torture—lawful torture in the interest of justice, but torture none the less.

PARIS dominates the styles of this season and Paquin dominates the styles of Paris.

Everything is Empire and to be paradoxically exact, what isn't Empire is called so.

On the boulevards of Paris only two weeks ago I saw women wearing street gowns in Empire lines; coats and jackets in Empire effects, and various evolutions of the little puffed Empire sleeves and long fitted armlets.

The American woman is cautious, in a measure, about adopting new fashions. The Frenchwoman plunges into them. On the whole, however, the American woman is better dressed, but I cannot say that her dressing is ever quite as complete as that of the Frenchwoman, who is made up to suit her costume from the topmost curl upon her coiffure to the point of her smart shoe.

Everything in dress being Empire it goes without saying that everything is entirely different from the styles that have obtained until now. We have different lines; different shapes; different trimmings and dress accessories, and we are absolutely different in dress from hat to shoe—from the modes of last season.

The Long Sylph-Shaped Waist.

Perhaps nothing demonstrates this so well as the fact that the smart Parisian shops are selling $6.50 corsets for 50 cents and higher priced ones at a corresponding reduction. All the lines of the figure—as it is made by a corset—have been changed. The lines begin very high up and extend way down below the hip. They are what might be termed sylphlike lines, full of curves and long undulations. These outlines carry both Empire and Princess dresses for the latter will be very much worn with short-waisted Empire effects.

We are not suddenly adopting the loose Empire gown, except in diaphanous materials. One gown I saw in Paris fits and has a loosely hung skirt that hides and yet suggests a slender waist line. It is a most baffling gown to make, for unless hung with the highest degree of art it merely looks like an ill-fitting Princess.

THE NEW LACE NIGHT CAP.

The Leather-Bowed "Laceless" -Calf skin Shoe Must Now Be Worn in Color to Match the Gown.

What I noticed particularly in Paris were the new little pointed trains on the gowns for this season. They sharpened out in quite a point—they were so narrow—and cling about the feet.

Among other striking things are the new skirt builds. I saw skirts nearly all plain—except for elaborate evening gowns—and they were not nearly so wide as those we have here, and all had a tendency to cling about the feet, besides clinging very positively about the hips. Practically all the new skirts fit over the hips; they are all long and nearly all trained with the narrow, pointed train instead of the broad sweeping ones we have over here. Very little, if any, trimming is used upon skirts for day wear.

I was almost startled by seeing how sleeves have shrunk upward in Paris. Instead of three-quarters they now have elbow sleeves and even shorter lengths for day wear, while evening sleeves are just little puffs or bits of fancy trimming about the top of the arm. Often mere wisps of tulle furnish all the sleeve necessary, with outstanding ends at the back of the arm.

Yellow the Dominant New Color.

Yellow is the new smart color. I predicted this some weeks ago, since Paris styles have their forecasts, but in Paris everything is yellow. The tints I saw are the loveliest that art can produce and some are so soft that yellow seems too pronounced a name for them.

Instead of white gloves we will wear yellow ones, or pale tans in such cases as demand a glove different from the gown. Usually gloves match the gowns, but where they do not, some form of yellow will be used.

Another Parisian fancy that greatly impressed me is to have gloves, shoes, hat, belt, hosiery and a touch of trimming in the bodice to match each other and contrast with the gown worn. Parasols, on the contrary, match the dress.

We will all be wearing the new Paris things in the course of a very few days. Easter will see us arrayed in our tiny hats or mushroom shapes; in colored shoes, yellow gloves and all the paraphernalia which dressmakers have been bringing home from Paris by shiploads.

When I say that all the modistes of Paris are making Empire costumes I must except Callot. This house has its own lines to which it clings as tenaciously as do all the other European houses to the lines established by Paquin. This being the case, one may have some variety in the cut of one's gown.

People have tired of black and white combinations, and in Paris I notice that the all-black dress has come into vogue again. It is very smart, indeed, and has even its stock and chemisette of black lace. In this connection Chantilly is much used, as it is very light and delicate in texture and effect.

Besides the all-black gown Paris has set its stamp of approval upon the trimming of gowns with braids and embroideries of their own color. Paris swirled a network of gold and silver mesh over its fashions not so many weeks since and just as quickly has unraveled the gilt and silver threads from its new modes and pronounced them passe. We all bow to the dictum of Paris, and gold and silver trimmings will not be nearly so stylish as they have been in the months past, while we will revel in self-toned embroideries and the mazy twirls and parallels of braid.

I noticed that in Paris chiffon is more fashionable than it has ever been, and that is saying a great deal. Perhaps this is due to the revival of Empire styles, for diaphanous stuffs, gauzes and tissues of all sorts were very much in vogue a hundred years ago. We will wear them again, but, let me hasten to assure you, not quite as they were worn in Josephine's time. We will have many more breadths of the material as well as more length and—I may add—greater height.

With the revival of these gauzy materials scarfs will be immensely popular. In paintings of that period floating scarfs are shown in profusion. There is always something feminine, soft and coquettish about the draping of a scarf, and these are becoming to young and old. They soften the lines of an old face and serve as a filmy frame to the bloom of a young one. Paris decrees scarfs of lace and tissue and chiffon and everything that is airy and delicate to drape about the head and throat.

Embroidered chiffon is more chic than the plain variety in Paris and, I may add, more expensive there as elsewhere. We may, however, introduce portions of embroidered chiffon into a gown of the plain fabric and have just as charming results as though the whole gown were embroidered.

Shoes Must Match Gown.

One thing that Paris very positively asserts is that our shoes must match our gowns or contrast with them in such a manner as to be harmonious. If the gown is mauve the shoe must be mauve, or it may be of a contrasting tint, provided the hat, stockings and some of the bodice trimming are of the color of the shoe.

We are always finding charming novelties in the gay French capital, and nothing is quite so marked as the combination of sharply contrasting colors with white. A white, yellow or tan colored dress will be seen with shoes, hose, hat, trimming and sometimes belt of brown. This brown note in a white costume or one of pale yellow is very marked. Light mauve will have all these accessories of deep violet or of some other color that contrasts well with the shade of mauve employed in the gown.

Perhaps the most peculiar feature of the season's fashions is the fact that all sorts of coats will be worn. Every year we have had some one dominant style of coat, or two, at most. This year the Parisian woman is going to wear pretty much any kind of coat she pleases, provided the sleeves are short.

I want to tell you one very important item of Paris news: All sleeves will be short. The very smart ones will reach to the elbow and the "second best" ones will be three-quarter length, but none of the new sleeves will be long. Of course, to all rules there are exceptions. There are outing and wet weather costumes whose nature necessitates sleeves of usual length, but these costumes all come under the head of special styles, and are not to be confounded with general styles that fit nearly all varieties of gowns.

As to sizes, sleeves will be slightly full; very short and puffed, or fitted quite closely to the arm. The fitted sleeve is most chic, but is a dress rather than a coat sleeve.

In the way of smart coats there are long and short, loose, partly fitted and tight coats, with a general fancy for the short Eton and abbreviated bolero. These conform to the high-waisted gowns and give an Empire effect to the dresses with which they are worn.

Cunning Little Empire Sleeves.

The sleeve is by no means the dominant feature in a Paris costume, but it is none the less important. Every good courturier endeavors to get new effects in simple lines for the new sleeves. These effects are to be found in the cuffs, as a rule, since there is little scope for anything but small pleats and gathers in the tops of the new short sleeves. All manner of pretty ideas may be introduced in a sleeve cuff, or in the sleeve itself, if it be a dressy one. There are trimmings of buttons and braids, bows and buckles, appliques and other skillful arrangements which may be set on a sleeve by the artistic needlewoman. Since nothing looks worse than an overtrimmed sleeve, I would advise the woman with few ideas to adhere to the simplest form of sleeve possible.

In fitted sleeves some fetching effects in the mousquetaire are introduced, and every one knows how becoming this form of sleeve is to the arm.

I saw all sorts of novelties in bracelets to add to the beauty of a rounded arm or attract attention to the angles of the other sort, now that we have all to own up to the sort of arms we carry. In Paris the novel bracelets of velvet and ribbon, lace and flowers, are treated to a shrug of the shoulders. Translated into American, that means that the well-gowned woman would not think of wearing them any more than she would be seen wearing gloves decorated with bead embroidery and lace applique. The smart bracelet of the season is made of jewels. We may wear as many jeweled bracelets as we care to and no comment will be made upon our dress, but we will not wear anything else—if we would be smart.

Such a flood of embroidered and beaded gloves are suddenly making their appearance that I think it only prudent to say that the fashionable Parisienne wears none of these. Lots of people enjoy novelties, but the woman who endeavors to be strictly correct in dress will wear a plain glove. Its color will be its greatest novelty and, considering what these colors are at present we may assure ourselves that the correctly gowned woman will have her hands full selecting these with due discrimination.

Why Children Sometimes Appear to Be "Bad."

A LARGE amount of so-called naughtiness among children may be accounted for upon grounds which quite exclude the desirability of punishment for its correction, says a writer in the London Lancet. It may be due to the fact that the child has had insufficient sleep or is overtired after a long day's excitement.

Children may be restless or restive as the direct result of being under-tired; they may have been confined at home for the whole day owing to the inclemency of the weather, and as a consequence the only apparent outlet for their restrained physical energy is found by annoying those who have charge of them.

There are also some cases in which an incipient physical or mental disorder may manifest itself by symptoms which very strongly resemble wilful perversity unless the possibility of the onset of an illness is borne in mind. It is notorious that ill-timed punishment in these cases at times has precipitated a severe attack. Stuttering and shyness are also likely to be aggravated by being noticed. A deaf child is often inattentive and has been occasionally classed among the mentally defective.

It has been said that many children are punished for the faults of their teachers; this is undoubtedly true when such faults exhibit themselves as a continually close atmosphere in the schoolroom or a prolonged strained and cramped attitude of the pupil's body while he is seated at work. Frequent periods of exercise in the open air are essential in order to arouse the circulation and to stimulate the mind, if a mischievous disposition is to be combated.

——WOULDN'T THAT JAR YOU, and make you swear you'd let liquor alone?

A True Story in Real Life and the Moral It Teaches

If you had worked hard on a farm up in Dicksville, Maine, and saved a few thousand dollars (as Mr. C. M. Schofield did)—

—and invested it in a mine (as Mr. Schofield did) in Prescott, Arizona, that really turned out to be a money-maker—

—and you had gone way out to Prescott to take charge of the property and be superintendent (as Mr. Schofield was)—

—and you were so overjoyed at the big fortune that was in sight that you started on a spree (as Schofield did)—

—and you kept drinking and spending money like a nabob until you wound up in Los Angeles, Cal. (which Schofield did)—

—and got to buying $10 cigars and handed over $20,000 of your mining stock to a pretty restaurant cashier (as Schofield really did)—

—and then woke up with your money gone, mining stock all thrown away and a heap of debts (which Schofield did)—

Wouldn't that JAR you, and make you swear you'd let liquor alone?

Mr. C. M. Schofield is wiser than he was, and has resolved to be not only a wiser, but a better man. Especially has he resolved to let liquor alone.

Wisdom and these commendable resolutions came to Mr. Schofield in "the cold gray dawn of the morning after," when he awoke to find himself stretched on a narrow cot in the city jail of Los Angeles, Cal.

And he a heavy stockholder in a mining company that had "struck it rich" in Arizona! He, stockholder and officer of the Newbury Mining Company, in jail, as footsore and unkempt as any Weary Waggles, with a deep, dark blank in his memory, which detectives and sympathetic personal friends were trying to bridge with such astonishing information as:

"You insisted on paying $10 each for five-cent cigars."

"When you had burnt your wad you began writing checks."

"The trouble is that some of the banks had never heard of you."

Its hero hails from Dicksville, Me., where Mr. Schofield is still highly respected. Up in Maine, from boyhood until recently, he had followed the plough, driven home the cows and milked them, sowed, cultivated and harvested from morn till dewy eve.

Prosperity and a snug bank account were the reward of his industry and sobriety. Never did he indulge in even such mild rural dissipations as going to Boston or New York to see the sights and pick up a gold brick or two. He was proof against the wiles of the lightning-rod man and the green goods circulars.

Invested in a Hole in the Ground.

Yet one day came a tempter who could not be resisted. Out in Arizona, near Prescott, there was a hole in the ground. The hole belonged to the Newbury Mining Company. The officers offered to let Mr. Schofield into that hole right at the bottom, where the rocks were flecked with bright yellow. They needed Mr. Schofield's bank surplus to pay men and machinery to bring those yellow specks to the surface.

"You can be superintendent of the mine," they told him. And they showed him mining stock certificates so beautifully engraved that Mr. Schofield could hardly get his money out of the bank quick enough.

When Mr. Schofield's farmer neighbors heard of it they laughed and slapped their thighs. Hadn't they bought gold bricks? Didn't they know?

And when Mr. Schofield sold three milch cows to get money for a ticket to Prescott in order to assume his duties as superintendent of "that there hole in the ground," his neighbors sincerely pitied him.

There was no throwing away money on that trip out to Prescott. Mr. Schofield travelled modestly. He was perfectly sober then, as he always had been, and was full of plans about his career as mining superintendent and capitalist. He would yet see those smart farmers back in Maine laughing out of the other side of their mouths.

Arriving in Prescott he heard things that made his heart beat faster. There was a demand for stock in his company. He met men who were quite pressing in their offers of a considerable advance over what he had paid. Then he heard rumors that his mine was turning out a regular bonanza.

Being still perfectly sober, Mr. Schofield declined to sell any of his stock. He hurried out to the mine and found his "hole in the ground" a scene of intense activity. The money he had paid for his stock had been promptly used in operating expenses. Ore was being hauled to the surface, mills were crushing it, stamps were stamping it, chemicals were separating the yellow flecks from the bits of rock, and rich ingots were awaiting shipment.

The acting superintendent officiated at a "clean up" for Mr. Schofield's benefit. With his own eyes he saw the bowels of the earth yielding up untold wealth for him. Mr. Schofield's nerves began to dance jigs. Painfully and slowly he had wrung scattering dollars out of the rocky soil of Maine. That was different. Now he was getting rich while he slept. He felt like dancing and whooping like a savage.

Must Have a High Old Time.

How was he going to spend all that money? He must have some fun, of course—a glorious, high old time—something he had never had and never expected to have. Everything was going on all right at the mine. They knew all about it, while he was as innocent of mining as a newborn babe.

There was money in the treasury—money that had been taken out of that hole in the ground. Why, certainly, if Mr. Schofield wished to take a little trip out to the coast before assuming his duties at the mine, that was quite proper. Would a couple of thousand dollars fix him up?

A couple of thousand dollars just for a week of fun! But there was the money—a pretty little stack of yellowbacks. Whoop! Mr. Schofield was a changed man. He was off for his first spree, and he wouldn't come back till the last dollar was gone.

It was dull over in Venice and Santa Monica, Cal. The inhabitants had developed an industrious streak, and few strangers were about. The barrooms were empty—"nothin' doin'," nothing at all in Venice and Santa Monica.

But that was before C. M. Schofield concluded to get off the train there and begin his celebration. Then, quite suddenly, the two towns woke up. The Maine farmer turned suddenly mining capitalist had already found means to lay a broad foundation for anticipated festivities, and was not at all bashful.

"Step up, gents, it's all on me"—that was the burden of his song in every saloon he entered. "Don't be bashful. Everything goes. Take down the ceiling and raise the limit. Here's the yellowbacks that pays. All out of my hole in the ground over in Arizona—and plenty more where that came from. Step up, gents!"

Did they step up? Well! From hotel to saloon, from saloon to hotel, up and down all the streets, the thirsty procession grew till the air was thick with "yellowbacks."

"Plum out of change," said a cigar man, when Mr. Schofield discovered that money could be smoked.

"Who asked for change?" demanded the man from Maine, throwing down five new yellow ones, and, passing out of a box of "Stoker's Delight" ten specimens to himself and guests. "When I'm celebratin' cigars are worth ten dollars apiece. Whoop! Come on, boys—wherah—hic—wherah next water tank?"

Venice and Santa Monica were no longer dull. From Thursday till Monday Mr. Schofield devoted himself tirelessly to slaking the thirst of the inhabitants, while his own seemed to increase in spite of all his efforts.

And Then Signed Checks.

He had yellowbacks in all his pockets. If, perchance, he found a pocket empty he would yell for the proprietor.

"Here, you old goat, bring a blank check and pen and ink. I'm Schofield. You boys all know me. I've got a hole in the ground over in Ari—hic—zona that spouts gold by the hogshead."

"Here, cash this—nothing smaller'n twenties. And—hic—bring champagne. Bring it in a wash tub. Hear me shoutin'?"

By Monday it begins to dawn upon the public purveyors of festive liquids in Santa Monica and Venice that, in his present state, Mr. Schofield ought not to sign any more checks. They like, indeed, they honor him; but they advise against getting writer's cramp, which will interfere with his duties as superintendent out at the mine.

Finding a pocket with a few overlooked yellowbacks in it, he resolves on a genial windup of his celebration and leads the way, with half a dozen faithful henchmen, to the Cafe Venice for a late supper. The French proprietor presents a menu card—he will not suffer so distinguished a man as Mr. Schofield to be served by an ordinary waiter. Schofield waves it aside.

"Bring the best in the house. Thish is regardlish of—hic—regardlish of expensh. And—hic—rush the cocktails."

The proprietor resolves to make hay while the sun shines. He introduces Mr. Schofield to bottles of sparkling liquid with a delicate amber tint, which he translates from the wine list as "the widow." Mr. Schofield tastes, drinks deeply, and announces that he would not be guilty of drinking "the widow" for less than one yellowback per bottle.

Pretty Cashier Gets $20,000.

"Fill 'em up, boys," he says. "Heresh—hic—heresh to 'the widow.' Long may she—hic—long may she wave!"

Mr. Schofield has exhibited his remaining wealth in currency. The prudent proprietor sees that the dinner does not outstrip it. At length the host of the occasion gets his bill and insists on personal payment at the cashier's desk, above which he has now and then caught a glimpse of a charming face. He has felt momentary remorse over the fact that, thus far, he has been guilty of neglecting the fair sex.

At a closer view he is dazzled by the beauty of Mrs. Emeline Bruder, the beautiful Viennese, who assists her husband in the management of the cafe. She is smiling, and her smile is maddening. Before a shrine so charming he feels that he must make some sort of offering.

"Er—er, excuse me, Miss," he blunders, "we've had a great time. You've treated us right. I'm going to make you a present."

"Oh, Monsieur," she says, smiling more bewitchingly than ever, "you see I have not ze plaisir of ze introduction"——

But the infatuated man from Maine has taken from his inside pocket certificates of stock in his mine worth $20,000 and spread them out before her. At his demand she dips a pen and hands it to him. Quickly he indorses the certificates over to her and thrusts them into her hands. She laughs again, and turns to other customers. Mr. Schofield looks for another smile, for himself alone, but is disappointed.

His companions have gone—he is alone. He feels in his pockets; there are only a few dollars which he had overlooked. Feeling dazed, he gropes his way out into the dark street, and walks and walks. He does not know which way he is walking.

He has strange visions. Sometimes he is driving home the cows on the farm, or following the plough. It is dusk—no, it is dawn, for it grows lighter. Still he walks, aimlessly, trying to remember something. He sees the sun shining, knows he is on some road strange to him; but there is a blank in his memory. His feet feel sore.

As he walks he finds himself in a city street and feels his throat is parched. There is money in his hand and a glass at his lips. He is no longer walking——

His head seems clearer; he recollects that he has lately been rudely handled. Where is he? A man looks through iron bars and tells him:

"You are in the city jail of Los Angeles. You signed and cashed checks in Venice that were not good. But you have friends, and they are here to see you."

By the time you read this, probably Mr. Schofield's friends will have helped him pacify the holders of those bad checks—perhaps regain from the pretty cashier those valuable certificates.

Certainly Mr. Schofield will have resolved a hundred times to go on no more sprees—to leave liquor alone.

C. M. Schofield.

Some Good and Valuable Hints for Housekeepers.

All articles dyed with aniline colors, if faded from exposure to light will look as bright as ever after being sponged with chloroform.

Potato water is a thing that the most economical housewife throws away; yet it has its use. After scraping the potatoes, allow the water to settle, and then strain it. This liquid sponges dirt out of silk.

An inexpensive way of cleaning white fur is to get two pennyworth of clean sawdust from a carpenter, and a pint of benzoline; rub well into the fur, and throw the sawdust away as it becomes dirty. When the fur looks clean, rub with dry sawdust, hang over a line and beat with a cane. If possible, work out of doors on account of the benzoline.

To properly air a room, open the window at the top and bottom. The reason for this is to allow impure air, which always rises, to escape at the top, while the cool, fresh air will come in at the bottom from outside.

Coffee is a fairly good air purifier. A little burnt on the coals will purify a sick room and abolish bad smells. Many physicians think highly of the bracing effects of coffee, taken before they visit cases of infectious diseases.

A celebrated oculist recommends in all cases where dirt, lime or sparks get into the eyes, that the sufferer have pure olive oil poured in until everything of a hurtful nature is removed. The remedy is quite painless, and never fails to remove all foreign substances.

Cold cream is a most useful ointment to always have in the house. A very simple way of making it is to put in a basin one pound of lard, and fill with boiling water. When cold, and the lard has risen to the top, take it off and repeat the process. When again cold, whisk it up with a paper-knife till of perfectly smooth cream, and add enough essence of lemon to give it a perfume.

In Winter a houseworker often has great difficulty in keeping her hands soft and white. Unless some soothing lotion is used, they will surely become chapped, especially if one does any heavy housework. A good lotion is made of two parts of rosewater, two parts of glycerine, and one part of citric acid. Vaseline is, of course, good for chapped hands, but care must be taken that it is not rubbed on the lips, for it will produce superfluous hair. Cold cream, too, is said to do this, and should, therefore, be used with caution.

All the water used for washing must be soft, otherwise the clothes cannot be clean. The best way of softening hard water, when no other can be obtained, is to mix with it a large quantity of lye, in the proportion of one gallon of lye to three or four of water, or to stir into it a little soda, which last must be sparingly used, or it will injure the clothes by making them so tender that they soon go to pieces.

White or light kid gloves may be cleaned at home with very little trouble. Rub the gloves first of all with cream of tartar, leave them for an hour, then rub them with Fuller's earth and powdered alum mixed in equal portions. Leave the gloves again until the next day, when they must be brushed until all the powder is removed. The next process is to rub them with oatmeal, to which a little powdered whiting has been added. Wipe all this off with a dry cloth, and the gloves are ready to be worn again.

IT is a curious fact that withi a fortnight the "Smart Set" of the American world o fashionable society has bee subjected to a most relentles attack from four quite different directions—a clergyman, a society woma and authoress, a distinguished docto jurist and a celebrated editor and student of social economics in France.

1 ---Rev. Madison C. Peters Personally Visits the Fashionable Resorts of High Society and Declares that the Deplorable Increase of Hard Drinking Among American Women Threatens the Nation.

By MADISON C. PETERS,

"HISTORY is philosophy teaching by example." If we accept this as a true statement, then the American people should take warning from the plain lesson taught by the republics of history, namely, that luxury, extravagance and immorality consequent upon vast wealth in the hands of the few, is the sure forerunner of national decay. The evil of which I purpose to write is committed by the men as well as by the women, but such is the power of women's influence, if exerted on the right side, they would soon correct these evils on the man's side.

I am fully aware that I am treading on delicate ground, because of the prevalence of a false gallantry which demands that whenever men speak of women they should offer fulsome praise, on pain of being condemned as lacking in calvalry. There is a disposition to look upon men as women's natural enemies, and some women at least look with distrust upon the man who dares to be frank in the utterance of any opinion that may be unfavorable to women. I vie with any man in my regard for all that is beautiful and good in woman. I know full well that there are those who impute to women everything that goes wrong, while their silent but diligent exertion to make everything go right, is unobserved. I can truthfully say that my only desire is to do good to those who read what I write.

I am especially concerned about the young women. The bright days of youth, when the heart is tender and smiles and tears so quickly chase each other, must have their hours of reflection and sober thought. The good seeds of virtue must be then planted. If I speak strongly it is because I am stirred deeply. My appeal is especially to women, because we must look to the women to elevate the tone of public sentiment and advance the cause of morality. The lives of men are influenced by the teachings which they receive from, and the example that is set them by, the women. The women are the law-givers, men are the subjects. Women fix the standard of morality.

Man's ideal of what woman ought to be is based upon his conception of what she normally is—better than himself. I do not believe in the dual standard of morality, but if the world looks upon sin as blacker in woman than in man, it is simply because she is by nature purer and has farther to fall. If men condemn sin in the woman more than in the man, they are in that very condemnation paying woman the highest and truest compliment.

Mrs. "Jack" Wilmerding, Niece of the Vanderbilts, Who Is a Hopeless Dipsomaniac and Illustrates What Dr. Peters Says.

"JUST A DROP 'MORE."

Rev. Madison C. Peters.

She Is Purer and Has Farther to Fall.

I wish to speak of the alarmingly increasing habit of drink among our American women. So well known is this fact that it has become a matter of common observation, that shocked us ten years ago, are now passed by without comment.

I have seen again and again in New York, in the Waldorf, the Astor, Sherry's and Shanley's, what may be seen nightly in scores of cafes, women drinking cocktails, whiskey straight, wines of all kinds—women drinking as freely and as frequently as the men. I have had my own observations confirmed by sending specially qualified and truthful men and women to report their observations to me.

So common is the drinking habit that the situation is often a source of embarrassment to the woman who does not drink. The disastrous results of tippling among females are already too well known to the physicians, and experience shows that while men who drink often reform, women who become victims to drink are more intractable to reformation.

A recent editorial in a Paris paper, speaking of our cocktail habit, declares that we are breeding a race of degenerates. The records of the Police Department of New York City for 1905, show that there were arrested for drunkenness 11,085 persons, of whom 10,080 were women. A distinguished physician wrote to me a few days ago to "not for an instant retreat from your statements. We physicians know that they are lamentably true, and that the crime for such it is, is growing with awful rapidity. We have this problem to fight in many instances in the care of the sick.

The fashion that encourages women inebriates among the rich of America presents a deplorable outlook for the future of the republic. History plainly enforces the lesson that the last symptom of national decline is always found in womanly folly. Corruption may spread far and wide and do much harm in the community, but there is hope for both the Church and the State so long as the wives and mothers, the daughters and sisters retain their moral integrity. When that is gone, all is gone. Purity and worth find their last retreat in the woman, and if driven thence, they are doomed to die, and with them perish the prospects of the land.

As the customs of the privileged are copied by other classes, the evils resulting from this state of affairs are widespread and degrading.

My appeal is to every woman who loves her kind, to discourage social drinking and help save the women of the nation from the curse of drunkenness. Man's own selfish desire is the chief factor in dragging women down from the pedestal upon which he himself has placed her, yet strangely inconsistent as it may seem, the man will idolize the woman who resists the temptation.

The drink is dangerous enough for men, to women it is especially dangerous. No one will dispute that the lack of moral balance and effective will produced in woman by drink are more marked than in the man. It so undermines her will power and blunts her sense of moral responsibility, that it is a well known fact that the virtue of the woman with the drink habit is always in danger. Woman's emotional organization being so much more susceptible than that of the man, the special danger of drink to the woman can easily be understood.

I do not believe that the drinking of a glass of wine per se is a sin, and the woman who drinks moderately is not necessarily a sinner above all other women. The Scriptural interpretation of drunkenness implies a ruling passion, a degrading slavery and the power that has gained the mastery, which is superior to the woman herself.

Some women, because of the peculiarity of their organism, are not sensibly affected by a moderate use of drink; that they are not drunkards is perhaps due to their temperament, and the credit is due to nature and not to the women.

A distinguished English lawyer in a recent lecture before the Medical Legal Society of London, contended that the amount of drink which a man consumes does not determine the question at what precise stage of intoxication a man may be considered drunk. He says, for instance, that after injury to the health, or an attack of sun stroke, and in certain cases, of epilepsy, a single glass of beer will convert an ordinarily quiet individual into a howling, fighting maniac, and yet the magistrate who punishes the offender repentant, has often consumed more alcohol with his luncheon than the man or woman before him.

Safety Only in Total Abstinence.

I believe that wines and liquors have their legitimate uses and may be used beneficially, yet the fact remains that while many moderate drinkers do not become confirmed inebriates, all confirmed drunkards were once moderate drinkers, hence comes the law of absolute safety for all—in total abstinence. If the better classes of society were to discontinue the moderate use of drinks they would diminish both the habit and the evil of intemperance. Fashion is only another term for public sentiment, and if the higher classes of society, or even our church people, were to discontinue the moderate use of drink, the effect would be to render drinking unfashionable.

The moral character of the men is the moral character of the nation, and the one can be elevated only by the elevation of the other. But we all know that the women give the character to the men. If women mix the drink, men will not refuse to take it. If you give men the impression that you think men are better company when their tongues are loosened by drink and treat intemperance as a joke, men will regard dissipation as a pardonable fault. If you are horrified because some poor fellow, whose first step in folly was taken under your direction, but who is now by drunkenness made unfit for your society, your inconsistency will plainly appear and men will see that it is not so much the drinking habit that is condemned as its vulgarity and grossness.

Will you mothers place temptation in the way of your son? Will you sisters make virtue difficult to your brother? Will you young women, who would place your keeping in the hands of him whom you love, place in his hand the poison which may find its way to his heart? Will you wives continue to surround your husbands with snares, so skillfully covered that they may fall into them almost unawares? Remember the prayer, "Lead us not into temptation," and let not woman be the tempter.

A young woman in a New York police court, standing before the Judge, disillusioned, weary and worn by wretchedness and woe, in telling the story of her husband's brutality and neglect, among other things, said:

"I knew my husband drank before I married him, and I would like to tell any girl if she thinks she can reform a man by marrying him, she is mistaken, and had better hang herself."

There are eighteen thousand wife desertions every year in Chicago, 5,825 in Philadelphia last year, while the average number of desertions in New York is upward of 8,000 a year, and, according to the testimony of the Police Magistrates, the cause at the bottom in the majority of cases is drink.

The records of the Police Courts throughout the land point out how foolhardy is the act to marry a man to mend him or reform him. Court records show that marriage as a step to a man's reform has almost invariably resulted in failure. It is all nonsense to say that love is blind—blind to the faults of the one loved. If the man were not reformed he would be reformed. If a man will not reform to please his sweetheart the chances are against his doing so to please his wife. The martyr spirit seldom brings the martyr's reward.

I know silly young women imagine that a little wickedness is a sort of spice in a young man's life. Mark my words, you will find those habits after the wedding day to be anything but pleasant spice. Love is not only blind, but deaf and dumb in the case of the woman who marries a man to reform him. The risks are great enough for any woman who marries a man who does not need reforming. But what if the man reforms before marriage? Put him on probation two years to prove that the reformation is genuine.

"Society women have more than once been carried out of fashionable restaurants, or, resisting, have made a scene on the pavement until forced into their carriages."

3 ---Dr. Emil Reich, the Distinguished British Essayist, Points Out that American Women Will Destroy the Nation, as Spartan Women Destroyed Greece.

By DR. EMIL REICH,

The Distinguished British Essayist.

NATIONS differ in nothing so much as in their women. The French, English or American woman is easily distinguishable. The American woman is totally different from the English woman. So is the French woman, though the difference in this case is not so intense; so is the German woman; so is the woman of Italy. The American woman, while differing from all her European sisters of today, bears a marked resemblance to the woman of ancient Sparta. The Spartans resembled the present-day Americans; the Athenians were like the English.

I do not blame, I do not praise; I only say, and I say emphatically, that the American woman is not womanly; she is not a woman. The whole of the United States is under petticoat government, and man is practically non-existent.

In America woman commands man. Man does not count there. The last man that came to America was Christopher Columbus. To-day man has no existence; he does not talk in the drawing room, but is a dummy. The woman lives one life, the man another, and they are totally distinct from each other."

The Best Complexion in the World.

She is as new as a man born to-day is new; she is made up of restlessness and fidgetiness long before she is twenty-five. But she is very beautiful; she has the best complexion in the world—better than that of any European woman. She is also well built and handsome. You see fine specimens of the American woman in Kentucky and Massachusetts.

A few miles distant from the Athens of old—what would be but a short railway journey in these days—lay Sparta. The Spartans were imperialists, and they wanted to conquer the whole of Greece. The Spartan woman, as I have remarked, was like the American woman of to-day. She never dreamt of lovers; her idea was nothing less than conquering man; she never thought of him as more than a fellow athlete.

These women wrestled with the men in a state of nudity. There was no womanhood in them, no more than in so many sticks. The Athenians said that they were very fine, but there was nothing feminine about them. They were far richer, too, than the men, for the men went to the wars and died, and the women thus became rich. Aristotle said that the Spartan woman was sure to ruin Sparta very quickly. And so she did, for we find Sparta trying to rule Greece in the fourth century B. C.; in the third century she was sinking; in the second century she had ceased to exist.

Modern British men and women, what are they? That is what I want to bring out. A nation can never survive with women of the Spartan type, which, as I have told you, is the American woman of to-day. The Romans were the same, and they ruined their empire. They had one idea, an all-absorbing idea which killed all ideas of religion, of art, of everything—the idea of empire. They spent their entire life in that one absorbing pursuit—domination; in such a country woman has no place.

In 1903 there appeared in Vienna a book which at once raised a sensation among serious students, as well as among men and women of the world. It was an extraordinary book. The writer was manifestly in deep and passionate earnest about what he said, and he said it with an incisiveness and brilliancy that could not but come from long study and sincere belief in the "truth" revealed to him.

At the same time, the book was, in its way, the most subversive book ever written on the subject of Woman. On a basis of carefully prepared scientific premises, taken, it would appear, from the whole range of modern biology, physiology, psychology and philosophy, the author proceeds to an arraignment and condemnation of woman such as has never been ventured upon by the greatest of woman haters among men.

In a tone of detached tranquility, yet with a burning hatred of and contempt for woman, Otto Weininger dissects and dismembers every particle of the conventional or traditional notion of woman. He comes to the general conclusion that woman has no soul at all.

"Women," Weininger says (p. 286 of the English edition, newly published by Heinemann)—"Women have no existence and no essence; they are not, they are nothing. Woman has no share in anthological reality, no relation in the (Kantian) thing-in-itself, which, in the deepest interpretation is the absolute, is God. Man in his highest form, the genius, has such a relation, and for him the absolute is either the conception of the highest worth of existence, in which case he is a philosopher; or it is the wonderful fairyland of dreams, the kingdom of absolute beauty, and then he is an artist. . . . Woman has no relation to the idea; she neither affirms nor denies it; she is neither moral nor anti-moral; mathematically speaking, she has no sign, she is purposeless, neither good nor bad, neither angel nor devil; she is as non-moral as she is non-logical. But all existence is moral and logical existence. So woman has no existence."

Although he, unlike Mr. Nordau, is fully aware that biology alone will never solve the mystery of character, individuality, and similar problems of the human soul, yet he does not even surmise that he missed the whole point in his study of woman by his complete ignorance of the various types of womanhood. For Weininger there is only one type of woman—Woman. Fortunately for all concerned, there is no woman indeed, as Weininger says, but there are women, or women in a number of essentially different types. What the author knew was the woman of Vienna.

As men in Vienna, with their unmistakable effiminacy of dress, speech and manners, are radically different from Englishmen or Frenchmen, so are Viennese women different from women in France, England or America.

Why should not the race combine the good we have in all these types of women; in fact, make its women more perfect? They would then be able to show the world something that has never been seen; not quite Athens, perhaps, but certainly not Sparta, much less America.

4---E. Charles, in the Paris Gil Blas, Foresees a Rapid Decline of the United States Because of the "Money Mania" and the "Degenerating Cocktail Habit."

By ERNEST CHARLES,
In the Paris Gil Blas.

WE French people know always little enough, and that little as illy as may be, of the real true life of foreign nations. It is not that we have the least disdain in the attitude; the Frenchman, born a critic, is a critic only of his own France. He admires, he admires readily all other countries. He believes everything that he has been told about them; everything, be it understood, of course, that is favorable. If any one should by chance happen to report to him anything at all unfavorable he will examine it, he will dispute it, he will equivocate, and he will conclude that the whole thing has been grossly exaggerated.

Truth, however, little by little forces itself upon us. It makes itself felt even among those who care nothing about it. It carries everything before it. It triumphs.

And I should not be surprised if the moment had come—at last!—and that we have a very exact idea of one foreign country at least, the United States.

The most trivial incidents are sometimes the means of the most important revelations. Never I say, has there been more completely exposed to the light the social barbarism, or, if you like it better, the primitive society of the United States than by the recent carnivalesque manifestations attending the marriage of Miss Alice Roosevelt with a Yankee notable.

In France a young woman of the bourgeoisie, or of the aristocracy of the rich, who the day before, or the day itself of her marriage and the day after even, delivered herself up to the noisy, common clamor to which the brilliant young savage of the White House complacently lent herself as a spectacle in France, I affirm, this young lady would be despised and jeered at by the whole country.

Our own taste has perhaps been perverted to agitation over certain Franco-American marriages, but we still have left some decorous sentiment, which is in fact civilization.

This civilization, which we are inclined to believe is a force among us and among all our qualities as perhaps the most precious of all this civilization is, we are bound to believe, utterly lacking [illegible] curious inhabitants of the United States.

As for myself, I am constrained to think that these [illegible] braggarts of money, who battle among themselves in the States, have approached as near to civilization as it is possible for them, and that now they have returned again, and for a long time, into the intellectual, moral and social barbarism from which they have never really emerged. Perhaps after some centuries they will strive again by new efforts, and better disciplined, to make themselves free from [illegible] and then, very late, end by learning to discern the superiority of [illegible] and the beauty in dignified [illegible]

I have just read a book which, it is true, is not written by one of the [illegible] of our time, neither is it to be extolled as a model of style, but which nevertheless has given us immense pleasure. Moreover [illegible] a very close observation of [illegible] This book has for its title, "The Inside of the United States," and for its author M. Georges Moreau.

I concur indeed with M. Moreau that the United States are still on the march of progress. They are in the high noon of industrial prosperity and commercial ascendancy, [illegible] mentally. They will become men yet a little more complete. Their [illegible], which has had no time yet for its refinement, has expanded a little. But they have—how shall I say it?—they have "the big head," and imagine too readily that the Yankee is naturally a superior being and that the Yankee is marked by destiny to eventually become the dominator of the universe.

Moreover, the more the United States become populated the more will the disproportions which exist between the two worlds become less. I mean the disproportions favorable to the United States.

In the first place there is the "social question," which must come to an issue some day soon in the States, and we across the water will be called to watch some very curious turning of things upside down. Then, too, as the population increases so must the increase of production. To preserve the same absolute values, the country must direct to the powers an always increasing quantity of products. In other words, if the sales to foreign markets should remain stationary the quantity sold must be divided among a greater number of producers, which would diminish the property of each one of them. If they wish to increase constantly the importations, the value of the net profits must necessarily decrease. Fortunes would diminish with diminution of the profits. No more would billionaires rise over the vast crowds of the common people and occupy the attention of the whole world with their [illegible] movements. The epoch of economical crisis is imminent. It will be immensely interesting and terrible to witness.

A Passion for Cocktails.

Furthermore the imperialism of Roosevelt, justified, perhaps, by the need of assuring new markets for American productions, is preparing for the United States approaching political troubles which it will be of the utmost interest to follow.

Along with these blemishes there is the curse of alcohol.

The Americans drink water at the table and whiskey the rest of the day.

When a Yankee does not take "something straight" he has a passion for a "cocktail," a preciously prepared sops of various well-dosed alcohols, gin, whiskey, vermouth, Curacao—what not. In brief, he drinks something all the time—and something strong.

They are great drunkards in the United States. Their first generation is resistant. Their children are weak, enfeebled, their grandchildren are, or are bound to be, degenerates.

One fact, then another, then these others still. They are categorical. And in considering them one may easily foresee the rapid enfeebling of the United States, a weakening which will be precipitated by the inevitable divisions among the States themselves. I admit the conclusions of M. Georges Moreau and believe with him that Uncle Sam is a big chap, very active on his feet, braggart, cocky and ignorant, and menaced by alcoholism and negro blood. He must burst with his plethora or succumb while still young, overcome by the sickness of old age.

The son-in-law of Roosevelt will not rule the world.

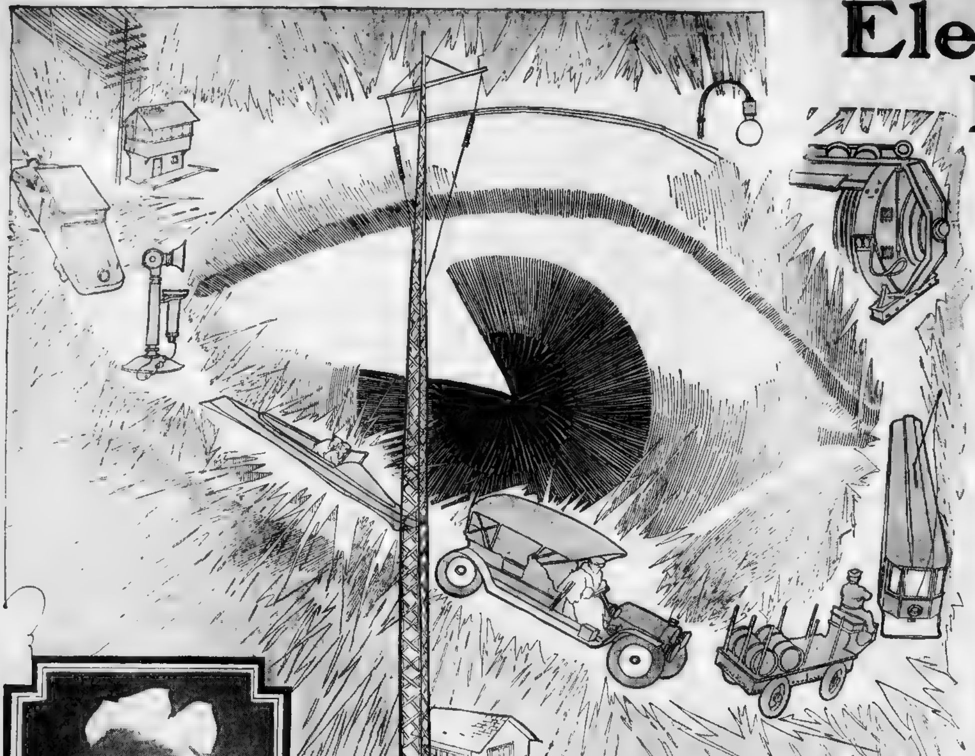
Electricity or Eyesight? Choose Quickly!



"Millions of Humming Dynamos, the Trolley, Telegraph and Telephone Wires, Electric Elevators, Automobiles, Storage Batteries and Billions of Arc and Incandescent Globes are Storing up a Power of Terrific and Uncanny Force and Corroding the Most Delicate and Tenderest of All Existing Things, the Optic Nerve."—From Statement by Dr. G. B. Dye

Science Alarmingly Predicts That We Are Losing Our Sense of Sight, and Shows Overproduction of Electricity May Lead to a Sightless Age.

OCULISTS and electrical experts assert that the universal use of electricity is shrivelling the optic nerve and rapidly making the human race blind. As the electric light grows more powerful the eye will fail until it flickers out. Trolleys, dynamos, motors and even the seemingly innocent electric fan are as dangerous as the electric lamp itself. From every source of electric energy come invisible waves which pass through the skull and coverings of the optic nerve and corrode that most sensitive organ of the human body.

Even on a mountain top and in mid-ocean the tormented eye cannot escape. The insidious waves charge the atmosphere from pole to pole with invisible force. These strange statements have been affirmed by a Chicago jury.

Ruth Bostrum, Whose Sight Has Been Destroyed by an Electric Wave

Dr. H. Preston Pratt Who Predicts a Sightless Age.

BLINDNESS is the awful price that man must pay for his inventive curiosity, according to science. Some time, possibly at the close of the twentieth century, the world is to become peopled by gropers—blind, staggering, crawling humans, forced to feel out their hesitating ways through a lifelong darkness as a mocking tribute to electricity, the fluid monster that the eye discovered and the hand failed to control.

Scientists advance this as a theory. A jury empanelled in the case of Ruth Bostrum vs. the Union Traction Company of Chicago, returned a verdict in Judge Windes's division of the Cook County Circuit Court declaring this to be a fact.

Both jury and scientists declared that the envelope of air surrounding the earth is gradually being charged by the myriads of humming dynamos, burning wires and flaring electric lights, until it is becoming an immense Leyden jar, crammed with the fluid force that is corroding the delicate optic nerves of a man's soul windows.

On the evidence of the scientists, the ten year-old blind girl, Ruth Bostrum, was awarded $20,000 in damages by the jury. Oculists, physicians, nerve specialists and electrical experts have journeyed from far and near to the humble home of the girl's father to study the child. She is upheld as a living example of the new theory that electric currents, passing through the air, are corroding the optic nerves.

"She was half blinded and partly paralyzed by an electric shock that passed through the air from a broken trolley wire while she stood many feet away from the points of discharge."

It upheld the statements of Dr. H. Preston Pratt, X ray and therapeutic expert, and Dr. G. B. Dye, expert therapeutist and inventor of the twenty-two cell dry battery, that the air is an actual conducive and storing agent for electric currents. Both physicians were used as experts in the case of Ruth Bostrum.

Here is Ruth Bostrum's story:

BY RUTH BOSTRUM.

I was blinded and partly paralyzed by electricity, although I did not touch any wires. It came to me through the air. I have been that way for four years now. The doctors say I will always remain that way. It isn't the blindness that hurts me so much. It is something else.

I am susceptible to electricity now. I cannot enter a room where the electric lights shine, walk on the street where the electric cars run, or go near a dynamo, because it makes me nervous. When I do I feel the electric current.

Even when I am far away from these effects I feel it. On wet days tickling, prickling sensations possess me like the sticking of a thousand pins. My right side is helpless. In it I feel but little sensation.

I was standing at North avenue and Hoyt street, Chicago, four years ago. A trolley wire broke. It did not touch me. I was too far away.

But I saw two blinding flashes of light. I heard two loud reports.

I was paralyzed. I stood on the street corner and could not move. Darkness came over me.

Gradually the feeling of death possessed me. Warmth seemed to slowly return. I found I could move, but I could not see my way.

Great red, orange and yellow things crawled before my vision. I was afraid of them and wanted to run. I was forced to grope.

A man spoke to me. He put his hand on my shoulder to lead me out of the street, but I could not see him. They took me home. I got well or thought I was well and went outdoors. A car passed. I was siezed with a shaking spell. Blindness had possessed me again.

Four years have passed. The tickling sensations have come more frequently. My sight is gone. My right side is paralyzed. A dozen physicians examined me before my case went to the jury.

"We stuck needles into her body and she manifested no pain," they told the court.

The jury was out eight hours. Judge Windes had instructed it to find for the company if it believed that my blindness was caused by anything except electric currents passed into my body through the air. The jurymen awarded me $20,000.

I am not the only one. There were two little girls with me. Their eyes were injured but they are not going to sue the company. I know that electricity is blinding.

BY DR. G. B. DYE.

Unless some agent is discovered to utilize the healing and therapeutic properties of the electric currents that fill the air and neutralize their ill effects, it will remain a fact that the dawn of the electric age sounds the doom of human eyesight.

Some time, down the ages that mark this vast improvement and advancement in electrical discovery, man's sight is doomed to flicker out—burned and blasted by the fluid genii that he has uncorked.

The air is like a monster Leyden jar, pressing down over the earth and becoming charged and surcharged with great electro-static waves.

The trolley, telegraph, telephone and cable wires that cobweb the globe are contributing their shares.

All of this, generated by the time and labor saving and comfort making devices that man has created, is being stored up in the earth's aerial envelope. A power of terrific and uncanny force is being laid up there—a power that is daily eating away the most delicate of human organisms, the optic nerve.

A canvass of the eye specialists will show that my contention is true. One adult in every ten is suffering with defective vision to-day. The growth of blindness and defective sight among the civilized races has been increasing in strides of twenty per cent during the last few years.

America has become a blinking and spectacled nation. Its children are as greatly afflicted as its men. In the main this is due to the corroding effect of electricity. Electric light in itself is having a dangerous effect on the human eye. The light contains properties that corrode the delicate nerve tissues. This is not due from the glare, because I have discovered through experiments that the light injures the eye even when it is heavily shaded.

The flicker of the incandescent globe, the sputter and fizz of the arc, and the ghastly glare of the Crookes tube have made us a blind and blinking people.

The hope of man rests in man's inventive genius. Electricity has been demonstrated to be one of the most healing influences known to science when properly handled and directed. The X ray maimed its hundreds before we discovered how to properly use and control it so that all its influences were healing ones. Medical and electrical ingenuity may overcome the present threatening disorder and change this great overwhelming monster into a power of wonderful therapeutic value. Man has done much—although the era of the magic fluid is but begun.

BY DR. H. PRESTON PRATT.

Electricity is a giant uncanny agent, of which we know next to nothing. We can not describe it. We cannot define it. At best we can claim to know a few of its properties and a little about its awe-inspiring power.

The wireless telegraph taught us within the space of but a few months that the air is a powerful conductor of electric waves.

The magnetic influence of the pole causes the needle of the compass to point the North Star, no matter how far it is away.

When a man is killed by lightning the current is conducted from the clouds to the ground through the air. Sometimes the man is killed without actually being struck by the bolt. He may be many points removed from the place of contact.

The yellow-green light of the X-ray will make a man or woman a helpless invalid under certain conditions, if turned upon the body.

The waves of the wireless telegraph are capable of passing through a stone wall, through a house, through the air, through almost anything.

Any sensitively organized person feels the current pass through his body when riding on a trolley car if a disconnection is made.

ROBINSON CRUSOE'S RETURN

By BARRY PAIN.

"I Presently Found Myself Outside, With a Few Belongings Gathered Into a Bundle Under My Arm."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

HAVING discovered the secret of perpetual middle age which accounts for his present hale and hearty condition and undiminished love of adventure—Robinson Crusoe voyages from his desert island on a frail raft with a leg-of-mutton sail, accompanied by his parrot. He at length sights land and disembarks on a beach thronged by white people who seem civilised, but whose dress and manners are strange to him. His coat of goat skin seeming to attract undesirable attention, he appropriates certain garments which he finds neatly folded on the beach whereupon he is pursued by a violent and hostile native, but takes to his heels. After an exciting chase and several hairbreadth escapes, he enters one of several curious linked cabins and conceals himself under a seat. Presently there is a fearful jolt, he hears a voice outside calling, "London only," and perceives that the linked cabins are moving rapidly. A fellow-fugitive concealed beneath another seat emerges and inquires who he is, and in response to a truthful reply, remarks, "Rats." On being asked if he has any other name, the stranger admits freely that his friends call him George.

From his strange fellow-traveler Crusoe learns that he is in England, on a railway train, approaching London. In return for certain of the gold pieces in Crusoe's belt the stranger agrees to instruct him in the ways of civilisation. On their arrival in London a barber is summoned to cut Crusoe's hair and he is fitted out with a civilized wardrobe. He lives with "G. Rats," learns many things, good and bad, sees his gold pieces vanishing rapidly, and finally concludes that George Rats is a most treacherous knave and villain.

CHAPTER VI

Perfidious Conduct of G. Rats Leaves [illegible] in a Lamentable State.

THE next day, when I had breakfasted, I determined most resolutely that I would now denounce this George Rats for a scheming and thieving rogue, and would demand the return of all that he had unlawfully gotten from me, threatening him if he should refuse with the penalties of the law, as well as with a hearty chastisement by my own hands, and to this end I walked out alone, as well to compose my mind as to settle more exactly what manner of speech I would hold with him.

But, as it befell, I wandered so far out of my right course that, though I had intended to be absent but one hour, it was late in the day before I returned.

Being, however, come at last to the house again, I found that George Rats was no longer there, and that an old woman, of a most sorry and wretched appearance, had been appointed to caretake in his place, and she, having first inquired of me my name, handed me a letter from George Rats, which I will here set down.

"My poor friend:

"This show is bust. I rather feared, when I conducted the last lady over the house and took such a pessimistic view of the drainage system, that I was slightly overdoing it, and that she might be unprincipled enough to call again at the agent's and repeat my words. This has happened and I have been invested with the order of the Immediate Boot, being barely allowed time to pack and to scribble this brief message of fond farewell.

"If you find that the more attractive parts of your portable property are missing, do not do me the injustice to suppose that it was by accident I packed them with my own things. It was that I wished to have these trifles as a memento of a man whose imagination I reverence and whose [illegible] to make anything out of it I thought I despise.

"Alas, my poor Crusoe! To think that after all your sorrows, your sermons, and your [illegible]ship you should be wrecked by civilisation. A desert island is your mark, and I have none to offer you. Farewell. Perhaps you have done me more good than you know. [illegible] the good natured policeman who once held the ladder steady for me while I [illegible] the sheet lead off a Wesleyan Chapel in a populous thoroughfare. Think sometimes of me still, when the dawn breaks and the throstle awakes, or as the physician may direct."

This letter was signed Eustace Hope Darlin, but it was plain to me, as well from the penmanship as from the manner of it, that the writer was George Rats, and no sooner had I read it than I rushed to my room to see what loss I might have sustained.

There I found all in disorder, and nothing remaining to me of all the goods that I had acquired by lawful purchase save only a few clothes and trifles, and these by no means of my best.

I was overcome with grief, throwing myself on the floor, beating my breast and crying loudly that it had been better if I had been drowned in Yarmouth Broads, or killed in fight when the ship was taken by the Sallee man-of-war; at which the old woman that was now caretaking came in, breathing very short and yet speaking with an incredible rapidity, so that much of it escaped me.

However, I set down so much as I remember, viz., that she had had about enough of those music-hall songs; that if she had seen the state I was in she would have denied me entrance; that some people could not see when their room was preferred to their company; that she had a character to lose, same as other people, and two sisters in domestic service, one with a family at Clapham and highly thought of, and the other as good as engaged to a respectable young man as would never need to work when his uncle died, that she would have the police in inside of two minutes, that she was sure she never dreamed of such goings on when her poor husband was alive, which he might have been to that day, if other people hadn't been so careless about fixing the stair rods, and never even so much as sent a wreath; and that if I would just tell her what I took her for she would call me a liar to my face.

Now what the bearing of this might be as to some part of it I could not then nor ever after determine, but it was clear that she commanded me to go, and that immediately, nor was she such a woman as one would lightly disobey.

I did, indeed, do my best to explain to her my misfortunes and the sad straits to which I should be brought if she put me forth from the house, but to none of this could she be got to pay the least attention, saying that she had heard such stories before, and, overcoming me with a flood of words, so that I was like to hear far more about that sister at Clapham than seemed to me right or proper.

So, to make a long story short, I presently found myself outside, with my few belongings gathered into a bundle under my arm, and no immediate prospects.

I, then, being much cast down in spirits, reflected that this ribald letter of George Rats was not without reason when he said that I was wholly unfitted for civilisation as it now is; for with a band of pirates, or a man-eating tiger, or a tribe of cannibals, I should have found no difficulty, these being no more than what I was brought up to, but with the caretakers of civilisation I was utterly at a loss, having been robbed by the male kind and routed with ignominy by the female.

Little wonder, then, that I, in so strong a fit of disgust as now possessed me, should be minded to withdraw myself as well as I might from the haunts and society of men; and though there are in London no desert islands, yet there are certain open spaces which are known as the lungs of London; they were thus known also in my boyhood a few hundred years before, and I remember that my father misliked the phrase, and beat me for a too frequent use of it.

Alas! had I but taken the advice of that good old man in all things I had never come to this sorry pass. But I indulged myself no further in this repining, and, taking my bundle under my arms, I set forth for Regent's Park, with the general direction of which I had been acquainted by George Rats.

On my way I called to my mind the lessons I had received in cab-bilking, but had not heart enough for the work, being now very low in spirit and persuaded that I was not sent into the world for any purpose but to be the prey of others.

Nor did I venture to hire a cab in the usual way, for my whole wealth was little more than three pounds of English money, and I was minded to husband it as much as possible.

As for the omnibus, I had grown to dis and at that time the Park was closed; but this distressed me little, for I made short work of climbing the fence, choosing a suitable spot where there was none to observe me.

Yet for fear of the patrol, if any, I went with the greatest caution until I had found me a sort of thicket where I might lie close till the morning.

There, then, having made me a bed with boughs that I cut with my knife, and with my bundle for a pillow, I began to be more at my ease.

Thus resting, but not yet being disposed to sleep, I began to review in my mind my stock of goods, such as it was, to see if there were anything which might be spared; and it was my plan to sell all such things, and with the money thus obtained to betake me from this island to some ferocious and heathenish country where a man might live with more security.

Also recalling many catalogues of dealers and auctions (which had ever been the favorite reading of George Rats) I determined to make a catalogue of my superfluities, using the right and suitable words of description so far as I could remember them.

Thus, then, I began:

Summer suit.—By Moses Ikestein. Interesting cuts. Rather spotted. Cloth, shabby. N. D.

Small cigar.—Strawberry roan. By luck out of side show. Only needs to be seen. Would suit nervous gentleman.

I had proceeded no further in my list when the deep silence of the night was broken by the most terrible sound known to man.

It was none other than the angry roar of the African lion; I recognized it immediately, and beyond mistake. Words are powerless to describe my feelings.

I felt like the brutal and licentious minor trust it, having found of late that every omnibus took me straight to Hammersmith, to

What Did Prof. Berrich Really See?

"Probably the Very Soul of the Wife He Had Just Murdered," Is the Solemn Reply of Science After a Series of Remarkable Experiments.

ADOLPH BERRICH, a gaunt, emaciated maniac, was captured by the sheriff and a posse last month on the prairie, nine miles from Colorado Springs, Col. To the physician at the County Jail, where he was first taken, he immediately became an object of intense interest by revealing himself as a student of advanced physics and chemistry.

Fragmentary utterances indicated further that the new inmate had fled from Boston, Mass.; that he was Professor Adolph Berrich, and that he had killed his own wife in the interests of science. In a rambling way he has described an experiment with a fluorescent screen, ultra-violet rays and other apparatus, and a human soul floating away.

Berrich's statements were so remarkable that a search was made of the cave in which he had been leading a hermit's life for years, in the hope that something more tangible might be found of the soul-seeing apparatus to which he referred so often.

The searchers found nothing of importance but a very lengthy manuscript, very illegible at times. Though the document is unsigned, its author is in all probability Professor Berrich, for it relates in slightly less fragmentary form the details of the ghastly scientific experiment on which the mind of the maniac is forever dwelling.

Considered alone as an unsubstantiated document, the curious manuscript of Professor Berrich is of little apparent value, and may be dismissed as the irresponsible ravings of a lunatic. But it becomes of tremendous importance when considered in connection with the experiments which have just been completed by Professor Elmer Gates, the Washington scientist. By the use of ultra-violet rays, a fluoroscope and other apparatus which Berrich ramblingly describes over and over again, day after day, Professor Gates claims to have duplicated the soul seeing experiment of the mad Professor Berrich. He used a dying rat in the final and most successful test, and detected, it is declared, a shadow which passed over the specially prepared screen and faded away as the little animal died.

Berrich asserts that he saw the soul of his own wife in his experiment. The discovery by the Washington scientist indicates that it was not impossible for him to have done so.

"At first an indistinguishable shadow seemed to be gathering just above the body, rapidly assuming the outlines of the human form. The features bore the likeness of the dead. The delicate, clear and ethereal being floated gently in the atmosphere—floated through the air a moment and then, as if impelled by some attraction moved like a vapory mass toward a half open window."
—From the confession of Prof. Berrich.

The Amazing Berrich Confession.

"SO it seemed to me that what would be most worth knowing on this earth would be whether there is or is not any hereafter. My training in the sciences naturally prompted me to scientific investigation, but for years my results were absolutely negative.

"Ten years ago I was convinced that science had no way of solving the subject—and, indeed, it hadn't at that time. I left the United States and spent several years in other countries. Into all those relics of superstition known as the black arts I delved.

"After seven years I fell in love in Paris and married a beautiful but vain girl much younger than myself. I resolved and promised to give up my [illegible] ideas and live only for the present, as all animals and most people do.

"We were quite happy for six months which we spent in Europe. Then my old desire crept back upon me.

"Every night my wife knelt by the bedside and prayed. At first she prayed out loud for her dead parents and for herself and for me. It was no use to argue with her that there are no trustworthy evidences of a soul, and that the hereafter is a myth invented for simple minds. She had to admit the strength of my arguments, offered none in return but kept on with her prayers.

"As soon as the prayer was over she dropped quickly to sleep. I, however, was doomed to follow out till the small hours the chain of doubts and clews engendered by her prayer."

Several lines are partially obliterated by the weather at this point, but the sense is evident from the remaining words.

"From that moment I was possessed by an idea. A fixed idea, psychologists call it. I recognized it, fought against it, criticised it—and the insane do not criticise their ideas—so I was not insane. Yet the idea grew upon me each night that if I could kill a human being in the right way and be all prepared I might see the human soul.

"If I could but catch a glimpse of the soul as it forsook the dead body my doubts and misery would all be at an end. I felt that my life would be peaceful ever after and that I would atone for the murder by spreading the truth of immortality to all the world. That would surely be worth one life."

Weary of what he had endured in Old World travels, this narrator of a revolting crime, turned homeward, "but better had I drawn lessons from the legends of Vanderdecken, the Flying Dutchman," he says, "or Ahasuerus, the Wandering Jew, cursed with perpetual youth and ever seeking an elixir of death.

"In my sleepless nights the temptation was terrible to slay the woman who lay breathing silently beside me. She, with her prayers, was half the cause of my misery.

"At last I saw that I must eventually yield to my obsession, and determined to prepare for it. Science had progressed mightily in the eight years since I had relinquished it. Great discoveries were made with the wide range of light rays on the invisible side of violet. From the little octave of light visible to the eye they run up and up like the notes of a piano, only to infinitely higher pitches.

"I had long been anxious to experiment with these new rays. On our return to Boston I fitted our house up with many instruments."

"My wife, a sweet but unintellectual and vain person, showed an antipathy to my work. She refused to enter my laboratory, and seemed to shudder at my harmless fluoroscope and light bulbs.

"One night my fixed idea rose in its gradually acquired might and took command of me. My wife had just returned from a fashionable ball.

"She complained of a terrible headache and accepted my offer to relieve it. I gave her a hypodermic of morphia.

"I deliberately gave her an overdose, but not a fatal one. The effects of the drug came on instantly, the headache passed, she thanked me drowsily and was soon insensible, lying in her ball gown breathing heavily.

"With elaborate care I brought in my instruments from the laboratory and arranged them. My heart beat as it never beat before. It was not a palpitation, but a strong surging beat which sent the blood to my brain in a steadier, stronger stream than usual. My faculties seemed exceptionally acute, as well they might be, for I felt that I was to be the first scientist and perhaps the first man to see a human soul.

"At last the instruments were arranged, tested and found to be working perfectly. Behind me were the tubes emitting the ultra-violet light. They were placed behind me because I believed that I could see the soul in reflected light as it really looks, and not a mere shadow as it would appear between me and the light. My fluorescent screen had a lens attachment for focusing an image which I believe was an entirely new idea.

"I opened a secret drawer in my secretary and took therefrom the most deadly of all silent [illegible] of death, a hypodermic syringe filled with cyanic acid, two drops of which injected into the veins produces instant death, leaving no purple blotches or traces of any kind.

"At first an indistinguishable shadow seemed to be gathering just above the body, rapidly assuming the outlines of the human form, and most perfect in its symmetry. The features bore the likeness of the dead, and were beautiful beyond description. The delicate, clear and ethereal being floated gently in the atmosphere with eyes closed, until the process of nature seemed complete, when they opened and a sublime intelligence passed over the face. It floated through the air a moment, and then as if impelled by some attraction, moved like a vapory mass toward a half open window, passed out and was gone forever from my sight.

"The eyes seemed to look toward me an instant. The expression changed. Not anger, nor reproach, but utter amazement was depicted on that filmy countenance as it drifted out of range of my screen.

"For some time I stood like one stricken dumb. The enormity of the crime I had committed came like an avalanche upon my brain. Again and again I called my wife's name, and only the echo of her wailing voice answered me.

"I destroyed all evidence of my guilt and fled from the city of Boston away to the mountains of the West. Here for two years I have lived in seclusion, many times meditating my own life, but always being desisted from my purpose because I wanted first to prove what I have all this time been trying to solve.

"Is death but the beginning of life?

"My mind is weak and fogged as I write this, and my memory bothers me. I am probably going insane, if I am not already so.

"Well, so be it. I am glad to experience insanity, too. In fact, I will put off death until I see what it is like."

(The strange manuscript ends at this point. There is no signature, and it is thought there may possibly have been more.)

which I had never once wished to go; so that I walked the whole distance, and that, as I have reason to fear, not by the most direct road.

It was then late at night before I arrived, (recitation brand) when he hears the peripatetic concertina play his favorite hymn.

Reckless though my life may have been, I have always been strong on the emotional side—breast beating a speciality—and now exclaiming,

"Why, this makes it feel like home!"

I burst into sobs of gratitude.

I remained a long time awake, in the hope that the lion, being in the neighborhood, would pay a call on me.

I felt that from the similarity of our positions we should be sure to get on well together.

Subsequent inquiries showed me that he was a prisoner in the Zoological Gardens, which were close by, and as the price of admission was to one in my condition prohibitive, I was unable to prosecute the acquaintance.

CHAPTER VII.

Reduced to Extremity, He Hunts In the Park and Gets a Sheep.

RISING early next morning I came forth from my thicket and made my way with stealth to the waterside, and there, after much seeking, I lighted on three eggs.

Two of these were real duck's eggs, and of the third I cannot speak more particularly, as I found, on tasting it, that the copyright had expired.

Nor did I dare to make a fire and so cook them in the ashes, lest my fire should attract human being or keep off wild animals.

I also saw a swan. And how its plumage shone! But when I'd got a brick to throw I found the bird had gone.*

So once more I went back to my hiding place, and there lay until such time as the park was opened and I might venture to show myself, then, going forth from the park, I came upon a milkman with his cart, and before each door he deposited a can of his milk. And at this I burst into tears, for here (so my thoughts ran) I had at last discovered an example of that simple and brotherly trust which I had thought to be now extinct among men.

Why should it not be ever thus?

Why are not cordials distributed in a similar manner?

Is man, then, so debased and sunken in civilization that he can be trusted with nothing but milk and the Encyclopaedia Britannica?

Having beaten my breast, I then proceeded to business.

However, even here my ill fortune pursued me, for just as I was drinking my second can of milk the door before which it had been placed suddenly opened, and a woman appeared clad principally in what happened to come first.

I think that never in my life did I hear so much noise made about so little milk, for I had not left a third of a pint in the can.

But I remembered my father's advice, viz., to quit all unseemly brawling, and so did not stay to discuss the matter with her; and as her costume was such as to prevent her from venturing beyond her doorstep I passed quickly around the corner.

But I now determined that ever after this if I should have occasion to take milk in this way I would first secure the handle of the door by a stout cord to some rail or post, or if there was none such, then to the handle of the next door.

Thus it had always been with me since I came to this island, viz., that what one accustomed to civilization would do with ease and safety I did with but great risk and difficulty.

I make no doubt that George Rats would have collected the milk all down one street and sold it again all down the next without one such unhappy altercation as had befallen me.

I then made my way back to the park again, and falling into talk with the park keeper learned much about the Zoo, though nothing to my profit; for the sum of which one is mulcted in entrance money was more than I could easily spare, and I found that even if I paid this sum iron bars would have been put up to prevent the public getting at the lions and injuring or defrauding them.

This I could not but applaud, as well for its wisdom as for its generosity, for I make no doubt that if such a one as George Rats had not been thus prevented he would have taken the lion's mane to stuff a sofa-cushion, removed the gold stopping from its back tooth, and secured the serial use of its Sunday dinner for the next three years at sacrificial prices.

Yet there was little need to protect the poor beast from me, seeing that I was quite innocent of civilization, and only anxious to be friendly, so that this talk of park keepers did but add to my dejection.

In this state of mind, then, I sat down in as remote a spot as I could find (not daring to enter my hiding place by daylight), and there pondered upon my situation—to be without friends or help in a dangerously civilized country, with ripe guavas exceedingly scarce and the society of lions priced far beyond my means.

But there was somewhat else to be cast up on the other side, and, taking out my note book, I made out the account as follows:

EVIL.	GOOD.
I have outlived my epoch and almost forgotten my long-vanished youth.	But I outlived it on purpose; and if I wish to recall the past centuries I have the same access as others to the Refreshment Room of the British Museum.
I am come to a civilized country, where all is strange to me.	But I should have had more cause to grumble if my raft had sunk half-way, yet—vile wretch that I am—I should then have grumbled less.
I am credibly informed that the police are learning German and jiu-jitsu.	But I have this morning heard from a lady with a perambulator that if little girlie-wirlies are good, naughty policemans shan't get them. No, shan'ty-tanty-tant, my 'precious. (Sic.)
I have lost a great part of my money	But I have also lost the whole of my parrot.
I am a miserable outcast, and a confirmed breast-beater.	But I might have been a paralyzed chimpanzee, with no ascertainable system of ethics.

Now by this time my mind was much relieved, for on casting all up and striking my balance I found, so near as I could tell, that I still owed Providence about one dollar and thirteen cents; and whereas I had before seen no other way by which I might get my dinner than by going out and paying for it, I now took fresh heart and resolved to set my wits to work.

This was now imperative, for I was no longer upon a desert island, with a convenient wreck to serve as a General Emporium and morning and evening deliveries by express tide of all goods required.

I was in a commercial centre, viz., a place where you might not perhaps have what you paid for, but you would certainly have to pay for what you had.

I was the victim, too, of further rules and regulations, all strange to me, as I presently found, for, taking from my pocket a kind of pipe or whistle that I had fashioned for my entertainment while I was with George Rats, I had no sooner begun upon a finished and sympathetic rendering of the Preislied from the Meistersinger than a park keeper most strongly ordered me to desist and put that damthing in my pocket.

This I did very obediently, reflecting on the change from my last place, where (pause, and then very slowly) I was monarch of all I surveyed; and my right there was none to dispute; and none interfered when I played a thing of my own on the flute.

For the space, then, of two hours or more I set my wits to work, pacing the park the while, as I have frequently found that by a gentle exercise the processes of the mind are somewhat aided.

Also, I encouraged myself greatly, saying:

"Crusoe, you overcame the cannibals; you made yourself a sea-going boat out of an old tree and a bit of stamp-paper; you discovered the secret of eternal middle age; you wrote a moral and improving book of adventures for the young. Now, again, you have but to think out the means to the end.

At the conclusion of this time my activity of mind and body had engendered in me a very hearty and natural appetite for food, but had not indicated any method by which I might obtain my dinner without paying for it.

And at first I was reluctant to do this, for my entire capital was but small, and in so doing I must needs lose a part of it; but I conquered this when I looked more deeply into the matter, for capital is of no avail unless it be productive of interest, which mine at this moment was not.

Nay, to spend it upon my dinner was a manner of making that capital productive of interest in the form of renewed strength, spirits and mental activity.

So I went to the nearest eating house and invested forty three cents.

On my return I discovered at once the means which I had been seeking of obtaining my dinner for the future without paying for it.

I observed in the park a flock of sheep straying in the direction of that close plantation or thicket where I had lain the night before.

What could be simpler for me, choosing my moment, than to make a sudden rush and, dragging one of these sheep into my lair, to despatch it with my knife?

I should by this action be insuring for the other sheep the more grass to eat, lessening the competition between them, and thus conferring no small kindness upon their owner.

So then with no little cunning I marked down my sheep and went after it, and at the same time a large dog, of whose presence I had been unaware, went after me.

It was an interesting event, but spoiled by the most disgraceful uproar and confusion on the course.

Dog won; park-keeper and policeman second and third. Also ran, two house maids, a telegraph boy and the waiter from the refreshment kiosk.

MAY IRWIN'S COOKING LESSONS

A Page of My Choicest Recipes.

No. 4

The Fourth Lesson In a Very Instructive New Series on Proper Foods and the Proper Way to Prepare Them.

NO housewife who takes the least pride in her conduct of the kitchen [illegible] the dinners she either devises [illegible] personally [illegible] to follow a humdrum routine. [illegible] variety the spice of life, so much [illegible].

Suggestions [illegible] Miss May Irwin gives to-day in which she [illegible] number of her choicest recipes and tells [illegible] how to prepare the dishes, make this, the fourth article [illegible] series which she is writing for this newspaper [illegible] practical and helpful of her entire [illegible] in cooking.

The subject of the [illegible] lesson [illegible] series, which will appear next week [illegible] How to M[illegible] "Telephone."

By MAY IRWIN

THERE is not much to [illegible] one's favorite dishes [illegible] how to cook and serve [illegible] one should be interested in [illegible]. Usually one has his favorite flower, his favorite perfume, his favorite [illegible], his favorite song, his favorite poem and his favorite novel, but when we speak of a person's [illegible] the [illegible] is used. My favorite dishes cover a multitude of things. Here are some of them:

EGGS AND MUSHROOMS

One pound of fresh mushrooms cleaned well in several waters—don't let them stand, peel and put them in a stew pan with two ounces of butter, half a teaspoon of salt and a dash of white pepper. Set them over the fire [illegible] heated, turn into a shallow baking dish, and break over them six eggs; sprinkle over the top stale [illegible] crumbs, dot with bits of butter, dust with salt and pepper, and bake five minutes in a hot oven. Serve with buttered toast.

EGGS TIVOLI

Half a loaf of bread (inside taken out), toast the remaining crust (whole). Have some chicken hash ready in which are potatoes and a rich cream gravy, and put this inside of toast. Put a raw egg on top of the chicken, cream sauce over all, add grated cheese on top of this, brown in a hot oven.

CREAMED KIDNEYS

Six veal kidneys.
Half a pint of milk.
One cup of cream.
One tablespoon of flour.
One teaspoon of very finely chopped parsley.
A little paprika, a dash of red pepper and salt to taste.

"Sprinkle raisins with flour and rub between your hands to take the stems off"

Soak the kidneys in salt and water for two hours, then rinse them off and parboil for twenty minutes. Chop them reasonably fine and add milk. Let it come to a boil; cream a tablespoon of butter with the flour and add to the kidneys, then put in the seasoning, and last of all cream, which should not be put in until just ready to serve.

DICK'S TEA BISCUITS.

One quart of flour
Two teaspoons of baking powder.
One teaspoon of salt

Mix thoroughly in the flour; rub in equal parts of butter and lard (about the size of an egg); mix with cold, sweet milk, as soft as can be handled, roll out not too thin and bake in hot oven

SARAH'S SALLY LUNNS.

One quart of flour.
Four eggs.
One pint of milk.
Two tablespoons of butter.
One teaspoon of salt.
Two teaspoons of baking powder.

Sift the flour, salt, and baking powder together, with one tablespoon of sugar; beat the eggs until lemon colored; add the milk to the flour, then the eggs, melt the butter, and add to the mixture, stir well, and bake in a biscuit tin twenty-five minutes. For raised Sally Lunns, just add a cake of compressed yeast to the above, omitting the baking powder, and put the mixture in two bread pans well buttered, let it stand over night to rise, and bake thirty minutes

SHORT BREAD.

One quart of flour.
Two tablespoons of lard
One tablespoon of butter.
Three teaspoons of baking powder.
One teaspoon of salt.

Mix the flour, baking powder and salt together; then rub the butter and lard well into the flour, and mix with cold milk to the consistency of biscuit dough. Bake on top of the stove on a griddle.

MINCED CLAMS ON TOAST.

Open about two dozen little neck clams, and chop them up reasonably fine, being very careful to save all the liquor. Put them in a stewpan with about half an ounce of butter, and season with red pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Stew for ten minutes, thicken with roux (which is a judicious mixture of butter, flour and cream) and serve on toast

A CAULIFLOWER CHEESE.

Take one large cauliflower and place it in a kettle of boiling water, with a little salt; cook until it can be removed from the kettle without breaking; take it down from the stems and lay it in a deep round dish in small pieces; cover it well with grated cheese which has been seasoned with pepper, salt and a little mustard; put it in the oven and bake until brown

POTATO GRIDDLE CAKES.

Peel eight or ten potatoes and drop them into cold water; grate them in a bowl as rapidly as possible to prevent them from turning red; add four eggs, two teaspoons of salt and half a cup of flour into which half a teaspoon of baking powder has been stirred; mix lightly, and bake on a hot griddle, properly greased. Butter is better than a sweet syrup on them, but, of course that is a matter of taste.

SARATOGA CREAMED POTATOES.

Put potatoes on to boil in their skins in cold water and a little salt; let them cook slowly. When done set away in the refrigerator for two or three days; do not peel until quite ready to use.

Have a frying pan ready with a generous quantity of hot butter in it, and after you have peeled and chopped the potatoes very fine put them in the pan. Season with salt and black pepper, pour in about half a cup of cream, mix them well, cover for ten minutes and serve.

MUSHROOM BISQUE.

Cut fine, with a silver knife a quarter of a pound of fresh mushrooms. After they have been washed in four or five waters and drained thoroughly, put them into the [illegible] part of a double boiler, with a [illegible] of butter, and the same of flour [illegible] with a few spoonfuls of [illegible] then add the balance of a quart of milk, and cook twenty minutes. Season with salt, paprika and pepper and serve in bouillon cups

CHICKEN GUMBO.

Young tender chicken, cut up, seasoned, and rolled in flour. Wash two dozen okras; pod and slice them very thin, throwing away the stems. Peel and slice one onion; cut a quarter of a pound of ham in small pieces, putting them into enough smoking hot lard to half cover them; then add the okra, onion, pepper, chicken, and enough broth to cover all. Season, and stew gently until the chicken and vegetables are quite done.

Rice, tomatoes, a tablespoon of chopped parsley and chopped thyme, two bay leaves and a few Tarragon leaves may be added.

CREAM OF CORN

One can of corn and one quart of water boiled together for one hour, then taken off and strained. Add two eggs, beaten well, one pint of milk, five tablespoons of cream. Mix all well together. Do not put on the stove until almost ready to serve; then stir until it is taken off. Hot toasted crackers are nice served with this

OLD FASHIONED VEGETABLE SOUP.

Half a shin of beef.
A knuckle of veal.
Two pounds of mutton, off the neck.

Put this on the fire in a large soup kettle, in water to much more than cover it, without salt; let it simmer all day; set it off the fire in the evening in a cool place; in the morning put in carrot, potatoes, onions, turnips, cabbage, soup greens, half a can of tomatoes, half a cup of large barley, salt and black pepper and a large tablespoon of brown sugar, and let it cook two or three hours. The vegetables should all be cut in small pieces, but not chopped in a machine, that is not "old fashioned."

SOUTHERN CHICKEN PIE.

This looks like a lot of bother, but it's worth it. Select a yellow Philadelphia fowl weighing four or five pounds, clean carefully, singe, and put it on in boiling water enough to cover it, and let it simmer gently until it begins to grow tender. Save this broth with the giblets. Now cut the chicken in small pieces, slice a quarter of a pound of fat pork very thin, and fry it with the chicken until it is brown. After the chicken and pork are fried take them up, and stir into the pan in which they were cooked a tablespoon of flour. Stir it over the fire until brown; then add a pint of the chicken broth, a teaspoon of salt, quarter of a salt spoon of pepper. Stir this gravy until it has boiled two minutes, and use it for the pie.

To make the crust:

Mix together in a bowl with a knife one pound of flour, one teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of butter, and just enough cold water to hold it together. Roll it out about an inch thick; cut a quarter of a pound of butter in thin slices, and lay it all over the paste, fold it and wrap in a floured towel, and put in the ice box for half an hour. Roll it out, repeating same with another quarter [illegible]. Roll it to a thick [illegible] it in three thicknesses, and roll it out again. If the butter breaks [illegible] it again in a towel [illegible] hour before using. [illegible] put in alternate layers of [illegible] and sliced raw potatoes [illegible] gravy as the dish will hold. [illegible] a little chopped parsley [illegible] salt and pepper, and cover with [illegible] wetting the edges to [illegible]. Cut a hole in the top [illegible] steam to escape.

TO COOK BACON PROPERLY

I can't remember where I got this, but I do recall that it was couched in such flowery terms it sounded appetizing—as a colored girl said the other day, "It looks good to me,"—so I tried it and it is all that it promises.

To crisp bacon to that point of toothsome delicacy that it breaks in the mouth and liberates not a suspicion of grease, lay the slices on a hot spider and turn them frequently, pouring off the melted grease as it gathers. When brown lift it out carefully on to soft paper and set it in the oven to dry. The bacon will be clear enough of all grease to serve on a napkin, if prepared in this manner.

SARAH'S FRUIT CAKE

One dozen eggs
One pound of butter.
One pound of flour
Three pounds of raisins.
Three pounds of currants
Three pounds of candied citron
One pound of almonds
One pound of sugar
Two teaspoons of cloves
Three teaspoons of cinnamon
One teaspoon of mace
One teaspoon of nutmeg
Two tablespoons of rose water
One pint of brandy
One teaspoon of soda and two of cream of tartar mixed with a little milk

Rub the butter and sugar until it creams; beat yolks of eggs; add to the sugar and butter, then add the molasses, the spices, the flour, the raisins (carefully seeded), the currants (cleaned as for Mother's English plum pudding), the citron, the rose water, and brandy. Dissolve soda and cream of tartar in a cup of milk, and add; then the flour. Blanch the almonds, which means to pour boiling water over them to take the skins off; split them and add. Mix well. Bake in a moderately heated oven four hours. Put in stone jar, when cool; pour over it one quart of the best French cooking brandy, and cover securely from the family. This is to be kept one year, occasionally adding brandy as it is absorbed.

A tip from one who knows: keep this in the safe and guard the combination well, as it is very tempting.

SISTER FLO'S SPAGHETTI

Half a pound of Italian Spaghetti (the kind that comes in small short packages is decidedly better than any other); slip it gradually into slightly salted boiling water to cover it well, being careful not to break it. Boil slowly twenty minutes (no more) and serve immediately with the following sauce: two pounds of nice lean beef cut as for a stew; one can of tomatoes, chopped up; one green pepper, chopped (seeds extracted); one bay leaf (whole); two cloves of garlic, cut up. Put the beef in a kettle, and cover with a pint and a half of water; let it simmer for two hours, but be careful it does not boil; then add the tomatoes, pepper, garlic, and bay leaf, and cook slowly all day; then strain, and add salt to taste. The earlier this sauce is started the better it is. It will keep perfectly if put up in an air tight jar and kept in the ice box, and needs only to be heated. When ready, serve spaghetti with sauce poured over it, and sprinkle with Parmesan and American cheese (grated) mixed half and half.

JOHN CHAMBERLAIN'S WELSH RAREBIT

Four ounces of cheese, half an ounce of butter, one teaspoon of made mustard, two tablespoons of cream, season with cayenne and black pepper. Grate the cheese in a bowl, run all smooth with a spoon or pestle to a uniform paste, adding or not a tablespoon of ale, porter, beer, or champagne. Make a slice of rather thick toast, which dip an instant in boiling water and place in an oven. Now transfer your cheese mixture to a saucepan and stir over gentle heat until melted; then heat up quickly, pour over toast, and serve. This quantity is for one person.

Work That Pays Well

No work so quickly develops poise, self-reliance, ease, ability to grasp situations, instinct to meet the demands of the moment, and capacity to meet men and women on their own ground as salesmanship. And no salesmanship is more agreeable, more highly respected, more sincerely esteemed, nor, proportionately, better paid, than for The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post.

The Ladies' Home Journal has over a million circulation. The Saturday Evening Post has done more to inspire American manhood and encourage it to its best development than any other American periodical since the day of George William Curtis and Harpers' Weekly. It is a beautifully printed and illustrated magazine with a circulation of about three-quarters of a million copies every week.

Marconi Wireless

A MONOPOLY GREATER THAN BELL TELEPHONE

GUGLIELMO MARCONI.

The injunction issued by the United States Circuit Court against the DeForest Wireless Telegraph Company on March 19th, 1906, in favor of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, virtually gives the Marconi Company a monopoly of the wireless telegraph business. The effect of this injunction on the value of Marconi securities can be easily inferred, as it makes them worth double their present value.

The merits and value of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph System have been demonstrated and proven by its practical operation.

The business is on an established commercial basis, now earning money every day and hour.

It has the largest field for work of any enterprise in the WORLD, being adapted to the land and sea in every clime, and every part of the earth's surface.

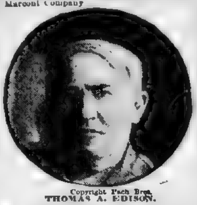
Its contracts with the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies give it the use of over 30,000 offices, covering the entire United States and Canada, so that a message can be sent to and received from every town and hamlet.

Its officers and directors include men of the highest business standing and capacity, such as John A. Griggs, President of the Marconi Company, former Governor of New Jersey and Ex-Attorney General of the United States, [illegible] H. H. McClure, of McClure's Magazine, with a strong Board of Directors, composed of men of equal integrity. Thomas A. Edison and other leading scientists are the consulting engineers of the Marconi Company.

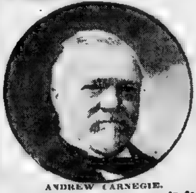
And he says: "Marconi will do great things with wireless telegraphy. We no longer consider it strange that ships should talk to one another at distances of six or seven hundred miles, and as a matter of fact wireless telegraphy is now being used all over the world."

The system is installed on every large Trans-Atlantic steamer afloat, affording communication between ship and shore and between ships at sea in all parts of the ocean.

The company is capitalized exceedingly low, has no bonds or preferred stock, and its securities are based on the assets, contracts and patents of the system in the United States and all possessions and dependencies.



Copyright Pach Bros.
THOMAS A. EDISON.



ANDREW CARNEGIE.

First in the field, based on the highest scientific principles and the widest experiments, it has a practical monopoly of the Wireless Telegraph field, and will always be FIRST, like the Bell Telephone.

Electric inventions have proven the most profitable of all scientific discoveries, and the Marconi wireless ECLIPSES them all in utility and wideness of field.

Its stockholders embrace the most conservative investors in America, including Bankers, Merchants, Mechanics and Professional men of all classes.

ANDREW CARNEGIE says: "Marconi has already done a lifetime's work, but he is going to do another. He is a wonderful young man. I believe in him thoroughly."

The Marconi System is now in daily operation between both sides of the Atlantic and transatlantic steamships and most war vessels at sea. These securities offer the greatest investment opportunity in the world, and will LAY THE FOUNDATION OF YOUR FORTUNE.

Your chance for profit is in finding out that the investment is a good one before everybody else knows it. If Bell Telephone stock were offered now at the price it was sold to original investors, it wouldn't last a minute. $100 invested in Bell Telephone stock in 25 years increased to over $200,000. The only difference between the Bell Telephone opportunity you MISSED and the MARCONI opportunity you need NOT MISS is in the name. The time to buy is while Marconi stocks are cheap.

Bell opportunity is one opportunity worth regretting. Marconi Wireless Telegraph is just as good to-day. Every one knows that MARCONI WIRELESS is TO THE OCEAN WHAT THE BELL TELEPHONE IS ON LAND, and is, if anything, a greater monopoly.

The New York "Sun," January 28, 1906, says:

"One thousand messages commercial and personal, have been sent from one ship to others and to shore stations on one trip in the busy season. This means an expenditure by the passengers for Marconi Wireless messages of more than $2,000. On a recent trip to New York from Hamburg the Amerika sent 700 dispatches to ship and shore."

The newspapers contain daily items showing that by use of the Marconi Wireless System great destruction of life and property at sea is averted.

Now is the time to buy Marconi securities. To-morrow may be too late. A big demand and an advance in price is at hand as a result of the recent decision of the United States Circuit Court, which adds fully 100 per cent to the value of the stock.

$500.00 for the Finest Babies

Send in the Photograph of Your Baby and Win a Prize

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS will be given as prizes by this newspaper to the finest specimens of American babies, whose photographs are sent to this office during the next three months.

Now, what is livelier, more piquantly interesting or picturesque than a genuine baby contest? And a genuine, entertaining and withal instructive competition, this particular contest of babyhood is going to be.

In the first place, of course, are the important conditions, and they must be plainly kept in mind in this pleasing and tempting struggle for the prizes and the glory of possessing a real, genuine simon pure prize baby.

One hundred and fifty dollars will be given to the finest baby, $100 to the next best, and $50 to each of the next five.

The competition is open to all babies of American parentage—be they pink-and-white babies, little brown pappooses, little black pickaninnies, little almond-eyed Jap or little olive-tinted Chinese babies, for that matter, provided always, of course, that one's papa, at least, is a natural or a naturalized subject of Uncle Sam.

Any baby under seven years of age in any town, city or State in America is eligible.

The sage Baby Prize Editor of this paper holds—and he can speak as one having authority — that a baby to be really a perfect, or at least, a very superior sort of baby, must possess three all important attributes:

Health, beauty and intelligence.

These are very requisite and necessary.

And if your little girl baby or boy baby has all these blessings all you have to do is to have his or her photograph nicely taken, being sure that the picture-maker brings out to the fullest, all his prettiest points, his most engaging tricks of manner, the alertest expressions of his little intelligence, the most admirable presentation of his physical comeliness.

All sorts and conditions of babies, of course, will pour in on us — fat babies and lean babies, and baby blondes and baby brunettes, for think how many babies [illegible] the nine odd million [illegible] in the United States there are [illegible] compete for the prizes. Our judges will have no easy task to nicely adjust the desirable awards.

But they are to be of the most discriminating, most painstaking and most qualified. They are not all quite yet decided upon, but you may rest assured that they will be very distinguished persons, well known to the readers of these columns.

And they will have to discount all the old baby-show standards and pass judgment on a scientific, rational and thoroughly up-to-date basis. Of the three requisites, of health, beauty and intelligence, they must solemnly decide whether beauty shall count twenty-five per cent or fifty, and what relative percentage health or intelligence shall assume in the resultant whole.

A mere beauty baby but sickly must not surely count on outclassing a bouncing, vigorous baby not so pretty, nor need just a keenly intelligent infant despair of outdistancing just a little bunch of pure animal health. A little head, promising brains, may outshine mere pink, dimpling cheeks. Baby brawn and baby brains will be weighed in with baby beauty.

Babies destined to be the President of the United States and the great men and women of the twentieth century are to be recognized in this unique and instructive baby show.

Send in the photograph of your baby, and be careful to write on the back of the photograph the full name, age and sex of the child, and also the name and address of its parents. It must be understood that we cannot promise to return the photographs. Address the photographs to Sam Loyd's Alphabetical Arithmetic.

BY SAM LOYD.

HERE is another interesting little puzzle in alphabetical arithmetic, and if you have solved the puzzle of last week and the week before you should not find this one hard.

This is the way to do it: Add to the faces a boot and a hive. Then subtract from the sum of these letters a few aces and a ticket-seller's booth. There will be something left after you have worked this example, and if you have not made any mistakes it will give you the right answer.

The correct answer to last Sunday's arithmetic puzzle is "thirteen." This is the way it was solved.

Write down the words "twig," "shirt," and "canteen" and from these letters strike out "wigs," "can," and the letter "t." If you do this you will see that the letters which remain spell "thirteen."

The answer to to-day's puzzle will be given next week.

You Can Be My Partner and Earn 8 Per Cent NOW.

No matter whether you have five dollars or five hundred dollars, I want you to be my partner in the old established Frank Siddall's Soap business, to which I have devoted the best years of my life building up.

The successful men of the future are those who realize that the day of individual enterprise in manufacture is a thing of the past, and who, instead of putting their money in a bank at a very low rate of interest, or making the unpractical attempt of establishing a business on a small capital, look about to invest their money in some solid co-operative industrial enterprise.

A Revolution in Soap Making.

When I first started to make Frank Siddall's Soap, 33 years ago, most people thought I was crazy, because I declared my soap would wash clothes better, easier and cleaner in hot, cold or warm water without boiling or scalding and yet actually prolong the "life" of the clothes and not injure the most delicate skin.

In spite of this opposition it was not long before hundreds of thousands of families considered and found that they could not do without it. That's because the Soap does the work.

FRANK SIDDALL'S SOAP The Woman's Emancipator

Since then the business has had plain sailing, and more and more users became acquainted with its excellent qualities. So great did the business become that it was impossible to turn the goods out fast enough, and an extensive plant was installed in the present factory which has been running steadily ever since.

Factory, 719 to 735 Beach St., Philadelphia, where Frank Siddall's Soap has been made for over a quarter century.

A LITTLE MONEY WISELY INVESTED THEN did the whole thing. I did what it is impossible for an individual to do alone now.

The ponderous machinery and enormous plants required to-day for manufacturing successfully on a large scale would prohibit the building up of a great business on small capital.

How You Can Do It.

The only way the man or woman of moderate means can obtain a regular source of income without working is to become a partner in a safe, solid and established industrial enterprise like the Frank Siddall's Soap Company, which I and a number of successful and able business and financial men associated with me have recently organized with $300,000 capital, par value $1.00 per share; the company now owning and operating exclusively the business formerly in my possession.

In order to interest the general public in the further extension of the business a limited amount of stock is offered at its par value of one dollar per share, a figure within the reach of all.

Pays 8 Per Cent Now.

Remember, this is an established business, as safe and secure as a bank, paying 8 per cent now, with the stock increasing in value and dividends growing larger.

Don't miss this greatest of opportunities, but write me immediately for full particulars.

DO IT THIS MINUTE.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of BUSTER BROWN

"BEES CAN GET TO PLACES QUICK."

"THERE ARE SOME THINGS TIGE DOESN'T EVEN PRETEND TO LIKE"

CHAPTER V.

NOW after Tige had completely gotten over his shock at seeing an elephant for the first time, we got as busy as ever, exploring all the nooks and corners of the farm. It was hide and seek with Tige and me and the hens. Most of the hens wanted to set, and they were laying their eggs in all sorts of odd and out-of-the-way places so we could not find them. We found them all right though, and kept grandma supplied with a small basketful each day.

You see I was a very small boy, and all of this farm business was new to me, because I had lived in New York. There was so much to learn. I never got tired of studying things. The flowers especially had me fascinated. It seemed so marvellous to think that out of the dead earth a plant would spring and that leaves of inconceivable beauty and perfect design would grow on the stems, and at last a beautiful flower would grow, perfect under the microscope behind as well as before. I found there was no behind the scenes with nature. But what seemed so wonderful to me and so enchanting was the delightful odor. I never thought of these things when I saw flowers in the florists' shops.

How my heart aches for children penned up in the city where their minds and souls grow as narrow and cramped as the streets and dwellings that surround them. Well, as I watched the flowers every day I soon realized that all those little bees that I saw were not idling but were busily working at getting something out of the flowers. I asked Tige what it was and he said they were getting honey. "What do they do with it?" I asked. So he went on to tell me that the bees lived in hives and stored their honey there. I had had hives, but didn't see how they could live in any of the hives I had had.

So Tige took me to see the bee hives. On our way he told me about the bees. He said there were honey bees and spelling bees. I wish I could hear a bee spell. I don't see how a bee can spell with his one letter b. Tige said there were quilting bees and husking bees. He told me lots of funny things about them and he composed a verse like this:

He is 2 busy 2, U C.

Well, I went to the place where the bees lived, and saw them going in and out all hard at work making those wonderful little cells and filling them full of honey. I watched those tiny little busy creatures and the beautiful flowers among which they worked, the beautiful trees and bright blue sky, and although I was only a very little boy I couldn't help wondering about the wise, sweet and compassionate Providence that made all things so beautiful and wonderful, and I know that the One who created all these things could not have made any punishment for His own creatures except what they inflict on themselves.

We got stung, but we inflicted it on ourselves, because I was so curious to see how the bees made that honey that I upset one of their hives, and—well! I'll never do THAT again. Tige got stung a few himself, but you see he was with me. You are not safe as long as you are WITH a wrongdoer, so Tige was in at the finish. He went to bed that night with a bread and milk poultice on his tail.

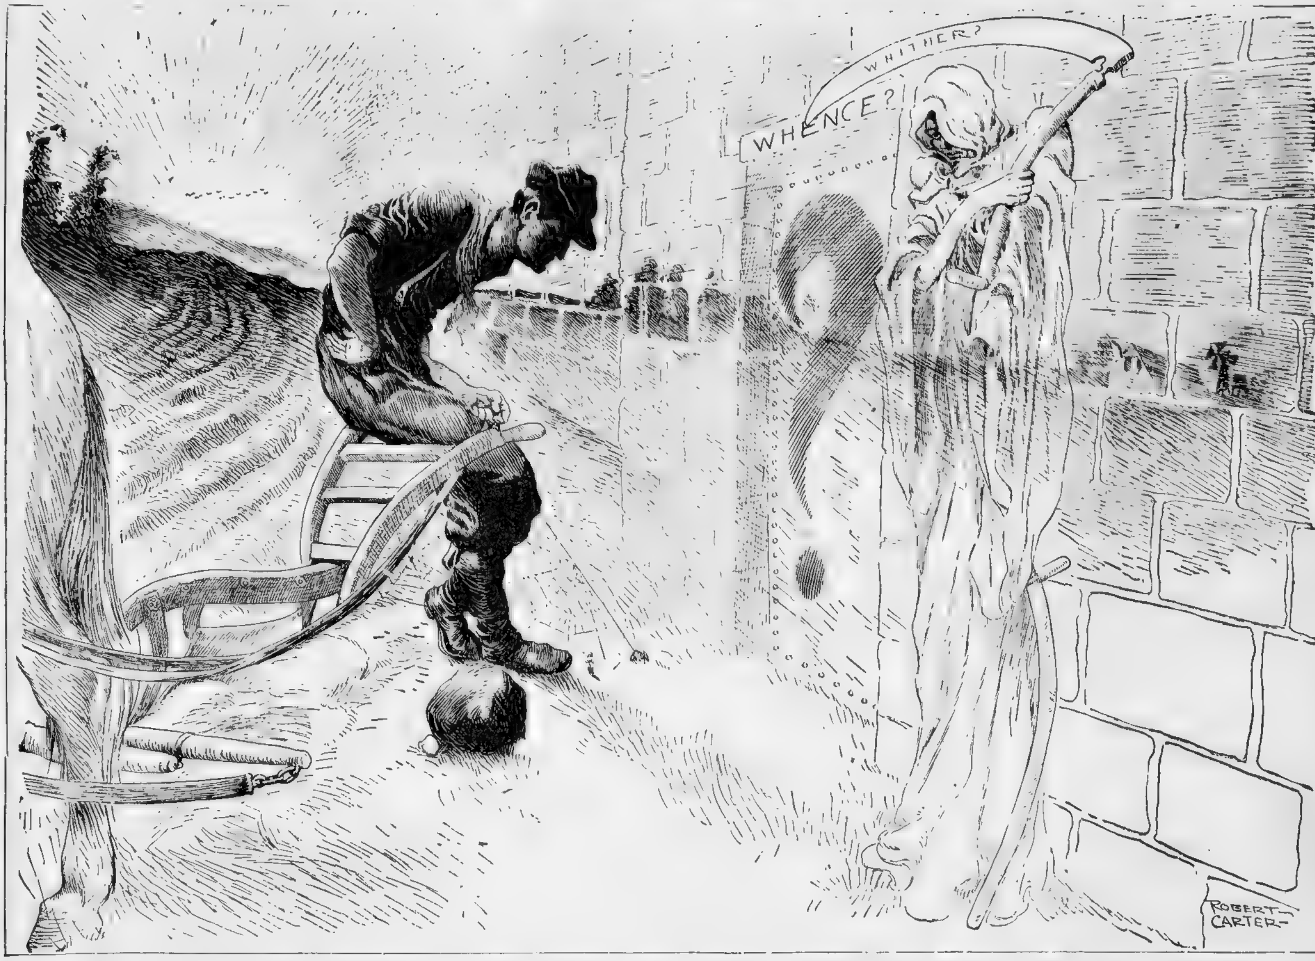
Man Is a Living Question Mark.



WHENCE?
WHITHER?
ROBERT CARTER

Life Is a Long, Ceaseless Interrogation of the Unknown. BUT DON'T SPEND TOO MUCH TIME on the Unknowable.

QUESTIONING, wondering, we spend our lives. Questioning and still wondering we leave this world

From birth to death the world, the universe, and BIRTH and DEATH themselves are mysteries.

In every mind, strong or weak, there is the passion for knowledge, the intense craving TO KNOW.

This questioning nature of ours touching, studying, examining everything has given to us all that we know, all our knowledge. It will give us in future ages, slowly but surely, acquaintance with the marvels of creation and the realm of the unknown equal to our ultimate powers of understanding.

* * *

Your desire to know more than you do is the best feature of your mental make-up. Your questioning, your dissatisfaction with your own ignorance, are absolutely essential to your mental growth. The dull mind is known at once because it accepts things as they are, asks no questions, takes everything for granted.

Humanity would be a sadly, stagnant, hopeless thing if it were not for the fact that almost every human being is a living question mark, a constant interrogation. Every pair of human eyes, every human brain is turned toward the sky, toward the mysteries of the other world, toward the past history of this little earth, AND TOWARD THE SOLUTION, THE EXPLANATION STILL SO FAR BEYOND US

Any man who seeks to discourage in others the tendency to question and doubt and investigates for himself renders a poor service to mankind

"Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good." Thessalonians, 5:21.

And this text explains exactly how human beings have gradually accumulated their supply of knowledge through proving or studying all things and holding fast to that which is proved and accepted.

* * *

In the beginning of man's history, so far back that another great sun stood in our North as our North Star stands now, studying and questioning of the night and its inhabitants began among the earliest men undoubtedly.

And very slowly through all the ages, all the tens of centuries this studying has gone on. Our property on this earth has been classified and made useful. One by one the grain that we eat has been developed from the weeds. One by one the metals have been conquered. One by one nature's forces have been subdued

Thought, which first harnessed the wild buffalo, harnesses now the power of the lightning, as it will harness in future the power of the tides, the force of the moon and ultimately the direct and unlimited power of our great sun itself

* * *

The GROWTH of humanity will cease when humanity's questioning and striving for knowledge shall cease, as real life is dead in the old man when he no longer recognizes those about him, when he no longer seeks for knowledge of the strangers that come.

There is, however, one kind of questioning, one form of morbid intellectual persistence that is harmful sometimes. This we wish to discuss with you to-day. This QUESTIONING THAT CAN GIVE NO RESULTS is illustrated in the picture on this page.

There are questions that must remain unanswered AS LONG AS WE SHALL BE FINITE, LIMITED BEINGS

In this excellently conceived drawing, the man shaped like a question mark neglects the work that might be done while he gazes hopelessly and fruitlessly into empty space, seeing a wall that is not there, asking questions that will not be answered

A military leader invades the enemy's country. He meets a fortress upon a high rock—absolutely untakable. With his entire force of men he camps down in front of that rock determined to do nothing else UNTIL the fort shall surrender AND THERE HE SPENDS AND WASTES THE REST OF HIS LIFE WITHOUT RESULTS.

He might have looked at that fortress, realized its impregnable character, marched around it, captured valuable cities in the rear, made himself master of a rich country, to return perhaps in time to receive the submission of the fortress on the rock.

* * *

Many men start out on a mental campaign and make the same mistake. They meet a question that cannot be answered, an intellectual problem that cannot be solved. They settle down in front of some unanswerable question, as "Where did I come from and why?" "Or where am I going and what for?"

And there they spend their lives without answer, with no result

Suppose that the men engaged in the study of electricity had spent their whole time on the baffling, still unanswered question, "What IS electricity?" No man knows what electricity IS. But Edison and the others did not waste their time and neglect other work because they could not answer THAT question. They realized that electricity is a power, that it can be used. And they have been using it and working with it and benefiting all of humanity, not troubling themselves about the fact that they do not know what it IS.

And so it should be with the man who is constantly worrying himself about the great question as to the supreme POWER in this Universe. No man can know what it is, no man could COMPREHEND it, if he did know.

But we all know that the GREAT POWER is there. That it works for our good, that under its influence we can develop, grow spiritually and materially. Protected by Eternal kindness and wisdom, we can solve the thousands of important problems THAT ARE WITHIN OUR MENTAL REACH. Our duty is to do THAT, not to torment ourselves with the study of the unknowable

Beyond

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

1

IT seemeth such a little way to me
Across to that strange country—the Beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond,
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant regions near.

2

So close it lies that when my sight is clear
I think I almost see the gleaming strand.
I know I feel those who have gone from here
Come near enough sometimes to touch my hand.
I often think but for our veiled eyes

3

I cannot make it seem a day to dread,
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about.
And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

4

The seal of death set on some well-loved face
But that I think, "One more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one 'over there';
One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair."

5

And so for me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory,
It is but crossing—with a bated breath
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before.

Higher Law Must Be Repealed

By Arthur McEwen

[illegible] 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THE [illegible] problem before the American people is how to [illegible] the 'Higher Law.'

[illegible] that problem must be solved if a republican [illegible] is to exist in the United St[illegible]

[illegible] was expressed and [illegible] one of its [illegible] Andrew Hamilton lobby[illegible] New York [illegible] Company, in whose be[illegible] years he expended upward of $1,300,000, while de[illegible] trustees of the corporation as hypocrites and 'dogs' [illegible] for pretending ignorance of the 'yellow dog' fund and seeking to [illegible] the whole odium upon the memory of the late President McCall, formulated the "Higher Law" thus prudently qualifying it with [illegible] word "honest" out of defe[illegible] the criminal statutes:

"The [illegible] world to-day is the greatest financial proposition [illegible] States. And as great [illegible] must [illegible] Law. In defending [illegible] rights and prope[illegible] every our [illegible] barks [illegible] sweep them out [illegible] perhaps [illegible] ways you are defending [illegible] the Higher Law [illegible] great enterprises have a right to command."

The Higher Law licenses its practitioners to disobey and overrule not only [illegible] laws enacted by Congress and State Legislatures and City Councils, but the moral law itself. It warrants the employment of lobbyists, empowered to draw secretly upon vast "yellow dog" funds for the procurement and prevention of legislation desired or feared by "great enterprises."

Hamilton took nobody by surprise when he told how when [illegible] State capital he [illegible] frank defence of profitable crime. He differs from [illegible] merely in having none of their sensitiveness to [illegible] to the judgment of honest men.

The ordinary man, being honest, finds it difficult to understand how one can be dishonest and not regard [illegible] as a rogue. He is hampered by [illegible] acquaintance with [illegible] millionaires. In following the Higher Law they justify themselves to themselves and suffer from no lack of [illegible] approval.

Much sooner than they thought was possible [illegible] given publicity, and there is nothing they like [illegible] they fight against more desperately. Witness how [illegible] Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri had to work with [illegible] opener of the law before he could remove the lid of [illegible] from H. H. Rogers, custodian of Standard Oil secrets. [illegible] the rising clamor of the trust organs against "popular clamor" as heard in the newspapers and magazines which have been telling the truth about the freebooters of finance and trade and their servants in Congress, State Legislatures and on the bench. The spokesmen for the trusts are energetic in predicting a "reaction" which they assuredly have every reason to desire. [illegible] there will be no reaction until the Higher Law has been repealed. [illegible] The American people are human, [illegible] They are aware now that they are being robbed, and they have identified the robbers as well as detected their methods. Men cannot live under the Higher Law and retain what they earn, they cannot be secure in possession of their property.

Statute law has been very kind to those gifted with the talent of exploitation. It has given its sanction to the private appropriation of the country's natural resources; it has surrendered the national highways and the public utilities of cities to private monopoly; it has given the few, through the tariff, the privilege of picking the pockets of the many; it has created [illegible] the Morgans and the Ry[illegible] [illegible] whom common gratitude ought to be content [illegible] law for the extension of their power to pillage.

Amid the many voices of the trust prophets foretelling a reaction against this "general onslaught upon Property" are any heard asking that particular measures of reform be proposed? Hardly. A particular measure only has to be proposed in order to be met with the most uncompromising opposition. Four years have passed since Congressman Hearst laid bare before the Interstate Commerce Commission the truth about the Coal Trust. The Coal Trust still exists and is as powerful, as predaceous and insolent as ever.

The railroads [illegible] with their favoritism and scorn for all [illegible] but the Higher Law. Congress [illegible] the Hearst bill that would have [illegible] the Interstate Commerce [illegible] to give [illegible] between shippers and carriers. Even so [illegible] the Higher [illegible] the railroads and [illegible] their [illegible] in the press. Strong as is the [illegible] of the [illegible] of the Higher Law for [illegible] popular clamor it is very much stronger for definite measures designed to pry their fingers off other people's purses.

But the Higher Law will be repealed nevertheless. It must, because common honesty has to rule in this country if we are not to abandon democracy [illegible] Slavers in [illegible] subways [illegible] organization of over-capitalized trusts.

What is the Higher Law but the [illegible] Black Flag? It is simply the assertion of the right of the [illegible] to seize the property of others. It is the law of the spoiler. And while this black flag waves, and no honest merchantman is safe on the commercial seas, the outcry against piracy will not cease.

MA'Y JANE was readin' [illegible] paper de odder night 'bout dat woman out West who, when she was a-primpin' befo' de lookin' glass, sees de fust gray hair in her haid, an' [illegible] out a screech an' made a grab for [illegible] bottle an' committed suicide on de spot.

"My Lan'!" sclaims Ike, as he listens to de [illegible] but de world aint suffered [illegible] in de los' of a woman dat [illegible] dat."

[illegible] you ain't a woman."

"[illegible] you don't know how [illegible] things effect a woman," says I, pretendin' [illegible] notice what Ike had said, caze hit's a wise woman dat knows when to hear her husband's remarks, [illegible] every woman did what [illegible] she'd hit de path to de grav[illegible] she diskivers de fust gray hair [illegible] she can call hit premature an' [illegible] all her fambly turns gray young [illegible] ain't no law to make odder folks [illegible] or to keep her bes' friend from [illegible] folks ole [illegible] she was.

Yassum, dat's de reason dat women hates to grow ole so bad. Dey's down an' out an' I ain't none surprised dat a woman what didn't have much fortitude noway maybe thought that she would rather be a nice lookin' young corpse, wid lots of mourners at de funeral a-sayin' how pretty she was, dan to be a neglected ole woman dat had to go away back an' set down, an' listen to folks' remarks on how she had faded, an' broke in her looks.

For de fust gray hair is de dividin' line betwixt youth an' age. Befo' dat you is young. After you finds hit, den you can only pretend dat you is young, an' try to act kittenish so dat yo' friends wont notice how ole an' stiff you is gettin'."

Yassum, dat's so, an, an' I don't blame no woman for dyein' her hair, an' paintin' her cheeks, dough I does wish dat dem what does hit would do hit a little better, for hit kinder gits on my nerves to see a lady wid a [illegible] auburn pompadour dat's nineteen [illegible] de top of her haid an' forty-nine down toward [illegible] roots.

Yassum, I ain't over an' above partic'lar, but hit does look [illegible] to me dat a [illegible] mouse colored bunstles, worn just above de ears, don't somehow seem to fit in wid de [illegible] of a sweet young thing wid [illegible] back hair an' [illegible] de [illegible]

Yassum, we se all got to grow ole. But dere's one comfort in hit. After a woman quits strugglin' aginst [illegible] she comes into de peace dat passes all understandin', as de Good Book says. She can wear clothes dat is comfortable an' eat as much as she wants, an' do des exactly as she pleases.

"Settin' at home in de chim'ly corner."

Here's a NEW RECIPE FOR GETTING STAGE EXPERIENCE

By ALAN DALE

"Adding up stolid rows of refractory figures when they might be thrilling multitudes as Hamlet."

I'M going to be very helpful and good to-day, bringing joy to the hearts of thousands of worthy young men who rebel at an unhappy Fate that keeps them with their noses glued to ledgers, adding up stolid rows of refractory figures, when they might be thrilling multitudes as Hamlet or Romeo. These unfortunate young men believe—and believe truly—that I am awfully sympathetic, for they write me regularly. What shall they do? A divine spark is eating 'em up slowly, yet they have to rise at 6 a. m., go downtown on a crowded "Sub," and do horrible office work all day long.

They want to be actors, but they don't know how to begin. They clamor for experience, but how shall they get it? Oh, they are willing to start from the very beginning, yet the lowest rung of the ladder is beyond their ken. One youth varied this plaint. He wanted to be a dramatic critic. "I have tried various callings, and have failed in everything," he wrote, "therefore I think I ought to make a very good dramatic critic." Bashful youth!

However, good and unselfish though I am (or is it "be"?), I can't be expected to help ambitious young men to my job. The law of self-preservation prevents that. I intend merely to indicate to would-be actors a way in which they may obtain experience. It is an infallible way, though a bit drastic. It may kill a few; it may unseat the reason of a few more; it may cripple the joyous outlook of yet another few. Yet those who survive will obtain priceless experience.

* * *

Have you ever noticed—of course you have!—a body of men sitting just in front of the footlights, hampered with things known as "musical instruments"? One has a violin, another a 'cello, a third a flute, a fourth a drum, etc. They make a noise before the performance, between the acts of the performance, and after the performance. They call themselves the "orchestra." According to Funk & Wagnalls "The name is given especially to a large band of trained musicians, capable of rendering the highest class of orchestral music." ("Capable of" covers a multitude of sins.)

This body of men, entirely surrounded by tra-la-la, sits night after night through theatrical performances. This body of men gets to know masterpieces by heart—also pieces that are not master. Night after night they watch such stars as Sothern and Mantell dallying with Shakespeare and other classics, and if Art be a germ (and why shouldn't it be?) they are bound to inhale it.

Now, all that these men have to do is to sit there and play chestnuts. It is usually the overture to "Raymonde" or "Si j'etais Roi." Sometimes in a burst of originality, it is "Zampa," and in reckless moments I have actually known these brave chaps to offer a "Selection from 'Faust.'" Noble hearts!

My suggestion to young men anxious to get "experience" is to seek an engagement in a theatrical orchestra, and to sit night after night watching actors and actresses courting the elusive thing known as reputation. Some of these young men may instantly exclaim that, as they can't play any instrument, they couldn't get this engagement. That is no objection. If they could play, they assuredly would never be engaged. Besides, it is of no consequence. Who really wants to hear a "Selection from 'Faust'"?

Now to back up my suggestion with points made by one who has "researched" the subject. Awful though it may seem to sit every night through what may be a "long run" of a dreadfully popular play, the thing is quite possible. It seems that the well-known English actor, J. B. Buckstone (father of our Roland), "had an abiding faith in the critical acumen of his orchestra." He always asked their opinion, whenever he introduced new business. It was invariably with their sanction. At the last rehearsal, if the orchestra was satisfied, Mr. Buckstone knew that he had a success—and vice versa.

* * *

A famous English actor, Emery by name, was originally a violin player at the Brighton Theatre. Benjamin Webster, unable to secure an engagement through lack of experience, became leader of an orchestra at $5 a week; and there are other instances. For those I have noted I am indebted to Mr. Leopold Wagner's instructive little book.

Of course it is a terrible measure to advocate. How any orchestra player can sit through a modern musical comedy for one hundred nights—with matinees thrown in—without sobbing for Bloomingdale, goodness only knows. Yet what man has done, man may do. We learned that in our copy-book days. I couldn't do it myself, but then I don't want to be an actor. If I did I might possibly fortify myself in some way, and gain the necessary experience. Sometimes after the first performance of a play that is doomed to an early death I look at these orchestra gentlemen, and as I leave the theatre say to myself, "You poor, erring chaps! Perhaps in another and a better world you may get your just deserts."

Yet, seriously, what better experience can a stage aspirant ask for? Even at the bad performances, he may at least learn how not to be bad, while at the good ones he gets the very best advice that could possibly be offered.

* * *

Then, again, there is the position of usher, also extremely desirable. Of course ushers have to work hard for their money. In addition to commanding you to stand up and let a fat lady pass to her seat they are expected to applaud furiously at the close of each act. Now, my experience of ushers is that they are extremely well bred, polite and intelligent young men. Some of them go to college all day, or to schools of art, and they are mostly educated. They probably know a bad play when they see one (though the manager doesn't), and yet they have to applaud. They must outrage their feelings by simulating approval and "getting up the curtain" a prescribed number of times.

It is easier for the orchestra gentlemen, and that is why I advise the stage aspirant to be a "musician" rather than an usher. An usher has to work; a musician doesn't, as a rule. Sometimes when there is a long wait the musician may have to get busy. On that occasion he plays his jig, or whatever it may be—over and over again, until you loathe him and the jig, and wish you were dead, or that the curtain would hurry up.

Let the would-be Romeo sit among these gay musicians and watch the stage. It may even cure him of his vaulting ambition. At the end of the fiftieth performance he may run out and cry for a bed. He may release the stage from his promises, appalled by the awful fate in store for him. Of course, the man who is seriously in earnest will not be affrighted. So many aspirants are not seriously in earnest that I submit this test as a most valuable one. I often think that some of the orchestra players would be admirable understudies, for they must have acquired both the best and the worst of the qualities belonging to the actors whom they see. If they could never be great actors, they could at least be good ones.

I'd sooner acquire experience as a member of an orchestra than go to a school of acting and mix with a lot of people who know less than I do. Of course, the latter method is more luxurious; also more expensive, also less certain. The orchestra stage has heavy penalties. It might lead to suicide, or to madness. Yet when one feels a "divine spark" in one's personality one does not think of extreme cases.

You may assert that, while this advice is possibly very good for men, what about the women? Just as many women yearn for the stage. They could never become members of an orchestra, except on a roof garden, or at a Bowery music hall, or at Coney Island. At Coney Island they could never learn to become great actresses, though they might, in time, learn how to eat Frankfurt sausages.

Both the role of orchestra musician and that of usher are shut out from poor, ill-treated lady. In London all the ushers are usherines, but in this country, while a woman may be a doctor, a lawyer, a newspaper man, she may never be an usher or a bartender. Of course it is dreadfully hard on women, and I often wonder why enthusiasts like Lydia Pinkham and others don't rise and protest.

However, there is compensation. If you've ever looked into a theatre in the daytime, during rehearsals, you will have noticed certain gentle, lovable women sweeping the carpets and dusting the woodwork and attending to the curtains. These women are able to watch all the rehearsals and see the great actors both on and off their guard. They may note a star drilling his "support." They may study a leading lady instructing the calcium man how to throw the light at—I mean on—her.

"Ushers have to work hard for their money."

My opinion is that—shall I call her the scrub lady?—is a very fine critic—a critic of experience. If managers only condescended to ask her views occasionally, many failures would never see the night or day. She knows, poor woman! As she removes the wad of chewing gum that the sweet little matinee girl has cunningly placed on the seat of the orchestra chair she watches the rehearsal of the new play proceeding. Several plays that have run for three or four inglorious nights this season might have been spared that unhappy fate if the producer had just taken this industrious woman into his confidence, instead of waiting for professional critics. Why, professional critics could be swept from the face of the earth if managers would only listen to their own menials. It would be much better than "barring" the poor critic.

I would suggest that simple girls, asking stage experience, secure the humble position I have just mentioned. It is not romantic, but it is quite excellent. It gets them into the "atmosphere." As they flick dust they listen to Shakespeare, or others. They wear a dusting cap, which may in the years to come give place to the laurel crown. If they love the stage, and, O, they do—they will be willing to start humbly. If they rebel at this, it is a good sign that they are not in earnest. Moreover, they can always in later years, when they have got tired of starring, return to sweeping for a rest!

Without experience, an actor is comparatively useless. You take an inexperienced cook—well, because you have to, as there are no others—but with an actor it is different. He must know the ropes. Even if he possess genius, what good is it without a knowledge of technique—how to get on the stage, and how to get off (particularly how to get off, and how to stay off)? Silly boys and girls, astonished to find that managers won't engage them, jump to the conclusion that the profession is overcrowded; that there is no opportunity, and that they are "misunderstood."

Not a bit of it. There is always room for the experienced, anywhere, and if these lines have shown how experience may be obtained, I shall be delighted. Let Romeo sit among the "musicians" (if he has nerve enough), and let Juliet get a broom and wield it.

PERSONALITY'S THE THING With the Famous Stars NOT the ACTING Says Minnie Seligman

BY ERNEST L. WAITT.

IT was a vision in pink that opened the door of the dressing room.

Like a ray of bright sunlight coming from a rift in the clouds on a stormy day, Minnie Seligman appeared as she stood in the doorway, the light in her room bringing her out in bold relief against the almost pitchy blackness of the darkened stage.

A vision in pink she was in reality. Clad in a pink dressing gown, which she endeavored with becoming modesty to confine to her throat, her cheeks as clear as rosy as a peach (and it wasn't artificial either, for she had just been "washing up"), her brown hair adorned by the flowers which she wore in the concluding act of "The Way of the World" and her blue eyes sparkling with that life and pleasure which comes from perfect health and the enjoyment of life, Miss Seligman made a most attractive picture.

It was her first day as a member of the Empire Theatre stock company. She had been warmly greeted by her new audience and was pleased at the reception. They had become her friends.

We talked of life in a stock company. She expressed some new ideas as to the reason why today there are no great actors like Booth and Forrest and Kean.

"Most of the stars of today have won their successes not through their great work as actors, but through their charming personality," she declared.

"The great managers when they cast a play today—I am told it is particularly Mr. Frohman's custom—select an actor or an actress whose personality suits the part for which he or she is engaged. Consequently the actor dresses his part, speaks the lines the author has written, but plays—himself.

No Great Actors Today.

"This is not acting. This is merely an agreeable personality dressed up to suit the period of the play and speaking the author's lines.

"I think it is for this reason that we have no great actors today.

"There are greater actors today among the stock companies than among the recognized stars.

"In the stock system the young actor is called upon to play a comedy servant one week, perhaps an old character next week and a light comedy the following week and so on. In this way his talent is given full scope, he not only having to think out and portray quite another character than he is himself, but he has to make a mental picture of many characters and portray them.

"In other words, they have to create a new part each week—they have to be really actors, instead of playing themselves for season after season," I suggested.

"Yes, that is just it. I do not think sufficient credit is given the stock actor, for the reason that when a great play is first produced Miss So-And-So receives fine praise as the creator of the character. But every time a stock actor is called upon to play a part that has been played by someone else he or she creates that part. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred he has not seen the play performed and must necessarily create from his point of view the character accorded him."

"And he doesn't have the author to help him," I interposed.

Stock Actor Is a Slave.

"No. He has even less help than one in a production who has the advantage of a great stage manager, also the author, from four to six weeks to think out the characterization and the benefit of many rehearsals.

"The stock actor is thrown absolutely and completely on his own resources, and I consider their performances simply marvellous. I would like to know how many of the present day stars could do the work of a stock actor for any length of time.

"Their life is one of slavery to art, but there is theatrical training for young aspirants for histrionic honors better than the stock company.

"The old Boston Museum company was the ideal stock. I am not in favor of two performances a day. I think three matinees a week are as much as actors can give and do justice either to themselves or to the author.

"When one is called upon to rehearse from 10 until 12 and then hustle with costumes to play a matinee which lasts until 5, and then back again to the theatre for the evening performance, beginning at 8 and lasting until 11, what time has one to give to the study of the characters one portrays?

Stars Become Mechanical.

"The small members of the company have all they can do, if they play regularly one week after the other, to memorize their parts, to give their proper cues, etc.

WHITE PHOTO....

Minnie Seligman, Leading Woman of the New Empire Theatre Stock Company.

"When I say that it is great training for the young aspirant, I mean by that the new custom of producing a play and, if it is making a hit, playing it for three or four seasons, the same people playing the same part season after season, causes them to become mechanical, to lose their ambition, and their talent, if they have any, becomes stunted and stagnant."

"Don't you think that some of the present day stock actors will become the great stars of the future?" I asked.

"I certainly do think so, for I believe that in time the present method of selecting stars because of their personality alone will be changed. Then the great stock actors will find their opportunity.

"Take little Frances Starr, for instance. She is a development of the stock company training. She will be a great star some day. I could name half a hundred others, many of whom have played in your stock companies here in Boston, like Marion Chapman, Marion Ballou, poor Ned Fowler, if he had lived—oh, hosts of others. You just wait and see!

During all this time Martha, Miss Seligman's cute little spaniel, had been resting in my lap.

"She was born in Boston on Washington's Birthday, so I call her Martha," said Miss Seligman.

"Have you any other pets?"

"My horse and my automobile," she replied. "Every minute I get I am riding one or the other. My time is arranged just like clockwork. I rise each day at 8 o'clock and am in my dressing room at 10 sharp."

Our Jingling Contributor. By James J. Montague

Old Man Shadow.

Old Man Shadow is coming this way,
  Out of the twilight sky;
Coming to frighten the waning day,
  When the sun has said goodby.
Over the hills you can see him creep—
He wraps a mist 'round the shivering sheep,
  When Old Man Shadow is nigh.

Old Man Shadow has waked the owls
  That live in the locust tree;
The watch dog sees him and sadly howls,
  While the moon looks down to see.
Over the meadows, with silent tread,
He comes when the pallid day has fled,
And a cozy and safe little trundle bed
  Is the place for a boy to be.

"There is still another, we understand," we said, without looking up.

"Yes. Take notice of this."

The Grafters' Marching Club.

  For John D. leads the van
Of the great big three, with the huge G. C.
  As the gay drum major man.
    The bugles blare
    A wild fanfare,
      And the drums go rub-a-dub,
    As there wheels in view
    Down the avenue
      The Grafters' Marching Club.
Ta-de-rum-tum-tum,
Tum-tum-tum-tum,

See little Perk, with a haughty smirk
  Upon his mobile face,
See Morton walk with a lofty stalk
  To keep the rhythmic pace,
    While young John D.
    And John D. Three,
      Their hands with pleasure rub,
    As the trumpets toot
    A brave salute
      From the Grafters' Marching Club.

Let us who pay for the proud display,

The while we hear the people cheer,
  And the drum that booms and rolls,
    For what care we
    If we're doomed to be Kept hustling for our grub,
    When we are allowed
    To cheer with the crowd,
      For the Grafters' Marching Club.

THE CRIMES OF NEW ENGLAND RAILROADS

Flagrant Violations of Law for Benefit of Trusts Cited by Professor Parsons.

By Prof. Frank Parsons, Ph. D

Author of the "Railways," the Trusts and the People," "The Heart of the Railroad Problem," "The Story of New Zealand," "The World's Best Books," "The City for the People," etc., and joint author of "Municipal Monopolies."

BOTH common and statute law [illegible] give [illegible] unjust preferences or make [illegible] charges [illegible] are bound to provide reasonable and sufficient facilities. . . . They have no right to grant monopolies or special privileges or unequal preferences, but are bound to treat all fairly and impartially. (See New England Exp. Co. v. Maine Central R. R. 57 Me. 188, Fitchburg R. R. v. Gage, 12 Gray (Mass.) 393, Kenny v. Grand Trunk R. R. 47 N. Y. 525.)

That is the rule of justice which represents the crystalized [illegible] and practical conscience of civilized people.

The Interstate Commerce Act of 1887 reinforced the common law and [illegible] statutes by emphatic declaration of the National Legislature forbidding carriers to give "any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any person, locality, or description of traffic in any respect whatever, or subject any person, locality or description of traffic to any undue or unreasonable disadvantage in any respect whatever."

And the law made any breach of this provision a criminal offence punishable by heavy fine and imprisonment.

Yet from the early days of railroading in this country down to the present time the railroads have defied the law by denying the small man equal opportunity with the rich and influential, thereby breaking the connection between merit and success, bringing confused and arbitrary favoritism into the business world and destroying the possibility of fair prevision by the mass of shippers, building up giant monopolies and gathering the wealth of the many into the coffers of the few.

In spite of law and justice our railroad practice is a tissue of unfair discrimination. In spite of the whole legislative, executive and judicial power of the Government, the rule of the common law and the interstate act is not obeyed. On the contrary, disregard of it is chronic and contagious and constitutes one of the leading characteristics of our railway system.

Vast Outlaw Horde.

The railway unjustly favor persons, places, and commodities, and they do it constantly, systematically, habitually.

If every instance of unjust discrimination that occurs to-day were embodied in human form and the process were continued for a year, the outlaw host would dwarf the Moslem hordes that deluged southern Europe in the days of Charles Martel, outnumber many fold the Grand Army of the Republic in its palmiest days, and, shoulder to shoulder, the dark and dangerous mob would reach across the continent, across the ocean, over Europe and Asia, and around the world.

In this dark procession New England railroads would have a vigorous part. Before me as I write there is a pile of decisions and documents relating to New England violations of the anti-discrimination law, a complete account of which would fill many pages of this journal. Only a few of the most far-reaching facts can be referred to.

Let us glance first at the coal carrying case in which the United States Supreme Court has recently (Feb 19, 1906) sustained the Interstate Commission's decision that the Chesapeake and Ohio and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroads were breaking the interstate law by delivering [illegible] in New England at a price [illegible] to cover the cost of the [illegible] mines and the published freight [illegible] which other shippers had to pay. [illegible] ago the railroad people agreed to deliver at New Haven 60 000 tons [illegible] at an aggregate cost w[illegible] lowed 28 cents a ton for [illegible] rate in place of the published [illegible] of $1.45 per ton. This had the effect as a rebate of $1.17 a ton [illegible] undue preference and monopoly [illegible] market, and was also [illegible] the provision of the [illegible] against departure from the published rates.

The Interstate Commission brought suit against the Chesapeake and Ohio and the New York, New Haven and Hartford to enjoin the [illegible].

The railroads claimed that as owners they had a right to sell coal at any price they chose. But the United States Supreme Court denied the validity of this contention, holding that a carrier cannot deal in the goods it carries in such a way as to evade the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, and therefore [illegible] buy and sell and undersell other owners of similar goods who are dependent on the railroad for the transportation of their goods to market. "The existence of such a power would enable a carrier, if it chose to do so, to select the favored persons from whom it would buy and the favored persons to whom he would sell, thus giving such persons an advantage over every other, and leading to a monopolization in the hands of such persons of all the products in which the carrier chose to deal."

Oil Trust a Favorite.

Coal rates are not the only ones in reference to which our railroads are guilty of collusion with shippers or with other roads to evade or defy the interstate law. The Oil Trust has a still stronger hold than the Coal Trust. Oil is a special favorite; not all oil, but kerosene oil. Oil that is made from a pig, or from flaxseed, or cottonseed, or extracted from a tree takes the ordinary joint rate that is enjoyed by nearly all commodities from the West to New England points, but in the case of petroleum an exception is made in order to give the Oil Combine a practical monopoly.

The independent refiners of Cleveland, Ohio, who would compete with the Standard Oil if they could, are practically shut out of the greater part of New England by discrimination in classification and freight rates.

In early days the oily people made [illegible] Later the Trust learned how to accomplish the same [illegible] ways.

According to [illegible] testimony before the Commission in 1898 of the Boston & Albany [illegible] East Boston, the agent of the Standard Oil business in New England and the combine's tank cars, which [illegible] weigh from 35,000 to [illegible] pounds, were ordinarily billed [illegible] pounds. Out of 14 cars sent over another road from East Boston to Newport, R. I., at least half were billed and paid for on the basis of [illegible] pounds to the car, although their average weight was shown to be 48,[illegible] pounds per car. It was claimed that [illegible] underbillings were clerical errors. In considering the motives and reliability of such a claim we must not forget the curious habits shown by these clerical errors of piling up in great bunches in the Standard Oil business, and the still more curious fact that all the errors are in favor of the Trust, none against it. Long before this the Commission had found that the railroads leading from the oil fields were in the habit of "blind billing" the Standard cars at 20,000 pounds though the actual weight was frequently 30,000, 40,000, 44,000 or more. Mr Rice complained of this to the Commission in July, 1887. Immediately all the old numbers on the 3,000 tank-cars of the Oil Trust were painted out, and new numbers painted on so that the cars mentioned in the railroad accounts could no longer be identified with the cars on the tracks.

Discriminating Rates.

The Trust took to itself the privilege of making the tariffs on shipments of oil into New England. The result was an arrangement by which petroleum from Cleveland to New England must pay the through rate to Boston plus the local rate from Boston to destination, while the Standard pumps its oil to the seaboard, ships it by water to East Boston, or India Point, near Providence, or Wilson Point, near South Norwalk, Conn., and then pays only the local freight rate to destination.

On other commodities nearly all interior New England points take the Boston rate from the West.

In the making of these rates the various New England roads join with the Western lines in the publication of a joint through rate, which is divided among the carriers in certain arbitrary proportions. The New Haven road follows the example of other New England roads in this respect generally. The rate on nearly every commodity from Cleveland, O., for example, to a point in New Haven territory would be a joint rate and would be the same as the rate to Boston.

It used to be the same way with petroleum, but in 1896 the New Haven Company cancelled its through tariffs and put in oil rates strongly discriminating in favor of the combine.

The United States Industrial Commission found that the independents were kept out of New Haven territory by making oil pay local rates in addition to the through rates on the Boston base, while other commodities paid only the through rate, and by making oil second class unless the shipper has a private siding or tank opposite the rails of the New Haven Railroad, while it is fifth class and pays only half as much freight if the shipper has such siding or tank, i. e., if the shipper is the Standard Oil Company. (U. S. Ind. Commission vol. iv, p. 53)

Commissioner Prouty says: "The Standard has its tanks and private sidings all over the New Haven's territory while few are owned by the independents. Persons without these facilities must pay second class rates while the Standard Oil pays fifth class. The fifth class rate between Boston and New Haven is 10 cents per hundred while the second class is 20 cents, the difference probably representing several times the profit in handling one hundred pounds of kerosene." (Annals of American Academy of Political and Social Science, January, 1900)

And again, "it would cost 23½ cents per hundred pounds to ship a carload of kerosene oil from Cleveland to Hartford if that commodity were [illegible] every other, but under the [illegible] arrangement it costs 34½ cents per hundred pounds. The price [illegible] competitor of the Standard [illegible] can make is increased by this action on the part of the New Haven Railroad by 10 cents per hundred pounds at Hartford and correspondingly all over New Haven territory.

"The effect of this whole scheme is to transfer from the pockets of the people who buy the various products of petroleum in New Haven territory to the treasury of the Standard Oil Company from $300,000 to $400,000 per year without any material benefit to the New Haven Company."

Address before the Massachusetts State Board of Trade, Feb. 27, 1906).

Standard Has Is Own Way.

In the case of Clark vs. the New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Boston & Maine, New Haven & Hartford, etc., February 14, 1906, the Interstate Commission says: "The combination rates on petroleum and its products from Cleveland and Pittsburg to points reached by the New Haven Company result in unreasonable and unjust rates. The refusal of the New Haven Company to consent to and participate in through rates on that traffic is unjust, unreasonable, and the situation is such as to operate greatly to the advantage of the Standard Oil Company.

Any one who has in mind the facts brought out last Sunday in respect to the control exerted by Rockefeller, Morgan and Company in the board of directors of the New Haven road will not be surprised to learn that the Oil Trust has things all its own way with the New Haven railroad. In fact it has a way of getting its way with nearly all the railways, whether there is a Rockefeller on the board of directors or not.

President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford has made [illegible] personal remarks about [illegible] since the address quoted above, but has not denied the facts stated by Mr Prouty from the findings of the Commission. What we want in this railroad discussion is not personal abuse, but the facts. It is not to be wondered at, however, that President Mellen should resort to personalities under the circumstances. I am reminded of a very similar case in which I wrote to a judge who was severely criticized by a railroad president against whose railway judgment had been rendered, and the judge replied "I note what Mr —— says about me and while it makes me feel bad I try to bear up under it. Did you ever know a criminal who thoroughly approved of the law under which he was convicted, or the judge who convicted him?"

During the legislative investigation in 1900 relative to the leasing of the Boston & Albany to the Vanderbilts, some important facts were brought to light concerning discrimination and secret departures from published rates.

The Interstate Act made it a misdemeanor to depart from the published rates, but the railroad followed the law only when it was convenient to do so, and most of the rates in actual use constituted misdemeanors.

Various shippers, merchants, manufacturers, etc., were visited, and it was found that the local rates were not followed, that shippers were receiving widely varying discounts from the published rates, and that shippers did not know at all what rates their competitors and neighbors were getting. They were not satisfied with the system but they were afraid to complain for if they made complaint they would lose whatever advantages they possessed and become marked men for railway persecution.

Their facilities would be cut off and whatever reductions they were getting would be stopped, and they would have to pay the full published rates. They might also be involved in costly litigation, and they did not dare to say anything.

Others Got No Discount.

The Railroad Commission was asked by the Legislature about these discriminations on the Boston & Albany, and report was handed in by the Commission (1900), saying that the reductions from the published rates averaged 40 per cent., and that in different cases they ran from 10 to about 73 per cent.—fully confirming what the shippers had said.

While favored shippers were receiving discounts of from 10 per cent. to 73 per cent. from the published rates, other shippers, and some doing considerable business, declared that they got nothing at all. During the legislative investigation the matter was put to Samuel Hoar, attorney and director of the Boston & Albany, and he said, "I suppose it is true that no shipper knows what his rival is getting. I suppose it is true. But what of it? What has that to do with the lease?"

The receipts per ton-mile on all classes of freight were less than one-half the average of the published rates to the various stations on the road for the cheapest class of freight, viz., coal. And the lowest published local rate on coal was higher than the average rate on all commodities.

The facts set forth in this article are properly designated as crimes. They constitute clearly violations of law, and none of the vigorous denunciations the Commission or the courts have launched against such practices are any too strong to express the condemnation that must be felt by every fair-minded man, and yet New England railroads are probably more honestly managed than the roads of any other section with very few exceptions.

Now and then a shipper has nerve enough to complain of the gross discriminations practiced by the railroads. John P. Squire, for example brought suit before the Interstate Commerce, Jan. 19, 1889, against the Boston & Albany and other roads to get relief from the discrimination practiced against him in favor of the Beef Trust.

Squire was a pork packer engaged in slaughtering and packing hogs near the city of Boston. He obtained the live animals mainly from the West. For years the rate on the live animals had been materially less than the rate on the product and upon this adjustment of rates Mr Squire had built up an extensive business. The railroads had, however, diminished the difference between the live animal and the product by a material reduction of the rate on the product without any corresponding reduction on the live animal, and this gave to the packers in Chicago who had already become great, though not as great as now, the ability to slaughter in Chicago and drive Mr Squire out of business. He applied to the railways to continue the former adjustment of their rates but without avail, whereupon he applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Commission decided in his favor. It has decided again and again against the low rates on dressed meats as compared with live stock, rate adjustments which are made by the Beef Trust for its own peculiar purposes, but the railroads have always found some way to evade or nullify the order.

Charges For Icing.

The outrageous icing charges made by the Armours, and collected by the railroads for the Car Trust constitute another serious grievance in New England as in other parts of the country.

The railroa[illegible] ed to do the icing without charge [illegible] since the Armours have got contro[illegible] e refrigerator business, heavy char[illegible] have been made which rise in p[illegible] to the power of the Trust [illegible] the refrigeration charge fr[illegible] Michigan to Boston was $20 a car [illegible] 04 the icing charge was $55 [illegible] the same service over the s[illegible].

J. D. Mead [illegible] of Boston were charged $[illegible] Armour lines for icing on a [illegible] peaches from Missouri. Th[illegible] a startling sum for a service that [illegible] roads used to perform free of charge. On another car of peaches from Maryland, the charge was $64 for icing. As the car bunkers would not hold more than 4 to 6 tons and only one re-icing was necessary between Cumberland and Boston, the firm protested vigorously. They were told that the bill was a "trial bill."

"What is that?" they asked.

"Try to collect," said the railroad manager.

In this case, on appeal to New York, the bill was reduced to $24, a slice of $40 off the icing bill. It was to Mr Mead a trial bill in more senses than one.

Two Boston men recently (1905) had occasion to order each a carload of peaches from Michigan points some 20 miles apart. One car came from Colma over the Pere Marquette with Armour charges of $45, while the other car came from Eau Claire over the Michigan Central with the same freight rate, but only $13.13 for icing—$5.63 for the original icing, $5 for re-icing at Collingwood, and $2.50 for re-icing at West Seneca. A year ago, before the Armour contract with the Michigan Central expired, the icing charge on both railroads was $55 to Boston; now the Armour charge has come down to $45, but the Armour charge for ice in the case just stated was $9 a ton, while the Vanderbilt railroads charged only $1.50 a ton, which last the Interstate Commission in a recent case has held to be a just and reasonable charge. (11 I. C. C. Decis. 129 and Rep. 1905 p. 80).

There are no icing charges on dairy products. The ice is paid for by the car company and the railroad. It takes as much ice for dairy products as for fruit, but the Trust is carrying its own goods in this field mostly and not the goods of other shippers, and so it has not felt the need of changing the original arrangement in respect to ice.

Weapon of Extortion.

The enormous Armour icing charges are not only used for the purposes of extortion but as the basis of favoritism through the remission of a part or the whole of the charges to favored shippers and the shipment of perishables by the Armours themselves at the actual cost of icing, or about one-third to one-fifth of the charge made to unfavored shippers.

For a strong decision holding these exorbitant charges to be in violation of the Interstate Act (10 I. C. C. Decis. 361; and for a full discussion of the topic and the Beef Trust discriminations and abuses in general see Heart of the Railroad Problem, pp. 184-197.)

A few years ago it cost about $160 to bring a carload of peaches 900 miles, from Galveston to New York and $80 more to take the same car 230 miles from New York to Boston. Complaint was made and the testimony showed that this carload of peaches would be taken from New York to Boston in a regular daily train of the New Haven railroad, consisting of from 30 to 35 cars, hauled in a single night by a single engine and train crew. It also showed that in the same train would be carloads of other perishable commodities, as for example, dressed meat, with respect to which the New Haven road performed exactly the same service for $30 per car. The Commission held that the charge of $80 per car was exorbitant and recommended that the New Haven Company should not charge over $50 per car. The railroad refused to comply further than to reduce the rate to $65 per car from New York.

On evidence secured by William R. Hearst, the United States is trying to secure indictments against the Sugar Trust and its railroad allies, one of which, it is charged, is the New Haven Road. The complaints allege gross favoritism and flagrant granting of rebates and other forms of illegal refunds. One of the most interesting of the complaints is No. 4, described at length in the New York American of April 3, 1906. It charges that by collusion with the New Haven road, the Brooklyn Cooperage Company, which is the barrel making concern of the Sugar Trust, has for years been shipping cooperage materials from Missouri to Boston billed "for export," so as to get the low rate given on exports, and then when the stuff gets to Boston the Cooperage Company takes delivery of it there for use in this country, thus virtually obtaining a rebate in violation of the Interstate law and the Elkins Act.

The freight traffic manager of the New Haven road stated in a letter August 23, 1903, that he was informed an agreement had existed between the cooperage concern and the New Haven road whereby the cooperage company was "permitted to bill staves to Boston for export and then take delivery of same in this city for domestic uses," but that he understood the arrangement was terminated when the Elkins law was passed. The American says:

"What is puzzling the Government authorities is why, though the arrangement is illegal and the railroad officials know it is illegal, and Palmer knows it is illegal, it is still in force. Way bills, vouchers and freight memoranda showing the practice to be still in vogue have been gathered in the last few months and submitted as evidence. The representatives of the Government considered it a clean case of conspiracy and will fight for indictment and conviction on this count."

DENY SMALL DEALERS EQUAL OPPORTUNITY WITH TRUSTS.

FROM the early days of railroading in this country down to the present time the railroads have defied the law by denying the small man equal opportunity with the rich and influential, thereby breaking the connection between merit and success, bringing confused and arbitrary favoritism into the business and destroying the possibility of fair prevision by the mass of shippers, building up giant monopolies and gathering the wealth of the many into the coffers of the few.

Flower growers should begin setting seeds and plants now, out of doors, if possible, using "cold frame" or hot bed, according to the kind of plants desired. Care in the work at the outset will be well repaid later by the results.—Mr. Doogue's advice to horticulturists.

How Gladiolas, Dahlias, Sweet Peas and Other Beautiful Plants Can Be Made to Bloom in City and Suburban Gardens

This is the second in a series of articles on home gardening by Mr. Luke J. Doogue, an expert gardener, written especially for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Mr. Doogue in this article treats of the starting of seeds out of doors, how to treat gladiolas and sweet peas, with a word of warning about the Spring agent.

PLANTS WHICH SHOULD BE SET OUT IN THE SPRING.

[illegible] conditions are favorable for starting seeds in the house it is well to do it, but if you can do so it would be much better to start your seeds and plants out of doors. This means that you must construct what is known as a "cold frame" or hot bed, both of which can be used. These things, the cold frame and the hot bed can be used for vegetables by those who are more interested in vegetables than they are in plants.

A cold frame is nothing more than a box with the ground serving for the bottom and a glazed sash for the top. This cold frame can be used for starting seeds, and also as a sort of greenhouse to hold your plants to be hardened off. If you have grown plants in the warm house, they should be put out into a cold place and gradually accustomed to the outside conditions before being planted out for good. This is called hardening off, and makes the plants tough and able to stand any change of temperature without losing their leaves.

In using the cold frame you should dig out the earth to the depth of a couple of feet, and put in good loam, with about a foot of well rotted manure for a bottom. Prepare the loam on top of this the same as was done with the boxes for the house. It is practically the same thing, only differing as to location. A good greenhouse hot bed sash can be bought for a couple of dollars, and oftentimes it is possible to get second-hand ones for half this sum. At greenhouses, some that are a little the worse for wear can be made available for a small frame. After preparing the loam for the seeds make drills before sowing. Make the drills about four inches apart and drop the seed carefully in place. A careless sowing is not economical, and the little plants come up in bunches, and to get one plant it is necessary to destroy many.

When Hotbed Is Needed.

To force plants and seeds to a more rapid growth another means is employed. They require a hotbed. A hot bed is nothing more than a cold frame set on a pile of hot manure. The manure is piled into a heap about the size of the bed wanted and forked into shape. It is allowed to settle for some days, and when the heat of the bed has dropped to about eight degrees you can put your plants into the bed. This process will send plants along at a rapid gait, but they will suffer from the rapid forcing unless carefully aired and afterward hardened off.

Plants that are backward can be hurried by a short stay in the hotbed. After getting through with it the manure can be spaded into the garden beds with good results. It should be remembered that each season's growth greatly exhausts the beds, and this loss of energy should be supplied by a judicious application of manure. Well rotted cow manure is the best thing that can be used, but unfortunately this is difficult to get.

If you have gladiolas, get them under way. Pot them up and keep them in pots, with the idea of using them later in your garden to fill in beds that may not be looking well, or you can use them in masses, which is the more effective way. Gladiolus blossom [illegible] about eleven weeks after planting. [illegible] are very beautiful and are easily grown. [illegible] they are cheap, comparatively [illegible] multiply very rapidly, and from a few [illegible] easy to get numbers. They are easily [illegible] for during the Winter, [illegible] that is required is a dry place out of the reach of frost.

The usual way to handle them is to plant them in beds and let them come along in their own time. The suggestion of potting them only makes it possible to add variety to your show, at the same time economizing s[illegible].

The bulbs should be potted up very early and put away in a moderately warm place and brought along by degrees. When planting them don't stick them about in ones and twos or they amount to nothing. [illegible] this way [illegible] give the best results in masses. [illegible] them together. If you have twenty-five or fifty or a hundred make a bed by themselves. Looking over any of the catalogs to-day you will see special mention [illegible] the dahlias. They have been brought to great perfection and the cactus varieties particularly are wonderful. The flowers are more graceful than the old varieties [illegible] delicate shades of color make them [illegible] rities. They are not expensive and [illegible] a few you can grow many.

In the [illegible] of choosing a place to trade a word of warning would be very timely. In the Spring everyone is thinking of a garden. Even if he hasn't a plant [illegible] can call his own he still enjoys seeing leaves unfolding and the earth yielding up its treasures. In this State [illegible] an "easy mark" for the Spring [illegible] who is as sure to come [illegible] the Spring itself does. These [illegible] counted by the thousands and they [illegible] forth in the Spring to prey on the unsuspecting, depending upon the ignorance of their customers in the matter of plants and flowers to make their work safe from detection.

Some places advertise in the Spring for men to canvass for nursery stock. They want men, and their advertisements plainly state that no experience is necessary. These fellows make big profits and never want you for a customer for the second time. You will occasionally find among these a man who knows what he is talking about, but this happens rarely.

Now if you are going to buy greenhouse or nursery stock search out a reputable house, one that has a reputation to sustain, and go to them for your goods. You will get what you want, and if there is any fault to be found you can go right back to them and the matter will be made right. When you buy from the fly-by-night the chances are that you will not get what you paid a big price for and you have no redress. Stick a pin in this and it will save you money.

If you intend to make a display of sweet peas you should do your sowing very early, in fact, just as soon as the frost is out of the ground. A little frost does not injure the sweet peas, and to get the best results a late sowing must be avoided. There are many beautiful varieties now on the market, and every house has its own choicest brand, and you will make no mistake in choosing any one of the kinds offered.

In the matter of planting it must be remembered that the peas want lots of room for their roots, and that the roots like to be deep in the ground where they can be safe from the heat during the hot spells. In planting dig a trench about eight inches deep and put the seed in the bottom, covering them about an inch. As the plants grow fill in around until the trench is about even with the ground.

"THE EVENING" LAST IN GREAT GIBSON SERIES.

Drawing Given with To-day's Sunday American Rounds Out "Seven Ages of Woman" by the World-Famous Artist

The seventh drawing by Gibson in this great series on "The Seven Ages of Women" is printed to-day as a separate supplement to illustrate this article.

ONCE in a while Charles Dana Gibson gets away from the Gibson Girl and the drawing room, the avenue, the club and the hunting field, and in place of the particular and always distinguished portrayer of that portion of the social fabric which is inanely called smart society becomes a real poet, pure and simple. One always remembers, apart from the superb Gibson Girls and the fine, manly American fellows of his almost endless panorama of modern life at its fullest, as something quite choice—as one would linger longingly over an exquisite miniature on ivory in its glazed case in a great hall hung with splendid canvases—his "Spinster's Reverie," "His First Love" or "Washington Square," to mention merely a few of these winsome allegories.

In these essays Mr Gibson is tenderly poetic. His poems are songs without words. They needed no interpretation. Their appeal is at once sympathetic and strong. The note in "His First Love," where the little fellow is awakened in his crib from his early sleep to kiss good by to his lovely mother, who is gowned to go away for a ball, is an enchanting idyl of the Madonna and child. The other two are at the extreme end of life's gamut. There is all the sweet melancholy of the autumnal evening—all the tender grace of a day that is dead. They sweetly haunt you long, long after you have glanced at them, like an old perfume or an old tune.

"The Evening" is numbered the seventh and last in the series of "The Seven Ages of Woman," by Mr. Gibson, and rounds out the other six, which begin with "The Nursery" and through "School Days," "The Debutante," "The Mother," "Indian Summer" to "The Chaperon," given away to you with this newspaper last Sunday.

Here again Mr. Gibson has struck his lyre with his pen and made a picture poem. One needs only a tithe of imagination to make real the scene. Conjure up the quiet church and in a deserted pew—you all have seen her—the placid, gentle lady with her hands crossed resignedly across her knees. Her hair is silver and the lips have fallen in where there were dazzling teeth. She is all in black, the widow, the "relict," as they used to call her in the old times, the forsaken.

Of what is she dreaming in this quiet corner? Perhaps the preacher may be painting the glories of eternity and the New Jerusalem; the choir may be hymning the Celestial Paradise, but is it of these that she is musing, do you think, she who is so soon to see them?

Again he is beside her as of old—he who was so brave, so true, her rock of refuge and her strength. In her reverie she feels him there beside her in the old pews, feels him, but cannot see him, for her eyes are dim. Again after thirty years he has escorted her to church with the delicate gallantry that always hung about him like an odor and kept him lover-like till middle age—and death.

Oh, how she has missed him, needed him, waited for him!

And by the intensity of her very yearning there has materialized one of her fond memories, this ghost of her beloved. And none sees him but she beneath her half-shut eyes. Together again they are listening to the sermon and the singing with just a bit of the old earth between them.

And it is a pretty thought to have them there and not disturb her and her dumb converse with her ghostly sweetheart.

BY J. FRANK DAVIS

"ANDREW CARNAGGIE says th't millionaires don't laugh," said Hanrahan, after he and Mr. Regan had drank the first one in a hurry and were preparing to take more time with the second.

"He does," said Mr. Regan, "an' he may be right, f'r all that you an' me know. But there's thim that's on th' road t' riches th't does. Did ye hear about th' icemen?"

"Is it a new joke?" asked Hanrahan.

"It is not. It's a mighty old wan," said Mr. Regan. "They had a conferince lasht Thursdah, th' fellies th't sells th' ice in Massachusetts, wit' a sufficient sprinklin' iv men fr'm Noo Hampshire t' give th' gatherin' dignity, an' they was a laugh f'r every meenyut, as th' dhramatic crickets say.

A Joke Sure Enough

"'Twas not an assemblage f'r a sayrious purpose. Th' invitations was got out humorously, th' punch was dhrunk amid merry quip an' jest, as th' pote wud say, an' even th' quiet agreemint [illegible] all be ways of a joke whin thim tat has t' fut th' bills.

"Th' gatherin' assimbled at th' hour iv tin in th' mornin', an' continued until late in th' afthernoon. It wor a hot time, so hot th't there was a material meltin' iv all th' visible supply iv ice an' somebody'll have t' pay f'r th' shrinkage—somebody not among thim prisent. Most iv thim wor fat an' all iv thim wor jolly. At wan fifteen in th' afthernoon a committee iv six pried th' members away fr'm th' punch bowl long enough t' begin th' formal exercises.

"President White called th' bunch t' ordher amid laughter. Graspin' an ice pick firmly in his right hand, he banged on th' table an' began his annual address. 'We are here solely f'r [illegible],' says he. 'It is [illegible] principle th't we are in th' business f'r our health. (Prolonged laughter.) I thrust th't no member iv this social organization will disthurb his neighbors be referrin' t' th' prices he's goin' t' charge f'r ice. Rimimber this is an open meetin' an' th' illusthrious gentlemin iv th' press is prisent,' says he.

"'I have been axed,' says a diligate fr'm Pittsfield or some other equally unknown point, 'why we are here. I was unable t' answer th' gintleman's question. Will th' chair kindly inform me what is th' purpose iv this gathering, f'r publication as an evidence iv good faith?' 'I hadn't thought what t' say t' that,' says th' President. 'Ax Hallstram,' says he.

"All Sorry But Us"

"Sicrity H[illegible] shouts iv laughter. 'We are here,' he says, 'wit'out anny riference t' th' price iv ice. Th' price isn't goin' up, an' if it does it won't go far, an' th' public will be pleased. We are merry, tra la la la,' says he.

"Ernest H. Bright was called upon f'r a speech, t' allay public alarm. ''Tis absurd,' he says, 't' hear th' talk iv us business men whose time is worth dollars a meenyut meetin' here t' discuss th' price iv ice. We've no idle moments t' do annything iv th' sort,' says he. 'We're just here f'r sociability,' he says. He was [illegible] President Atwood leadin' in th' grand old official hymn, 'Manny are cold but few are frozen.'

"'We are libelled be thim th't says we [illegible],' R. T. Hood iv Melrose, 'when it is common knowledge th't th' iceman make only enough money t' meet his obligations an' has hard wurk keepin' out iv th' cooler. He can only attain riches if th' price an' th' supply hold their usual inverse ratio,' says he. 'How'd ye like t' be th' ice man?' says a voice in th' rear iv th' hall.

"'Cheese it,' says Sicrity Hallstram. 'That joke's got whiskers ahn it as long an' wavy as Jerry Downing's. We will now proceed to the re-election iv th' present officers. That bein' done, we will raycive allegiance fr'm thim th't are unable t' be prisint.'

The Rule That Never Fails

"There was but wan iv such. It was fr'm th' Coal Thrust. 'Greetin',' it said. 'You have th' same chance th't [illegible] mers th't we have winthers. You will succeed if ye but raymimber th' invariable rule th't an increase in yer rate, be decreasin' th' demand, will prove beneficial t' th' poor. We have just proved it t' th' satisfaction iv th' directors an', we think, iv th' sicritry iv state. Be faithful t' th' thrust reposed in you.'

"Amid a storm iv laughter a motion was carried th't th' advice be raycived an' put on ice. Thin they wint t' th' table an' et, wit' much amusemint."

"Was th' little sick kids iv th' tenements [illegible] at th' convintion?" asked Hanrahan.

"G'wan," said Mr. Regan. "This was an occasion f'r merrimint. Th' babies th't needs th' ice will have their say in th' hot weather."

"But these fellies will be home thin, where they can't hear thim," said Hanrahan, doubtfully.

"Just so," said Mr. Regan.

By Morton Burdett.

MANY interesting things will not happen at the coming Boston Horse Show.

It is not good newspaper work—so the craft rules—to deal with negatives, except possibly in the photographers' department.

But everyone knows what will be done at the Horse Show in a general way. We know that right after Easter Sunday, with only one short night between, Society will plunge from Lenten restrictions into the whirl of Horse Show gayety with all the zest with which our absent Brother Gaskill emerged from Charles Street Jail into the glad, free open. So much is positive.

But think of the negative side!

There will be a number of things in general and for this year in particular that the Horse Show devotees will not say or do. They will do much on horses and off from them, but there will be a heap of things from which they will refrain.

For this year in particular Thomas W. Lawson will not be an exhibitor. Perhaps he is too busy whipping the "System" around the stump to whip his singles, tandems and pairs around the ring. Mr Lawson will undoubtedly be at the Horse Show. He has paid a premium of $195 over the upset price of $100 for his favorite box, No. 34, next to the entrance gate of the ring. At the auction sale of boxes last Monday Mr. Lawson nearly caused a frenzy in the bidding, much to the joy of the auctioneer, by hammering away at the bids until he secured his coveted box. Undoubtedly he and his interesting family will occupy the box more or less, including Mrs. Eben Blaine Stanwood, formerly Miss Gladys Lawson, and her youthful husband, Mr. Stanwood. And Arnold Lawson, too, should not neglect the horse now of all times, as he has been lately distinguished with a cartoon in a leading New York turf and stage paper.

Miss Forbes's Rivals.

A fair bevy of Boston's young society horsewomen will not allow Miss Dorothy Forbes to carry off the honors in the ladies' driving competition—if they can help it.

Mrs. DeForest Danielson Mrs. Peirce Thos. W. Lawson Reginald Vanderbilt

BOXES FOR THE HORSE SHOW

Boxes for the Horse Show Eben D. Jordan John Shepard Dorothy Forbes Quincy A. Shaw, Jr.

"He paweth in the tanbark, and rejoiceth in his pedigree, he goeth on to meet the judges. He mocketh at the auto, and is not to be quieted, neither turneth he back from the hurdle. He saith among the Smart Set, Ha Ha, and he heareth the show afar off, the chatter of the women and the gossip."

At the Country Club Horse Show on the Clyde Park grounds in Brookline last Spring Miss Forbes captured the $50 cup and demurely repeated this performance at the recent annual competition at the new riding club. Miss Forbes is entered among the exhibitors, but there are several feminine rivals entered in keen competition.

These include such horsewomen as Miss Elizabeth Goulding, the Misses Rosamond, Leslie and Frances Bradley, Miss Mary Forbes, Miss Jane W. Waldron, Miss Lillian Raymond, Miss Edith Austen, Miss Mary Souther, Miss F. P. Mason, Mrs. Rudolph Clasen, Miss Helen Covell, Mrs. Thomas W. Pierce of Topsfield and several others. Not all these, of course, will be in competition against Miss Forbes, but some of them will. Miss Forbes will have to look sharply to her blue-ribbon honors.

It is interesting, by the way, to note that at the auction sale of seats Mrs. J. DeForest Danielson was the only woman purchaser of a box, as announced from the sales list. She is an exhibitor likewise.

Vanderbilts Expected.

The "Reggie" Vanderbilts are expected. Mr. Vanderbilt has bought a box, entered as an exhibitor and is expected to add greatly to the social and [illegible] eclat of the Horse Show. But there is one thing he and Mrs. "Reggie" are morally certain not to do—pose for photographers.

Those who went to the Boston Dog Show two years ago may remember the very trying time they had with the camera men. They were snapped in the ring and out of it, one persistent photographer being admonished not to snap exhibitors in the ring—just after the photographer had taken Mrs. Vanderbilt exhibiting one of her dogs.

The "overtime" bill, which was recently given a legislative jar just by the Massachusetts Senate, will not obtain at the Horse Show. For how could a measure prevail which prevents women and children working after 6 p.m.

Why, evening sessions are the "smartest," and then Society will work the hardest, according to the oft-repeated wail of the socially driven, who complain of the fearful strain of trying to keep up the pace day in and night out. The "overtime" bill will have less show along the boxes and at the ringside than a poor devil of a half-starved and down-trodden junk horse would have of getting by the entrance gate.

Will Look the Other Way.

The young woman at the show will not try to please the masculine eye, nor to [illegible] all attentions directed toward her sister belles. She will not don her smartest frocks nor wear her most bewitching smile to challenge admiration. No, she will not. If she spies a man looking at her she will look the other way and forget him.

By the same token, the Biblical injunction against purple and fine linen will not obtain any more than the "overtime" bill. Solomon in all his glory would not have rivalled the smartly groomed Horse Show men, and his 700 wives collectively could not have achieved the Worth and Paquin effects which are now being created for the Horse Show women. As the entry list is very large, so the display of fashion is to be correspondingly lavish and amazing, the utmost that Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other municipalities can afford.

The more one goes into this negative side of the Horse Show the more it seems clear that it is not planned on Biblical lines. The spirit of self-sacrifice will not be over-conspicuous among the men. Eben D. Jordan, who is scheduled as box holder and exhibitor, will not assist Mr. Vanderbilt and his other rivals toward blue ribbons. Neither will Robert S. Bradley, Allan Forbes, Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., Albert S. Bigelow, T. C. Holbrook or Thomas G. Plant strive to [illegible] other.

Busy With the Trusts.

One of the few men who seems in a position to look on and smile without rivalry is John Shepard. Mr. Shepard will have a box but will not exhibit. Incidentally, there is one other thing Mr. Shepard will probably not do either. He is not expected to assert that a Horse Show is more fun than skimming along a good road in a smart brush with some of his old time Boston rivals for speedway honor.

On the opening night you will hear the phrase—if you happen to sit in the seats of the mighty—"Why, positively everybody's here!"

But Everybody won't.

John D. Rockefeller won't be there as travelling is too uncertain in this vale of tears.

Several respectable residents of Boston will not attend. They will be too busy hustling at $1.25 per day, if they can get it, to go to the Horse Show. They are trying to get enough coin to pay for coal which is high because the dealers wish to "steady" the insatiate demand for it.

And when they've bought enough coal, they'll have to save money to buy ice, because ice is "scarse," according to the Ice Trust, and is to cost more money according to the same excellent authority. No, the Common People will not arrive in a clatter.

Mayor Fitzgerald may be there. But it is not announced that he will create any sort of furore or lead the grand march.

If It's Good Enough for Loguey ❧ ❧ It's Good Enough for Me

As sung by that versatile comedian [illegible] in his latest [illegible]

One would think some graft was in it by the way the kickers bawl.
Doesn't Logue, my able super of the city's propertee,
For I am not particular, as anyone can see.
If Loguey wants to burn the dough, we'll have to let him be.

Then, again, how very awkward, seeing Logue's a friend of mine;
It would be if I buttinskied. No, I really must decline.
No—If it's good enough for Loguey, it's good enough for me.
There's no one more particular or capable than he.
Between such friends as we are let no dissension be;
If it's good enough for Loguey, it's good enough for me.

Do I plan investigation? Please excuse this quiet smile.
What's the use of getting busy when it isn't worth your while?
Am I sure the job is honest? Didn't you just hear me say
And—If it's good enough for Loguey, it's good enough for me.
There's nothing to investigate so far as I can see.
The bill may keep on "Going up" until it's up in G;
If it's good enough for Loguey, it's good enough for me.

Run along and sell your papers; I can't see the slightest chance
Of your ever understanding ins and outs of high finance.
Here's your hat and, while you're going, paste this underneath the brim,
Fitzy's "standing pat" on Loguey. He for "Muh" and "Muh" for him.
Just beat it while your shoes are good. Your number's 23.
Hurrah for Fitz, for Logue and paint! Hurrah for all us three
If it's good enough for Loguey, it's good enough for me.

Busiest Week of the Entire Season Opens with New Attractions at Nearly Every Playhouse.

"MY, what a busy week," exclaimed the theatrical devotee, as he looked over the list of new attractions scheduled for Boston playgoers' attention next week. His surprise was justifiable, for it is to be the busiest, biggest and best dramatic week of the entire season. Only one play holds over, the stage at every other theatre being taken up by a production, that at the Park being given to Annie Russell's new comedy, "Friend Hannah," which was given its premiere production only last evening.

"Mrs. Wiggs" is the only attraction which continues. She is at the Boston Theatre for one more week. Fay Templeton brings George M. Cohan's great success "45 Minutes From Broadway," to the Colonial. Eddie Foy comes with "The Earl and the Girl" to the Majestic, its formal opening having been given there yesterday; "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" comes to the Hollis to take the place of Ethel Barrymore's comedy, because of her illness. Two extremely popular stars, James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering come to the Tremont in "The Walls of Jericho."

To the Globe comes Edmund Day's newest piece, "Behind the Mask;" to the Grand Opera House comes Blaney's "Across the Pacific;" the Castle Square company appears in "The Three Musketeers," the Empire company in "The Dancing Girl," and the Bowdoin Square company in "Lost to the World." All the vaudeville and burlesque houses present new bills. Houdini remains for just one more week at Keith's, and has something new to amaze his audiences with.

Colonial Theatre

Fay Templeton, in Klaw & Erlanger's production of George M. Cohan's new musical play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," will open at the Colonial Theatre to-morrow evening. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is a novelty. It is made up of comedy, drama, melodrama and musical comedy, adroitly interwoven into a most interesting story. Miss Templeton plays the role of "Plain Mary," a servant. The opposite character, that of "Kid Burns," a young man who has retired from the prize ring and who expresses most practical philosophy in piquant slang, is acted by Victor Moore. In several of the situations Miss Templeton is called on to display ability as [illegible] actress.

[illegible] a music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway" contains but five musical features. Two of these are songs rendered by Miss Templeton, called "Mary Is a Grand Old Name" and "So Long, Mary." There are twenty-one speaking parts and many auxiliary characters. The chorus consists of but eight girls who make up in the quality of their work for the lack in numbers. The following is the cast: Victor Moore, Lois Ewell, Julia Ralph, Marion Singer, Donald Brian, Charles Prince, James H. Manning, Louis R. Grisel, Maurice Elliott, Floyd Francis and Nat. Royster.

Tremont Theatre

James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering, in one of the most widely discussed plays of a decade, will come to the Tremont Theatre to-morrow night for a two weeks' engagement. Their play, "The Walls of Jericho," which will be seen for the first time in this city, is by Alfred Sutro, one of the most interesting figures in the world of letters in London.

"The Walls of Jericho" is in four acts and is a modern play. Its title would lead one to think that the theme is scriptural, whereas, it is only metaphoric. This drama shows how Jack Frobisher makes an enormous fortune in Australia and returns to England. He marries Alethea, daughter of the Marquis of Steventon, high in the "smart set," who plays at bridge, neglects her child and carries on a secret love affair. A friend of Frobisher's is introduced into Jack's home, where an admirer of Lady Alethea has declared his love. Frobisher [illegible] villain to read a letter he has written to her, and after ordering him out announces that he will sell the property and return to Queensland. Lady Alethea, who really loves her husband, sees her error and with their child they return to Australia.

The company includes Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh, Gertrude Gheen, May Haynes, Blanche Edlee, Ruth Chester, W. J. Ferguson, Percy Lyndall, David Glassford and F. Owen Baxter. Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

Park Theatre

Annie Russell is to be seen at the Park Theatre for a two weeks' engagement commencing Monday night in [illegible] play by Paul Kester called "Friend Hannah." The play is of a romantic type with an historic background, [illegible] played by Miss Russell being that of a sweet and winsome little [illegible] actress. Throughout the entire current season London has been [illegible] of the [illegible] in that city and [illegible] strong individuality, her artistic intuition and [illegible] artistic personality which won [illegible] Bernard Shaw's play "Major Barbara" the great vogue it enjoyed in the [illegible].

Miss Russell's framework of players has been selected with care. The principal [illegible] Yorke, Ida Vernon, Ida Waterman, George Woodward, Albert [illegible] and Thomas Coffin Cooke. A lavish production, too, will add to the beauty of the ensemble effect.

Majestic Theatre

At the Majestic Theatre yesterday afternoon "The Earl and the Girl" opened an engagement limited to three weeks. Chief among the newcomers is Eddie Foy, who essays the role of Jim Cheese, the itinerant dog trainer, who consents to become the Earl of Stole for a single night. Into the part he has injected much of that droll humor which has made him so popular. Amelia Summerville, Nellie McCoy, Victor Morley, Templar Saxe, Bernard Dillyn, Elsie Moore and a chorus of handsome girls, artistically gowned, are included in the company supporting Mr. Foy. "The Earl and the Girl" will be the attraction at the Majestic Theatre on Patriots' Day, April 19, and seats may now be obtained for both the matinee and evening performances.

Hollis Street Theatre

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" will be back in Boston to-morrow evening at the Hollis Street Theatre. On the occasion of its first presentation here no play was so much talked about. The merry complications resulting from the [illegible] of the right boots on the wrong fire escape, the burglar scene, the charming maidens in bewitching Parisian robes de nuit, the employment of [illegible] for the first time upon the comedy stage and the thousand and one other successful elements of this work by Augustus Thomas made it one of the delights of the year.

It will stay here only a single week. Some of the original players who were absent on the first visit are now back in the cast. William [illegible] and Vincent Serrano, Henry Harmon, Frank Burbeck, Louis Payne, Jay Wilson, Del De Louis, Jane Laurel, Olive Oliver, Mrs. Annie Adams, the mother of Maude Adams, Theresa Maxwell and Jessie Busley now comprise the company.

Boston Theatre

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" when set up as a theatrical attraction is an irresistible magnet. The special limited engagement of the play, with its delightful and thoroughly wholesome pictures of life among the lowly, at the Boston Theatre has resulted in an overflowing patronage. Tomorrow night the piece will enter upon its farewell week. As an entertainer Mrs. Wiggs has no peer in her class. Of all women she is the dearest and the funniest, the ideal philosopher and friend, at once a broad beam of sunshine amid lowly surroundings and a benediction among all her associates.

Charles Carter, as Hiram Stubbins, gives a realistic portrayal of a character equally as distinct and original. Bessie Barriscale is lovable and deliciously endearing as Lovey Mary, and Helen Lowell, as Miss Hazy, is a fountain of fun.

Keiths Theatre

A regrettable announcement from Keith's is that of the termination of the remarkably successful engagement of Harry Houdini this week. [illegible] did his [illegible] track for the physicians, hundreds of requests have been pouring in requesting that he include that as part of his entertainment. He has consented to make it a part of his every performance during the coming six days, as well as [illegible] of the rope tying challenges he has received.

The programme includes several foreign novelties. Included in the list will be McMahon's Minstrel Maids and Watermelon Girls, [illegible] the best minstrel and vocal [illegible] on the variety stage; Harry Gilfoil, the musical comedy star, late of "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," with his famous character impersonation of Baron Sands; the Three Sisters Herzog-Camarus, European novelty head and hand balancers; the Melani trio, Italian street singers and musicians; Frank Byron and Louise Langdon, in a comedy and singing specialty; the Three Mitchells, "real coon" comedians, singers and dancers; Ferguson and Watson, talking comedians, and Lily Seville, English character comedienne. An entire new list of comedy and motion pictures will be in the kinetograph.

Globe Theatre

Edmund Day's new play, "Behind the Mask," which opens at the Globe for one week beginning with a matinee to-morrow, is beautifully staged, as befits a drama involving some of the most famous scenery of Colorado. "Behind the Mask," is elementally a great Western drama. The central figures are social highwaymen. The bold idea is used of a crime syndicate of robbers of all kinds, hesitating at no plan to get the money. Train robbery and train wrecking, involving the moonlight view of the great Georgetown Loop of the Colorado Midland, furnish ingenious mechanical effects. Stanley Johns, George C. Robinson, Beatrice Moreland and Hedda Laurent are intrusted with the strong roles.

Castle Square Theatre

There will be much that is new in the production of "The Three Musketeers" at the Castle Square this week. This famous play by Dumas, one of the most popular melodramas ever given on the American stage, has been rewritten and reconstructed by Edmund Day, and has been secured for only one week. It will retain all the good qualities of the old version, with the addition of new scenes and new episodes both dramatic and comic. D'Artagnan will, of course, be the leading figure.

New scenery has been prepared, and there will be a specially selected cast, with John Craig as D'Artagnan, John Waldron as Athos, William McVay as Porthos, Spottiswoode Aitken as Aramis and Louise Marcelli as Miladi.

Empire Theatre

At the Empire Theatre this week Henry Arthur Jones's play of modern English life, "The Dancing Girl," will be given. This strong play of certain phases of social life in England was originally presented some fifteen years ago in London by Beerbohm Tree and was later made known here by Mr. Sothern. In spite of the prominence given the title part, in working out the plot an intense interest is created by the character of Valentine Danecourt, a modern Englishman who is the degenerate scion of a noble family, who represents the decadence resulting from generations of wealth, idleness and luxury.

Grand Opera House

Commencing to-morrow night, the exciting military play, "Across the Pacific," comes to the Grand Opera House for one week. It is not all noise and excitement, for there is a beautiful heart story of love and patriotism, and enough good, clean comedy to satisfy all. Scenes showing the miner's home, the Chinese opium den, the transport City of Pekin, General Lawton's headquarters in the Philippines and Block House No. 7 will be displayed.

Specialties are introduced by Miss Lillian Daven, soubrette; Johnny Hoey, "Chinese" Johnnie Williams, Harry Fisher and Blaney's Rough Rider band. Matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Columbia Theatre

The Star Show Girls, this week's attraction at the Columbia, is said to be away ahead of anything seen this season. The girls of the chorus would pass, so the genial press representative declares, for a crowd of High School lassies anywhere, so young, vivacious and intelligent are they, and so far out of the ordinary in looks and deportment, that they have been nicknamed "The Debutantes" all along the line.

In the olio, the big feature will be the one-act comedy by the Tornado trio entitled "Hop Fiend B. I." Others will be Ten Brooke, Lambert and company; Nolan and White, Carney and Wagoner, Detta and Venton, and Day and Vestal, comedy acrobats. The Nelson-McGovern fight will be reproduced in the moving picture machine as an added feature.

Austin & Stone's Museum

The usual series of unusual features, oddities and prodigies will make up the attractions at Austin & Stone's this week with the addition of a fine vaudeville performance.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Lost to the World," a play of heart interest, will be the drawing card at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week, with the full cast of the [illegible] stock company.

Howard Athenaeum

George B. Alexander again heads the burlesquers at the Howard this week, and the vaudeville bill includes a strong list of headliners. The [illegible] was not obtained in time to include [illegible] notice.

Palace Theatre

Blue Ribbon Girls will be the attraction at the Palace Theatre this week. There are two funny burlesques entitled "Caught with the Goods" and "The Laundry Girls' Vacation at the St. Louis Fair," which are full of the liveliest comedy. The comedians are versatile while the girls are said to be not only handsome but talented. The olio will present the Ten Red Hussars, a dashing young ladies' band, which has created a sensation wherever it has appeared. It will be its first visit to this city.

Others on the bill are the World's Trio, the Sidonias, Adams and Drew, the Austins, the Harmonious Four, Stella Gilmore, Emma Wood and Olga Adle. One of the scenes, the Cascade Gardens, is said to be the best ever given to the burlesque stage.

Lyceum Theatre

"The Devil's Daughter," new, bright, re-edited, revamped and brought right up to the present moment, with new specialties, new music, new faces and new costumes, will be the offering at the Lyceum beginning Monday. Among the leaders are John C. Hanson, James Marcus, John Leishman, Gus Meiser, George Bartlett, Etta Cooper, Constance Windom, Etta Harvey, Hathaway, May Dixon, the celebrated Coates and Grundy's Original Watermelon [illegible] entertainers.

"Yankee Circus on Mars"

Manager Lawrence McCarty literally "swept the board" and took "every trick" when he played for and won the last and largest of the season's attractions for the Boston Theatre—"A Yankee Circus on Mars"—which will make its advent at the big New England playhouse Monday, April 30, with matinees every day. It is spectacle, extravaganza, musical comedy, ballet and the regulation features of the "tent show" and sawdust ring combined, and it comes to Boston with all the attributes and paraphernalia which made for its success and extraordinary popularity at the New York Hippodrome.

Not satisfied to give to the people of Boston a production that in Chicago, at the Auditorium, was recognized as superior to any other ever seen in the Western metropolis, Thompson & Dundy have decided to introduce some of their more recent Hippodrome star features. Among these are Captain Woodward's educated seals; Borderverry, the renowned marksman and Adolph, Europe's most famous clown; [illegible] Elliot, with her twelve powerful and ferocious lions, will be one of the strong factors of the circus entertainment. Louise Powell and Robert Cottrell are also featured for their wonderful horseback riding. So, too, are Barlow's elephants, Caicedo, king of the bounding wire, the Sisters O'Meers, wire walkers; Mlle. Marquis and her ponies. One hundred and forty-four girls from La Scala, Milan, engage in "the dance of the hours."

Notable Benefits

Every regular patron of the Colonial Theatre will have a double interest in wanting to attend the opening performance of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" on Monday evening. The performance will be a complimentary testimonial to Thomas B. Lothian, business manager of the Colonial Theatre; George F. Mathews, treasurer, and A. E. Lothian, ticket agent. These three officials have hosts of warm personal friends among the patrons of the Colonial Theatre, and the audience on Monday evening will be marked by a cordiality and good spirit quite remarkable on account of the kind feelings entertained for them.

Manager W. P. Andrews of the Park Theatre is to be given a testimonial benefit on the opening night of the latest comedy, "Cousin Louisa," April 23.

Colonial Matinee

Although the majority of the plays to be given at the second Colonial matinee are of the French school, one piece will take the playgoers back to the days of the Saxon England. This is "The Wings," a one act drama by Josephine Preston Peabody, the young poet whose play "Marlowe" was given last season to a Harvard University audience. "The Wings" tells of a mystical story of the redemption of a woman's soul by its approach through but a moment of a man's lofty faith in the invisible. The other plays to be presented at this matinee on Tuesday, April 17, will be "The Grandmammas of Honore," "The Fantasticks," by Rostand, and "As We Forgive Those" (Le Pater), by Coppee, all under the personal direction of Clayton D. Gilbert.

Music Hall Zoo

Constant additions are made to the collection of rare birds and animals at the Music Hall Zoo and large crowds of people may be found in the auditorium throughout each day and evening. The great baboon attracts unusual attention, and the interesting descriptive lectures serve to fully maintain the interest of spectators. The Zoo is open daily from 11 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Roller Skating

Crowds continue to fill the Park Square Roller Skating Rink each afternoon and evening. The centre of the surface is occupied by many fancy skaters. Nowhere in New England can one see so many fine

Barrymore Hoodoo Ends Only Notable Production

BY J. FRANK DAVIS.

THE pathetic "Barrymore hoodoo" cut short, last week, the only notable new theatrical production. A minor but extremely popular opening was that of the one ultra-successful show played entirely by colored people. The older big shows continued their progress successfully, several of them closing to make way for the big week of openings that begins to-morrow.

• • • • • •

Ethel Barrymore, who was to have played at the Hollis Street Theatre for two weeks, appeared for two nights before unusually fashionable and appreciative audiences, and was then forced to close the show, disband her company, darken the house and go to a hospital to be operated upon for appendicitis. She has scores of personal friends in Boston—of that same set which throws Back Bay and Brookline doors open to her famous uncle, John Drew—but it was the thousands in society's outer darkness, those who knew her just as a young and hard-working actress, whose sympathy for her was as great as the disappointment of most of them at being unable to see her in her newest Barrie play.

We saw her for two nights in "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire." We heard the dialogue and saw the action of Barrie at his best and worst. We saw that he had builded less well than in "The Little Minister" and "The Professor's Love Story," but far, far better than in "Little Mary"—about, let us say, in the class with "The Admirable Crichton."

A year ago I wrote of Ethel Barrymore these words: "She is like her uncle. We see him in a score of plays; he is always John Drew. We see her in a dozen; she is Ethel Barrymore. Some years ago, when she was very, very young, we looked forward to the days when she would outgrow those painful mannerisms of voice and gesture and girlish lankiness. Because she is still very young we may continue to look forward and hope." I reprint these words to-day because that hope is bearing promise of fruition. For the first time in her ten years of acting Miss Barrymore has given us a character part.

You would not have believed that this girl of twenty-six could play a woman of forty and not only look the part but act it. Yet she did, and did it in a manner to carry conviction. In every place where the author's fantastic vein of thought gave her an opportunity she accepted it, and the whimsicalities of "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" could not have been better brought out than by her. Also she had admirable support, her brother John playing cleverly, and Miss Beatrice Agnew doing wonders with one of the most difficult combinations of melodrama and comedy of any part I have ever seen. The rest of the company was fully equal to its requirements; these two are mentioned especially only because they stood out so strong.

We laughed and applauded—which really didn't mean much, because we have been laughing and applauding Miss Barrymore through all the years when she has been raising our hopes and disappointing them—but all the way we couldn't help feeling as we did when we saw Gillette in "Crichton:" "Good. That's all right. Now that you've proven you can do this thing of Barrie's, go and give us something pleasant and entertaining, won't you?"

A great many people didn't seem to know what it was all about. The bald man in front of me, with gray checked clothes and a cloven breath, who had sat very quiet through the whole show, exclaimed at the close, with much bitterness, "That's the limit!" The lady on my left, who had divided her evening between laughing and applauding with great energy, confided to the little pink Englishman with her—he had confessed between acts to an acquaintance with Captain Graham of the Coldstreams—that she "thought it was just too silly for any-thing." Neither of them—and they represented the extremes of a wide range of environment—was right. It was really a very fine Barrie show—if you like Barrie.

It seems almost as if the superstition as to the "Barrymore hoodoo" must have some foundation in fact. And, if this keeps on, the family will stay away from Boston. Lionel Barrymore was seriously ill here last year, you remember.

Williams and Walker were the best team of negro comedians on the vaudeville stage. They went to England, amassed fame and riches, and branched out as stars and managers. They gave us "In Dahomey." They have now given us "Abyssinia," which is not quite so good. Houses that have had the "standing room only" sign out and have been a blessing to ticket speculators have prevailed every night.

Every member of the company is colored. Most of them can sing. Some of them can dance. A few of them can act. And Williams and Walker are as good as ever. There is only this to say in criticism. Music with the African swing, the kind that sets your feet to tapping, whether "ragtime" or otherwise, is of itself well worth hearing. Negroes sing it better than all other. It is too bad that they endeavor to sing a grade of music higher, perhaps, but not in their hands so entertaining.

It is remarkable, as it always has been, that so much interest can be maintained in so slight a story of such humble people as "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The answer is that Mrs. Rice's books contained that much-advertised but so seldom possessed quality, "human interest," to a superlative degree, and that Mrs. Flexner, in the dramatization, increased rather than lessened it. Mrs. Wiggs is a thoroughly delightful character. Long may she wave.

It is always a pleasant thing to say something good about a deserving minor actor in an "all-star" company. In "The Heart of Maryland" there is a young man, Regan Hughston by name, whose efforts show, unless I am mistaken, the results of careful training in some good stock company. It is very seldom indeed that you find a man who can so admirably "double" two such diverse parts as the youthful spy and the doddering old sexton. Besides that, he makes the best death fall that I have ever seen.

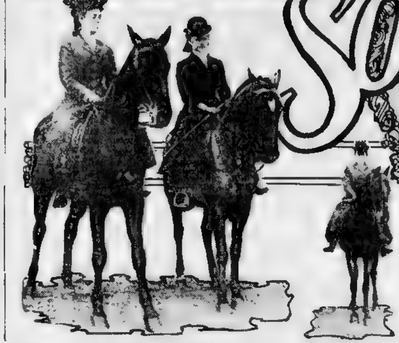
Still the town is filled with talk of Houdini. Up to date he has tried to escape from about every kind of a bond, from a cheap pair of handcuffs to the Charles Street Jail, with invariable success, and no more unpleasant result than a loss of breath and some dishevelment of raiment. It would almost do to wager that he could get out of Wall Street with money, or of an engagement to take his wife's mother to dinner, without serious embarrassment.

BOSTON SOCIETY GIRLS ADOPT THE HABIT OF RIDING ASTRIDE



SMART SET SMILES ON KNICKERBOCKERS

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN.

"The girl who dares"—dares to defy the tyranny of custom by riding astride in the latest evolution of the riding habit, knickerbockers, has made her appearance in conservative Boston and she and her sisters in the equestrian art have set the seal of social approval upon this newest fashion from Paris, which is also being adopted in England.

The knickerbocker riding habit for cross-country riding has come to stay, and many society girls of Brookline and the Back Bay who are among the emancipated, may now be seen in this smartest of riding outfits, taking their early morning canter in the Fenway and along the Brookline bridle-paths, enjoying to the full their fine sense of freedom and security.

To the advanced methods taught in the Brookline Riding Academy is due the up-to-date style of cross-saddle riding now being so generally adopted, and which is hailed with delight by physicians and horse lovers.

Side Saddle Is Doomed

"Major Rudolph Clasen, proprietor of the school, who was riding master in the German Cavalry, and who first introduced cross saddle riding for women in this country has triumphed in relegating the unhealthy side saddle to the realms of ridiculous and out grown things," said a fashionable and pretty devotee of what physicians call "the sane style of riding."

Among the pretty and distinguished devotees of what is now THE fashionable method of riding are: Miss Sally Jones of West Newton, Miss Edith Gardner of Brookline, Miss Mary Roberts of Brookline, Miss Dorothy Brooks of Brookline, Miss Ellen Lassen and Miss Henrietta Chase of Cambridge.

Many of the "400" at the Brookline Riding Academy do not realize that one of the skillful instructors, whose quiet and peculiarly impressive manners make the "wonder," is an Austrian Baron, and a teacher with few equals in the world.

Miss Ellen Lassen, who is a most ardent advocate of the new riding habit for women, and who even dispenses with the paddock coat, wearing simply a shirt waist when weather permits, says:

"The side saddle is hopelessly done for, and the only wonder is that women should have been so long bound by a custom that is unsafe and which restricts them so much in an exercise that is peculiarly adapted to their health. All women originally rode astride. The side saddle was introduced into England in 1341 by Anne of Bohemia, who, being lame, was unable to ride the natural mount.

Alice Roosevelt Set Fashion Here

"Before her time no such thing as a two pommel saddle was known, and just think of that vicious custom surviving almost six centuries. Isn't it time we made a declaration of independence?"

"The society for the prevention of cruelty to animals should do everything in its power to put an end to the side saddle," said another of the "400," whose superb equestrianship makes her a delight to herself and others.

"You see," she explains," in this way the rider's weight is evenly distributed, and the horse's back is not spoiled by any slipping of the saddle."

"When Alice Roosevelt rode astride through the Hub three years ago she did a great thing for women and horses, in overcoming the popular prejudice against divided skirts and bloomers," said another young woman in knickerbockers, whose military bearing and finished riding have caused her to be dubbed by her friends "Joan of Arc."

"400" Ready for Easter Joy.

Breaking the chrysalis of her foolish and unfashionable reserve in matters of dress, the Boston society woman, after long and strenuous resistance, at last emerges a full fledged butterfly.

The eternal and adorably feminine is asserting itself, and never before in the social history of the Hub has milady selected a more elaborate and ultra-modish wardrobe for her Easter coming out than she is doing this season.

For the Horse Show, in which all social interest is centring—and which promises to be a veritable peacock parade—she is joyously preparing to blossom forth in a glory of color ranging from the new coral reds and porcelain blues to the softer and more seductive rainbow tints to be so much in vogue.

The gown par excellence of the Horse Show is to be that sartorial sensation, the "Sunburst Wave," made of shimmering silks in multitudinous plaits rippling into soft serpentine lines about the form, showing its grace to infinite advantage.

Say what we will, our frequent fittings to Paris and New York have had their influence on us, and the Boston woman who bears the palm for daintiness away from all her other sisters has added to her charm by becoming a wee bit Frenchy and frivolous.

"The 'frump' of a decade ago," say the students of style, "is a nightmare to be gladly forgotten. The Boston woman of today is a dream of exquisite dressiness."

The power of suggestion, they declare, has wrought the psychological wonder. The show window of the up-to-date establishment has been an educative factor, the shrine to which she comes, sees and is conquered.

The hat most conspicuous at the Horse Show will be a smart—almost saucy—and a much beflowered affair of Parisian model.

Among those preparing to appear in the most up-to-date and stunning creations at the show are Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mrs. Francis I. Amory, Mrs. Philip Sears, Mrs. R. C. Hooper, Mrs. Bryce Allan, who has the name of being the best-gowned woman in Boston society; Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, at present in Washington; Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. B. V. B. Thayer, Mrs. George Nickerson, Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell, Mrs. Guy Norman, who will come from Washington for the occasion and will be a guest of the Allans; Mrs. F. R. Sears, Jr., and Mrs. Tom Motley, Jr.

Smart Set Waits Vincent Club Show.

Helen Fay, the attractive treasurer of the Vincent Club, declares that she has no time for anything outside of depositing the money which has been veritably flowing in since the opening of the sale of seats for the theatricals of the club and attending the rehearsals. Three days after the opening of the sale every seat was sold for the matinee performances. The rehearsals are now being held in Jordan Hall and are progressing beautifully. Miss Mary Josephine Amory, who has just returned from her visit to Aiken; Miss Alice Thorndike, Miss Barbara Burr and Miss Alice Bolt are of this season's debutantes who will be seen in minor parts. Miss Elizabeth Porter will lead the orchestra for the dances and Miss Rosamond Lang for her own music.

The first dress rehearsal will take place Tuesday afternoon, April 24, and the first performance will be given on the following afternoon. The second matinee will be given the twenty-sixth and the evening performance on the twenty-seventh.

Miss Abigail Adams, who has so efficiently attended to the programme, returned Wednesday from Washington, where for the past two weeks she has been the guest of her uncle, Henry Adams. Miss Dorothy Forbes, who has been at Aiken for the past month, is returning next week, and will be head usher at the theatricals.

April's Dramatic Feast.

Lovers of the fine and unusual in delicate art and dramatic literature are in a flutter of expectation over the group of matinees to be given at the Colonial Theatre April 17 under the able direction of Mr. Clayton D. Gilbert of the New England Conservatory and the Emerson School of Oratory, when four plays of strong and unique appeal will be presented. The leading roles will be played by Dr. L. B. Fenderson of the Jefferson and Criterion clubs, Mrs. Lena Budd Powers of San Francisco, Cal., who is visiting in the city; Bernard Lambert, whose fine portrayal of the saint in "The Lost Saint," which was given at the Celtic matinees, won for him fresh laurels; Mr. Frank Beck, Miss Cornelia Hollingshead, Mr. Jerry O'Connell of the Boston University Law School, Miss Katherine Porter, Miss Marsha Eacker and Theodore Koch of the Jefferson Dramatic Club.

One of the most promising of the plays and one in which society is particularly interested is "The Wings," a one act drama of early Saxon England, by Miss Josephine Preston Peabody, the young poet, whose engagement to Professor Lionel S. Marks of Harvard University was recently announced. Miss Peabody is the daughter of Mrs. Charles K. Peabody of Cambridge, and is as winsome as she is clever. The other plays to be given are "As We Forgive Those," "The Grandmammas of Honore" and "The Fantasticks."

Study Italy at Guild Home.

An atmosphere of sunny Italy pervaded the cozy drawing room of the Curtis Guild home on Marlboro street Wednesday afternoon, when the Pro Cultura Italiana was received by Mrs. Guild, who, like the greater portion of Boston's socially elite, is becoming quite an enthusiast over the language and literature of the beautiful country. Marchesa Costarelli De Gregorio presided at the afternoon tea, serving the frappe, and Mrs. Frederick Winslow poured.

Mrs. Guild, one of Boston's most charming hostesses, was regal in a black velvet princess, trimmed with touches of white chiffon and jet. Marchesa Costarelli, always most becomingly gowned, was radiant in a beautiful creation of chantilly over white satin, with appliques of the most delicate pink chiffon roses and a pink Parisian hat. Mrs. Winslow was charming in a gown of cream lace and hat to match.

Count Orlandini Guidi, president of the club, presided. A paper on Italian literature by Signor Franchischeni was thoroughly enjoyable, as were also the songs rendered by Marquise Costarelli.

Mrs. Guild, who has spent a longer season in Boston than is her custom, is leaving town soon for a few weeks at Atlantic City.

Burr McIntosh Lecture

Arrangements have been made to give two special matinees at the Majestic Theatre soon, when Burr McIntosh will give his now famous [illegible] descriptive of the celebrated trip of Secretary Taft and the distinguished party who accompanied him to the Philippines, China and Japan last Summer.

Concert at the Colonial

Music of a varied nature, both vocal and instrumental, [illegible] in a charity concert at the Colonial Theatre Easter Sunday, to aid the [illegible] Mission [illegible] under the direction of Louis Burkhardt.

Sunday Concerts

Ten acts will comprise the Sunday concert at the Columbia Theatre to-night, including a number of sight acts and some capital pictures on the Vitagraph. There will be a number of comedy [illegible], also Tom Nawn and his company in the comedy playlet "A Touch of Nature" will be the feature of the concert at the [illegible] Theatre to-night. James Richmond Glenroy, "the man with the green gloves," the Reiff Brothers, dancing experts; Potter and Hartwell, athletes; Otto Brothers, German comedians; the Martins and Ferreri's educated [illegible] complete the [illegible].

Sunday evening concerts will also be given at the Majestic Theatre, Boston Theatre and the Bowdoin Square Theatre, filled with interesting acts, the exact number of which it is not possible to announce in this column because the list of attractions was not received in time for publication.

Coming Attractions

Broadhurst and Currie will bring to the Globe on Easter Monday, April 16, a new four-act play of the American frontier life entitled "[illegible]," by J. Macklin [illegible], whose thorough knowledge of the plains is a birthright. The part of Oklahoma[illegible] is played [illegible], formerly a favorite at the Castle Square.

At the Boston Theatre a week from tomorrow evening Andrew Mack, the famous young Irish [illegible], will enter upon a fortnight's engagement in "The Way to Kenmare," his latest comedy success.

Dainty little Lucrece Bingley, in the new musical drama "The Street Singer," will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House next week, with two performances on Patriot's Day.

The monster program which Sousa and his band will render at the Boston Theatre Sunday evening, April 22, will be the big musical treat of the Spring season in this city. This will be Sousa's only visit to Boston this season.

First appearance in Boston of Bertha Kalich as a star under Harrison Grey Fiske's management in Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," will be at the Tremont Theatre on April [illegible] for one week. The company is intact, with a splendid [illegible] auxiliary.

Stage Notes

Bordeverry, the "king of firearms," is featured in "A Yankee Circus on Mars," the big New York Hippodrome show which comes to the Boston Theatre three weeks hence. Among other feats he shoots the buttons off an evening dress worn by his wife, causing her to appear en dishabille.

There is considerable jealousy between the two dogs Eddie Foy uses in "The Earl and the Girl." If you pet one you must pet the other. Zelma Rawlston found this out the other day by showing too much attention to the Skye terrier, and the fox terrier resented it immediately, and the audience saw a dog fight as an added feature of the performance.

* * *

It took two hours' work over the long distance telephone to various cities to arrange for the cancellation of engagements so that "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" might be brought to the Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow to fill the time left vacant by the sudden illness of Ethel Barrymore.

* * *

The last of the Shakespearian productions of the present season at the Castle Square will be made during the week of April 16, "Romeo and Juliet" being the play selected. This tragedy was one of the hits of last season, it will be remembered, and its revival will be more than commonly acceptable. The scenery has been designed by Frank Chouteau Brown, and Mr. Craig and Miss Kemble will appear respectively as Romeo and Juliet.

In the lecture which Burr McIntosh gives of the trip of Secretary Taft to the Philippines he uses over 275 colored views, which are said to be the finest ever made.

* * *

So numerous have been the requests to Houdini for a public performance of his Hindoo needle trick that he has decided to include it in his program for the coming week, which will be his last, at Keith's. This is the trick which mystified over 1,200 scientists at Keith's a few weeks ago.

* * *

Summer prices will go into effect at the Columbia to-morrow night. At the evening performances 250 orchestra chairs will be reserved at 25 cents each, 150 first balcony seats at the same price and the entire second balcony will be reserved for 15 cents.

* * *

Following the Hal Mannering engagement Mme. Kalich appears at the Tremont Theatre for limited period, during which she will act in Maeterlinck's powerful drama "Monna Vanna," and possibly in Zola's "Therese Raquin."

* * *

Possibly many persons wonder why there is so little noise during Keith's, the magicians' performance. Although using a full stage crew and many extras, the [illegible] are all locked in a room under the stage, the electricians "locked in" at the switchboard, and the four men who form the fire squad are trusties who do not leave their station. Keith's ushers all use felt soles.

Oswald Yorke, Ada Rehan's leading man, was in the company that played the final engagement in the history of the old Boston Museum. He cherishes a number of notable souvenirs of that engagement.

The biggest amusement enterprise in New England next summer will be the Airship Tournament, one of the features at Paragon Park. It was not only the largest single [illegible] but the most expensive, but it was the most beautiful. In order to install [illegible] what was last year the Temple of [illegible] building it was necessary to add [illegible] feet to the height and to take almost twice as much floor space as last year of the building which was then the largest on the grounds.

"MAJOR MARJORY"

A Comic Opera Song

This new novelty in song writing is printed to-day as a part of this newspaper.

SONGS that are written to fit the action of comic operas are usually the best examples of song writing, for unless they are characteristic and, perhaps, witty, they are apt to miss their point.

Of course there are exceptions to the rule, and "Major Marjory," the [illegible] "Mexl ana," printed to-day as [illegible] section of this newspaper, certainly [illegible] of them. It is possible, indeed [illegible], for a person with a voice [illegible] range to sing it throughout as [illegible] taking the choral interjections for [illegible] women. But the arrangement [illegible] that an impromptu chorus can [illegible] in a few minutes' [illegible] to [illegible] assistance.

Those who write ballads [illegible] should [illegible] the portion [illegible] [illegible] dash and swing [illegible] songs [illegible].

The idea of "Major Marjory" is [illegible]. The words, including [illegible] solo [illegible] men and chorus [illegible], [illegible] lines for ordinary occasions:

Solo—There once was a story [illegible],
Girls—With epaulet,
Men—And golden braid,
Solo—Was led to the fray a bold brigade,
Girls—A pert coquette!
Men—The bonny maid!
Solo—She carried no weapons of war [illegible] and Girls—No deadly arms,
Men—No armor clad!
Solo—Excepting the [illegible] she had a [illegible]
Girls—Her lovely charms,
Men—That's just as [illegible]
Solo—'Twas hard for man to surrender
To one of the same gender,
But pray, oh, [illegible] could a [illegible] do
Who was pierced [illegible] through?
Refrain—When Marjory dashed on the field,
The enemy were to yield;
She'd a [illegible] the eye that no [illegible] deny
When once [illegible] see Major Marjory!

The witty lines Robert B. Smith have an appropriate melody and a complement by Raymond Hubbell, and the combination is well worth trying.

MME. GADSKI TO SING AT GERICKE BENEFIT CONCERT

[illegible] sale of seats for Mr. Gericke's farewell benefit concert to be given in Symphony Hall on Tuesday evening, April 24, [illegible] begin at the box office [illegible] on next Thursday morning, April 12, [illegible] on Friday morning, the 13th, as [illegible] announced. Mr. Gericke [illegible] to announce his programme [illegible] of Mme. Gadski as soloist [illegible] for she has sent word that she will [illegible] with great pleasure. Unless all signs [illegible] Mr. Gericke will receive at this [illegible] a testimonial of public esteem which [illegible] surprise even his best friends, for the [illegible] for seats, considering the fact the concert is two and a half weeks away, is that of any [illegible] given here this Winter.

[illegible] Friday being Good Friday the [illegible] rehearsal of the Symphony Orchestra [illegible] moved forward [illegible] to Thursday [illegible], the concert taking place as usual on Saturday evening. The season will be commemorated by the performance of the "Good Friday Spell" from the third act of "Parsifal." This twenty-first programme will be unusual because there will be two soloists, while in one number the orchestra will take no part. Wallace Goodrich, the organist, will play Bach's Toccata in F major. The other soloist will be [illegible] Davies, the English tenor.

The production of "Aida" in concert form at Jordan Hall on Thursday evening, April 19, is attracting widespread attention because of the few opportunities afforded in recent years of hearing this Verdi masterpiece in any shape. Few of the modern operas are so well suited as this to a performance without the scenic and costume effects planned for it, and the success which has attended its production in concert form in other cities under Emil Mollenhauer's direction warrants pleasant anticipation regarding that announced here. The box office sale of seats begins at the Symphony Hall box office at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The concert announced for the afternoon of April 19 at Steinert Hall is likely to be very interesting. Recitals on two pianos are not usually occasions of joy, but when two such musicians as Mrs. Thomas Tapper and Miss Anna Lockwood appear together on the same platform something above the ordinary may be expected.

For the sixth and last concert of the Boston Symphony quartet, which will be given in Jordan Hall to-morrow evening, Professor Hess has prepared what may be considered the most important novelty of chamber music of the season, Hugo Wolf's quartet for strings in D minor. This work has never been played here in Boston. An explanation of this is possibly to be found in the extraordinary difficulty of the work. The assisting artist will be Miss Susan Metcalfe, a soprano, who will then make her first public appearance in Boston.

The Carolyn Belcher String Quartet, composed of four young women ambitious and gifted, will give their annual recital in Steinert Hall on Monday evening, April 23. Otto Fritzsche, clarinetist from the Symphony Orchestra, will assist them.

Mary Desmond, the English contralto, will make her first appearance before the Boston public in Steinert Hall on Tuesday afternoon, April 24. She will be assisted by Miss Harriet A. Shaw, harpist, and Alfred de Voto, pianist.

Danderine

GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR

AND WE CAN

PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor.

That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:—

You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.

Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. per bottle

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

ARREST FOR INSURANCE REBATE.

JAIL OFFICIAL FACES ESCAPE PLOT CHARGE

GRAND JURY CLEARS UP IMPORTANT WORK

An insurance agent under indictment and arrest as a result of Thomas W. Lawson's charges, a former jail official under indictment and arrest as a result of a recent escape from the Charles Street Jail and the personal investigation of District Attorney Moran, and a secret indictment, believed by politicians and lawyers to be of Robert G. Proctor, private secretary to United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, was the sensational result of the report from the Grant Jury, after a hard week's work by District Attorney John B. Moran.

Frederick F. Hockaday, agent for the New York Life and Mutual Life Insurance Companies, charged with having allowed rebates on insurance policies in return for the use of the proxies, was arrested on the indictment and found bail at police headquarters.

Charles R. Hatch, a former night watchman at the Charles Street Jail, is charged with having assisted in the escape of George H. Gaskill from the jail on the night of February 18. His indictment is the result of the District Attorney's immediate and personal investigation, after the BOSTON AMERICAN had called his attention to the evidence of official collusion in Gaskill's escape.

"John Doe" Proceeding.

The third indictment is a "John Doe" proceeding, and the name of the person indicted will not be officially made known until the arrest under it has taken place. Lawyers, politicians and others at the county courthouse yesterday freely stated it as their belief that the person under indictment was Secretary Proctor, who had been charged with improper conduct by John C. Bestgen. This was not denied nor admitted by District-Attorney Moran.

It is said that Mr. Proctor is now on his way to Boston from Washington, and if it be true that he has been indicted, it is supposed he will give himself up, prepared to furnish immediate bail, upon his arrival in Boston.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury James B. Reynolds, who, as executive clerk of the Republican State Committee in 1904, had been requested by the District Attorney to appear before the Grand Jury, arrived in town last night, having been delayed by an official engagement in New York, of which he had notified Mr. Moran by telephone. He declined to discuss the case, but said he was ready to appear as a witness whenever he is wanted.

Gave $200 to Campaign.

Bestgen, who made the charge against Secretary Proctor, declares that in 1904 he contributed $200 to the Republican Campaign fund, and that the printed lists of contributors to the fund, which are required by law, did not contain his name. He says that at that time he was attempting to secure the consulate at Solingen, Germany, and expected to be successful. What criminal charge could be made against Mr. Proctor in this case is not known. If the indictment is against him it will become public upon his arrest.

It is expected that the cases of Hockaday and Hatch will come before the Superior Court to-morrow.

The indictment against the insurance agent was found on the evidence gathered by Thomas W. Lawson, which has already been published.

It is alleged that Hockaday rebated. Mr. Lawson hoped to prosecute the officials of the insurance companies, but, finding that legal technicalities interferred with the tracing of the illegal acts to them, wished to withdraw his case. This Mr. Moran would not allow, saying that he was in his office to enforce the laws, whether they struck a big man or a little one.

"Undoubtedly Mr. Moran's attitude is right," said Mr. Lawson last night to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, "but I am rather sorry. I had no desire, when I gathered the evidence, to prosecute some poor devil of an agent. It was the head devils I wanted to get—and will get before I am through."

Each Gives Bail.

Hockaday is thirty years old and lives at No. 7 [illegible] Park, Roxbury. He has an office at Room 340, Exchange Building. He was bailed soon after his arrest.

Hatch, who was indicted for enabling Gaskill to escape from jail, was held in

TIDAL WAVE RUMOR SAID THE AZORES WERE DEVASTATED

World Startled by Unconfirmed Report of Disaster to the Great Isles

The entire world was startled last night, by a circumstantial dispatch from Berlin to the effect that the German government had heard that the Azores had been devastated by an enormous tidal wave, and that the list of dead would run into the thousands.

Lloyds' at London, received the news at midnight, and sent it out. No confirmation of the report followed, and all attempts to verify the story failed. The German cable to the Azores is reported as working all right.

It is impossible to learn where the story started, the original source of information—"the German government"—being too broad to admit of detailed attempts to trace it to its source.

From many cities where natives of the Azores live there came anxious queries as to details of the supposed disaster.

Harvard Professor Rallies From Death Stupor and Raps the Doctors.

Frightened Employe Caught Chief Mullen in His Auto, but Blaze Was All Out.

Guests at the fashionable Hotel Touraine, who heard the clamor of fire engines and other apparatus outside the hotel at 8.30 o'clock last night and asked where the fire was, were startled to learn that it had been in the hotel itself, but that it had been already extinguished.

One of the most agitated persons in the hotel was the employe who discovered the fire, which started in a trunk in the baggage room. He dashed frantically into the street to summon the fire department, and was just in time to detect Fire Chief Mullen sliding around the hotel corner in his new blue automobile.

"Hi, Chief," yelled the employe, "the hotel's afire." Then he sprang to the nearest fire alarm and yanked in a call before the Chief's chauffeur had whirled the department auto around and landed the chief at the hotel steps.

The chief found that other baggage room employes had put out the fire, keeping the damage inside of $10.

CARNEGIE GIVES AWAY KISSES TO SOUTHERN WOMEN

"You Are Such a Fine Looking Lady," He Said, and He Couldn't Help It.

Atlanta, Ga., April 7.—Andrew Carnegie is not yet so far advanced in years nor weighed down by gifts of libraries as to have forgotten the deliciousness of a kiss.

Mrs. J. T. Richberg and another lady were introduced to Mr. Carnegie by Mr. Phelps Stokes in the Iron King's library in the presence of a throng of visitors. Mrs. Richberg congratulated Mr. Carnegie ecstatically upon the speech he had made on the South and upon Southern women.

"You are such a fine looking lady," said Mr. Carnegie with enthusiasm, "that I am going to kiss you for all the rest here," and with that, before Mrs. Richberg knew what was happening, he kissed her fair and square. Then Mrs. Richberg's friend was kissed, while a distinct flutter was noticed among the younger beauties.

"I wouldn't take anything for it," proudly said Mrs. Richberg. "When I congratulated him upon his speech he just threw his arms around my neck and kissed me before I could think. Oh, he's a fine fellow." Until Mr. Carnegie left for the Governor's mansion the two ladies who had been kissed were the cynosure of all eyes. Mrs. Richberg was one of many Atlanta ladies who were kissed by Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, "hero of the Merrimac" in 1899 in this city.

VESUVIUS DOOMS 4,300.

Italian Village Completely Destroyed by Death-Dealing Lava Streams.

FATE OF POPULATION IS STILL IN DOUBT

ROADS FILLED WITH FEAR-CRAZED REFUGEES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Naples, April 7. The white hot lava from the belching crater of Mt. Vesuvius this afternoon completely destroyed the town of Bosco Trecase. The town had a population of 4,300. None of the inhabitants had abandoned the town before it was destroyed.

It was believed that all those in the town of Bosco Trecase had left, but now it appears that some of those who had witnessed previous severe eruptions of Vesuvius misjudged the violence of the present disturbance and remained in their houses.

The destroyed town presented no more of an obstacle in the path of the irresistible stream than if the whole town had been an aggregation of houses of cards. The lava seemed to come to an infinitesimal pause. Then it swept over houses, streets and public buildings and churches. All were utterly obliterated.

OTHER CITIES THREATENED.

In the city of Torre del Greco, which has a population of 30,000, terror reigns supreme. That city and Ottanjo, with a population of 20,000, are directly in the path of the streams of lava. Bosco Trecase lies between the volcano and Pompeii, the buried city which was also buried by one of the great eruptions of the volcano. It is the nearest to the belching crater and naturally the first to be reached by the lava stream.

The peasants and villagers are panic-stricken and are fleeing from their homes. Naples is the mecca of the alarmed country people and they have been flocking into the city in great numbers. The influx of refugees began yesterday afternoon and a steadily growing stream of them has continued to pour into the city ever since. The traffic on some of the roads leading into Naples is so great that the highways have become blocked, and it is with difficulty that the carts and wagons are able to make their way.

OTHER CRATERS OPENED.

New craters have opened and from them the lava is pouring down the mountain sides in wide streams. It is impossible to tell how long the flow will continue, and this has increased the alarm of the inhabitants of the whole country near the mountain.

On the side of the crater toward Pompeii, the flow has divided, while other craters have opened on Vesuvius. The streams have gone more than two miles. The lava emits terrific heat and a horrible odor.

The fate which befell Pompeii and Herculaneum over 1,900 years ago seems to be that of the villages and towns in the neighborhood of the eruption to-day.

Whole families near the danger zone are terror-stricken, and artillery carts have been sent to help the fugitives to places of safety.

The women of the villages kneel as they flee from the moulton lava and with arms upraised invoke a miracle to stay the stream. The peasants throughout the region are praying continuously to St. Ann to save them from destruction.

Cardinal Joseph Prisco, archbishop of Naples, has ordered special prayers to be offered for the safety of those who are in danger.

VOLCANO'S PAST.

The story of Vesuvius is one of disaster. The first record of the volcano's eruption dates back to 63 A. D., when Nero ruled Rome. Herculaneum and Pompeii were partially destroyed. During the reign of Titus, Vesuvius broke loose in her fury and completely buried the cities of Pompeii, Herculaneum and Stabias. On December 16, 1631, more than 3,000 persons lost their lives in a severe earthquake and flow of lava that extended as far as Tarentum and destroyed Bosco Trecase, the town which suffered to-day, and other towns in the vicinity.

A violent eruption occurred in 1900, since which date the volcano has been almost constantly active. Only last February the flow of lava destroyed the railroad that climbs to the top of the mountain. But it was repaired and sightseers have continued to venture up the sides of the volcano.

QUARREL ALLEGED TO HAVE CAUSED TRAGEDY

MYSTERIOUS LETTER ADMITTED BY COURT

FOUR JURORS COMPLAIN OF SLIGHT ILLNESSES

Augusta, Me., April 7.—Miss Marian Carey, the sixteen-year-old girl of whom it is contended by the State Mrs. Alice F. Carey was so jealous that she lured Charles D. Northey, Jr., to her home and killed him, took the witness stand to-day and faced the woman who is on trial.

Miss Carey told the story of her acquaintance with Charley Northey, who had begun to pay her attention about four months before the tragedy took place. While the girl was on the stand Mrs. Cooper, with flushed face, never took her eyes from the features of the witness.

Miss Carey told of the first meeting between Mrs. Cooper and Northey in public, and of an anonymous letter that she received written in a woman's hand.

Miss Carey said that she, Rosie Clifford and Charley Northey went together to the Baptist Church on Sunday evening, October 8, and that Northey and Mrs. Cooper sat together and talked all the time of the service. That Northey repulsed the woman was the emphatic testimony of the girl.

When the trio went to the church, Miss Carey said, Charley went to the rear of the room and stood up. Mrs. Cooper was not there when they went in, but she soon arrived. This is what happened, said Miss Carey.

QUARRELLED IN CHURCH?

"Mrs. Cooper came in and sat down five or six pews behind me. Her husband sat further to the front. I turned around and saw her beckon to Charley Northey, who was standing at the back of the church. He shook his head.

"Then she beckoned again, but he did not go to her. Then she went to him and took his arm and led him to where she had been sitting. They sat down together."

"After that, what did you see?" the girl was asked.

"Every time I looked around she was talking to him. Sometimes she nodded."

It was at this meeting that it was testified by other witnesses Mrs. Cooper and Northey quarreled; that she became red in the face, her eyes flashed and she shook her head angrily.

At this meeting Mrs. Cooper, it has been testified, made the engagement with Northey to meet her at her home on Tuesday afternoon, when he met his

NAME CANDIDATE AGAINST CODMAN

The resignation of James M. Codman, chairman of the Brookline Board of Selectmen, was practically assured last evening, when it was announced by his friends that Philip S. Parker, a former Boston attorney, and a former candidate for the Board, had been selected as a candidate for Mr. Codman's place.

At a meeting at the residence of Alfred D. Chandler the matter of Mr. Codman's resignation was discussed.

It is said that Mr. Codman has his letter of resignation prepared, and it will be sent to the Board of Selectmen this week.

PARK STREET CLUB DEBATES INSURANCE

After a lively debate last night between the members of the Park Street Club of the Park Street Church the members, by an overwhelming majority vote, decided that the business of life insurance should be controlled by the government. John T. Hayes and H. Chester Story spoke in the affirmative, Otto Abrahamsen and Clarence H. Waldo in the negative.

LYNN DOCTOR WEDS SECRETLY PRETTY BRUNETTE.

Lynn people learned yesterday of the secret marriage of Miss Agnes L. Fitzgerald, a handsome brunette, who has been bookkeeper in a Lynn market, to Dr. Charles H. Worthen of Lynn, the wedding taking place in Lynn Friday. After being married the bride told her family, saying that she and her husband were wedded secretly to avoid the prominence of a public ceremony. The first member of the family she told was her brother, Paymaster Edward J. Fitzgerald of the General Electric Company. He telephoned their mother who was visiting in Salem.

Mrs. Worthen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fitzgerald, of No. 84 Moulton street. She had received attention from Dr. Worthen for two years. Dr. Worthen, whose office is at No. 33 Mall street, Lynn, is a Protestant and his bride is a Catholic. He secured a marriage license Friday morning in Lynn City Hall and pledged the clerk to secrecy till they announced it.

13-YEAR-OLD BOY ROVER IS MISSING

The 13-year-old Joseph Brodrick is missing. His relatives think that his "roving disposition" is the cause, and are expecting a letter from him from some far distant place.

Joseph's home is with Mrs. Julia Sullivan, at No. 11 Rollins street. He attended the Rice Grammar School. He is of medium complexion, with blue eyes. When he left home he wore a gray corduroy cap, a black reefer, black shoes and black stockings.

TEACHERS WILL GO TO EUROPE IN SUPERB STYLE.

STATEROOMS ON LINERS ARE ALREADY RESERVED

Itineraries of Prize Summer Tours in Europe Best Possible.

Here are all the facts about the tours and cash prizes in the teachers' free European Tour election.

Forty women teachers will be given the Summer tours abroad by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. The readers of the AMERICAN will decide by their votes who the forty teachers are to be. The election is divided into four independent divisions, with part of the tours awarded to each.

As for the tours themselves, they are superb. The teachers elected will go "first class," with all that that term implies in foreign travel, and their every expense will be paid by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. The splendid staterooms are already reserved and the accommodations at all European hotels will be the best, carriages will be provided for comfortable sightseeing, guides will be engaged, and every other provision made for the happiness of the forty New England women representatives.

There will be ten "GRAND TOURS" lasting sixty-six days and embracing all the great capitals and show places of Europe. There will be ten so-called "European tours" lasting forty-five days. And there will be twenty "Shakespearean Tours" of thirty-three days of travel.

Rich Cash Prizes.

In addition to these tours for the forty women teachers elected, the six successful ones receiving the highest number of votes, irrespective of their division, will receive a total of $1,000 in cash. The first six teachers will thus be very liberally recompensed for any efforts they have made to gain votes. The teacher securing the highest vote will be awarded $500, the second $200, the third $150, the fourth $75, the fifth $50 and the sixth $25.

The voting will cease and the contest end on June 24.

The first teachers will sail from Boston on July 5.

Twenty of the winning teachers will go in this first delegation on July 5, sailing on the magnificent speedy ocean White Star liner Arabic. Of these twenty, ten will be winners of the "Grand Tour" and ten of the "European Tour." The members of the different tours will part company when they reach London, although they will visit many of the same points, and may meet several times in their journeys.

The remaining twenty teachers will sail from Boston aboard the splendid liner Devonian on July 11.

NEWS NOTES OF THE CONTEST

Roxbury is the very liveliest territory in the Greater Boston Division of the election. It contains six popular candidates, including Miss Rachel Rosnosky, the city leader, Miss Anna L. Maguire, Miss Mary A. Haverty, Miss Madeline Driscoll, Miss Isabelle M. Brown and Miss Annie Shaw. The people of Roxbury give tangible evidence of their love and confidence in their school teachers.

S[illegible] of the Lincoln School in Medford [illegible] to be hoarding up the [illegible] in the hope of selling them for a [illegible] to be applied to decorating [illegible] Special Ballot removes any [illegible] sell coupons such as has [illegible] contests. [illegible] given against sending [illegible] names and addresses [illegible] of papers to gain [illegible] votes and orders are thrown [illegible] whenever the orders are proved not [illegible]. The rules of the contest also [illegible] prevent the purchase of papers by wholesale to gain votes. This makes the contest the very fairest possible.

"Vote Brokers'" Occupation Gone.

[illegible] brokers who have thrived by their [illegible] newspaper ballot contests [illegible] finding "hard sledding" in the AMERICAN'S European Tour Election. No candidates or supporters of teachers need pay [illegible] for votes, as it would be absurd to [illegible] allowance of extra votes is made on the Special Ballot orders for the SUNDAY AMERICAN. The European tours will go to the most popular teachers, not the teacher having the most money. A little intelligent endeavor among her friends is all any popular teacher needs to rise high in the list.

Stealing of coupons out of AMERICANS lying on doorsteps is prevalent in some parts. The editor will be grateful for evidence that will lead to the detection of such thieves.

The teachers' tour election is wiping out boundary lines throughout New England in a glorious fashion. Readers of the AMERICAN in northern Maine are voting for teachers in southern Connecticut, and vice versa. Some of the candidates are winning support by letter campaigns, notifying distant friends of their candidacy and inviting support through the coupons and Special Ballot orders.

Many of the candidates in the tour [illegible] called upon the editor at election [illegible] during recess week, preparatory to the more mature campaign of the next few weeks. Other of the teachers in the lists took vacation trips to Washington and elsewhere, some of them losing several points by their outing.

BOSTON BEGINS BACKING HER TEACHERS STRONGLY

City People Vote for Favorites to Receive European Tours in Sunday American Election.

Boston has begun to back its favorite school teachers for the prize European Tours. Many city teachers are receiving votes, and more are coming.

At the close of a most eventful week in the European Tour Election, which will determine the forty women school teachers of New England who will be given magnificent Summer tours abroad by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, the following-named are the leaders in the divisions of the balloting:

Boston—Miss Rachel Rosnosky of the Lewis School, Roxbury.

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont—Miss Katherine L. Moynihan, Cole School, Berlin, N. H.

The voting during the week, which was the Spring recess of the schools in Boston, was the heaviest since the European Tour Election was announced by the SUNDAY AMERICAN, five weeks ago.

There were numerous interesting changes yesterday.

DELUGE OF SPECIAL BALLOTS.

Miss Idella Seldis, a popular teacher of Eliot School, was forced up from sixth to second place in the Boston list by the votes of loyal boy supporters, led by Henry L. Isenberg, who cast over 20,000 votes for her by Special Ballot orders.

Miss Madeline Foppiano of Washington School was a close second in gaining, her friends scoring 11,050 votes and advancing her from seventh to fourth position.

Miss Laura Lamprey of Melrose gained 9,000 votes, but was put back from second to third position by Miss Seldis's phenomenal gain.

Miss Anna L. Maguire of West Roxbury made a splendid gain, and went forward into eighth position in the list. Miss W. May Nash of Cambridge passed Miss Kate Roud of the West End. Miss Mary Tenney made progress under a strong vote.

Roxbury is giving the best support to its favorite teachers of any section of Greater Boston. Beside the leader, Miss Rosnosky, Roxbury has a half-dozen other candidates well supported by the votes of their friends.

Other sections should back their favorite teachers, for there is still time for new candidates to enter, and twenty of the tours are to be awarded the Metropolitan District teachers.

Miss Bidleman Leads Again

The battle for first place in the Massachusetts Division, outside of Boston, took another sensational turn in the voting returns yesterday.

Mrs. Nellie Bidleman of Worcester, forced out of her leadership by Miss Ellen de S. Barrett, of Newburyport, Saturday, regained her position by scoring a heavy vote by the Special Ballots.

Miss Annie V. McGourty passed Miss Alice J. O'Gara and took third place.

All through the Massachusetts list the gains were steady, Misses Edith Farrington of Lowell, Grace D. Hammond of West Newbury and Katherine McCarthy of Worcester, each jumping up two points in the tally sheet.

The balloting in Rhode Island has become terrific, as this division has several women instructors of great and almost equal popularity.

Miss Oslin Gaining.

Miss Mary E. Oslin of Providence took a great stride toward the chief position held by Miss Agnes Crofwell in yesterday's voting.

The State of Connecticut and smaller Rhode Island places refused to yield first place to Providence without a struggle, and yesterday Miss [illegible] Allen of Bristol, R. I., by a [illegible] vote, went up from fourth place to striking distance of the lead.

Miss Gertrude Brennan, of Woonsocket, R. I., also advanced on the metropolitan representatives, passing Miss Annie F. Adams, of Providence, for fifth position.

Miss Helen F. Martin, of Pawtucket, also advanced a point.

Among the Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont teachers, Miss Nellie M. Worth of Brewer, was the chief gainer. Miss Worth crowded Miss Mabel Gilman, of South Portland, out of sixth place.

Misses Katherine Moynihan, Isabel Katson, Mary G. Connelly and Nellie Beiger held their positions in the "High Five."

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of the American May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly" begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

I was out of health and run down generally, had no appetite, was dizzy and suffered with headache most of the time. I did not know that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, but somehow felt that they might be, and I began taking Swamp-Root. There is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the spot and drives disease out of the system. It has cured me, making me stronger and better in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers. Gratefully yours,
MRS. A. L. WALKER, 331 East Linden St., Atlanta, Ga.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering and many fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; make your head ache and back ache, cause indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, make you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

How to Find Out

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE.—So successful is Swamp-Root in promptly curing even the most distressing cases of kidney, liver or bladder troubles, that to prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Boston Sunday American.

COOPER JURY WILL DISAGREE, SAY OBSERVERS

INNOCENT? GUILTY?

These Points Are Urged Against Mrs. Cooper

That she was deeply in love with Northey.

That she did not want him to go with Marian Carey.

That she quarrelled with Northey at the Baptist church and made an engagement for him to go to her house.

That on Monday, the next day, she bought a revolver.

Points Urged to Prove Her Innocence.

That the church talk was about Northey ceasing his visits to her home.

That she bought the revolver because she was afraid of Charley.

That the boy was killed accidentally while trying to get the weapon.

That the course of the bullet indicates the weapon was held in Northey's hand.

That there were powder marks on the scalp and some of the hair singed.

PEN PICTURE OF JURY THAT WILL DECIDE WOMAN'S FATE

By Eleanor Ames.

Augusta, Me., April 7—Hereafter, when a juror is called to qualify for duty in a murder trial, he will undoubtedly be asked: "Are you a patient man?" Upon his answer will depend his acceptance. If he hesitates, he is either lost or favored, which ever way he looks at it, for one side or the other will be sure to challenge him. The long drawn out and hard fought battle which has for three weeks made remarkable the trial of Alice F. Cooper, accused of the murder of Charles E. Northey, Jr., has tested to [illegible] of the twelve men who will [illegible] hold her fate in their hands.

For over three weeks they have led the most lonely and secluded lives [illegible] surrounded by all the bustle and hustle of the city keyed to concert pitch with excitement. They have not seen their homes, their wives, their children. They have not read a daily or weekly newspaper. Their home letters have been carefully edited so as to give them only the [illegible] of hearthstone news and no outside information. They have had no companionship, except that which they find in each other. Were they prisoners serving sentence for crime, they could scarcely lead a more monotonous and closely guarded existence.

Close Ears to Gossip.

Two by two, in charge of deputy sheriffs, they go from their hotel to the courtroom, back to the hotel with a brisk walk about town—a walk during which they must close their eyes and ears to anything bearing on the trial—and weekly church going their only diversions.

And in striking contrast to their imprisonment is the perfect freedom of the respondent, Mrs. Cooper, who, under $10,000 bail, comes and goes as she pleases. The long strain is beginning to tell on the jurors, for they are all men used to the most active of lives and to hard work in the open air.

It is a solid substantial looking body of men who will settle Alice Cooper's future. They are honest, strong, hearty, all married with but one exception, all sensible, calm, cool-headed and unemotional. The two most conspicuous [illegible] of the twelve sit side by side in the front row. They are Andrew J. Tosier, Jr., and J. W. Norton.

STRONG MEN OF THE JURY.

It seems [illegible] whose influence will [illegible] strong. They have paid the strictest attention to every word of testimony. They have listened with appreciation of its value. Mr. Tosier, who is the second on the left in the front row, is a large man with sweeping black eyes and [illegible] and hair. He frequently wears a bright red necktie, which lends a [illegible] spot of color to the jury box.

Mr. Tosier looks at Mrs. Cooper frequently when the testimony is particularly interesting, and studies her keenly. Mr. Norton, who sits just beyond him, is an older man, but of much the same physique [illegible] head, well marked features [illegible] in his long [illegible] eyebrows and a very long [illegible] gray mustache which he [illegible]. His eyes are invariably fixed sharply upon the one speaking. When there is a momentary quiet, he studies Mr. Cooper. I think Mr. Norton admires Mr. Heath immensely, for there is a perceptible gleam of satisfaction in his eyes when [illegible] is made.

The only bachelor on the jury, a young [illegible] Northey's own age, Russell Chase, sits nearest to Mrs. Cooper. He, too, takes a deep interest in every word of the testimony. Back of him sits E. O. Tibbetts, who looks like [illegible] of the jury, so far as age goes. Robert Towle, who sits in the middle of the back row, has a keen sense of humor. Frequently during the testimony of the berry pickers, and the other givers of neighborhood gossip, his face would be wreathed with smiles and his eye would twinkle as he rocked back and forth on the rear legs of his chair.

Has an Air of Alertness.

The most important man of all, C. H. Stevens, the foreman, sits at the end of the first row, nearest to the witness stand. He is a man whom I know would deliberate a long time, but having once made up his mind, would be as unchanging as the everlasting hills. He is the town treasurer of Readfield, the scene of the Mattie Hackett murder, and lives not so very far from the homes of the Hackett and Raymond families. He is a small man with an interestingly wrinkled face, and shrewd, sharp [illegible].

Never has a jury had more gruesome details and horrible exhibits for consideration than this. They have each in turn [illegible] Charley Northey's skull, filled with the preserved brain of another man. They have [illegible] that loathsome bit of blackened scalp, which they have had to give their closest scrutiny. They have had blood spots and bullets to look over. For nearly ten days there was [illegible] [illegible] experience. Then without warning the testimony changed almost from the grave to the ridiculous and they had the idle chatter of [illegible] to listen to. It is hard to tell which part of the testimony has worn upon their nerves the most keenly. They don't like brains and skulls and scalps. Indeed one or two of them [illegible] them [illegible] they passed the awful [illegible]. But the gossip had disgusted them.

When [illegible] told of playing the [illegible] of the twelve pairs of eyes [illegible] If the [illegible] was Mrs. Cooper she [illegible] with a world of appeal do her great dark eyes sweep [illegible].

When the State [illegible] its case completed [illegible] the defence and see how strong a proof of innocence can be [illegible] the proof is beyond question.

Careful Study of Evidence, and of the Effect on Jury in Northey Murder Trial Leads to Belief That Conviction Will Not Be Secured by the State.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL CHAIN OF THREE LINKS FORGED

Augusta, Me., April 7.—A very careful and impartial study of the evidence that has been produced by the State in the trial of Mrs. Alice F. Cooper for the alleged murder of Charles E. Northey, Jr., in connection with a close observation of its effect upon the twelve men who are to decide the young accused woman's fate, has led those who have attended the trial from the start to the firm belief that the jury will disagree as to a verdict.

Case Unduly Prolonged.

It is believed by those who have made [illegible] study of the Cooper case that [illegible] prolonged. The circumstantial [illegible] the State has been trying [illegible] the woman has only [illegible] in which it was [illegible] if any more. [illegible] These are the fateful [illegible]:

Tuesday, October 10, when the boy kept what proved to be his death tryst.

The State claims that jealousy was the motive of the alleged crime. It is asserted that Mrs. Cooper was in love with Charley Northey and that he was about to break away from her for Marian Carey, a girl of sixteen, to whom he had been paying attention since the July previous to the tragedy. The evidence of jealousy upon the part of Mrs. Cooper is found in the testimony as to what took place at the Christian Endeavor meeting at the South Windsor Baptist Church on the evening of October 8.

When Mrs. Cooper left that church she carried with her a promise of Charley Northey to call at her home on the following Tuesday. And as she journeyed home that thought filled her mind. Before she reached her residence the idea of buying a revolver occurred to her.

The next day was Monday, the day before she was to see Charley Northey, perhaps for the last time. What did Mrs. Cooper do in anticipation of that visit? She came to Augusta and bought the revolver with which the young man was killed. Did Mrs. Cooper buy that revolver with the [illegible] of committing [illegible] unless Northey promised to give up Marian Carey and give her his entire devotion? Or did she buy it to protect herself as she afterwards claimed?

On Tuesday afternoon, according to promise, Charley Northey went to the Cooper home. What took place in that house after that only Mrs. Cooper knows. She has made a statement about it. Has she told all?

"Charley Has Shot Himself."

The first person to know of the shooting of young Northey besides Mrs. Cooper, was her husband, Edward Cooper, who was working in his blacksmith shop. Mrs. Cooper ran out of the house in a very excited manner and, according to Cooper's statement, made to several county officials, said:

"Charley has shot himself, go for a doctor."

This was Mrs. Cooper's first statement of what took place in that room, of which she is the only living witness. She has never made any other, so far as is known, except to add when questioned by the [illegible]: "I don't think I ever could [illegible]." What she meant by this statement was that she did not think that she [illegible] have been impressed to do the [illegible].

Mrs. Cooper will [illegible] on the witness stand, tell what took place in her house that October afternoon. What the jury has already heard in evidence is the story as Mrs. Cooper told it two days after the tragedy to a detective and some of the county officials. Her statement was taken down by a stenographer who read it in court from the witness stand. Here it is:

Northey's Body Exhumed.

"Tuesday afternoon we (Northey and Mrs. Cooper) talked it all over and I said it was goodby for the last time. He put his arms about me and kissed me goodby. He felt the revolver and he quickly pulled it from my pocket. We both grabbed it and it must have gone off. He was stronger, and in a minute he had it. Then I ran. I rushed for my husband. I screamed, and he says I said Charlie has shot himself."

Does the jury believe that the tragedy could have happened in this way? Was Northey's death the result of accident, as Mrs. Cooper says, or did she shoot him?

What happened after the tragedy in the way of medical examination has taken up a great deal of the time of the trial of the case. But will it have any effect on the jury?

The defence will show that if Northey killed himself the most natural way for him to hold the weapon would have been just the way it is claimed it was held. The defense will show that he could have held it a foot away from his head or even a less distance, and there would have been no powder or singed hair.

It is the opinion of those who have followed the trial that this medical testimony will not carry any vital weight with the jury. The testimony was so technical in [illegible] and even contradictory, as given by the State's witnesses, that it will play a very small part in the consideration of the jury.

Then what remains? The love story of the young and pretty married woman and the stalwart young man. Did Mrs. Cooper really think so much of Northey that she would rather have killed him than see him leave her for another?

Others there are, it is believed, who are [illegible] convinced that the State has utterly failed to make out a case and that the accused woman is innocent. A disagreement is the logical result.

SWEETHEART TELLS OF NORTHEY'S DEATH LOVE.

death. [illegible] next day—Monday—Mrs. Cooper came to Augusta and bought the weapon with which Northey was killed.

THE MYSTERIOUS LETTER.

The contents of the letter received by Miss Carey [illegible] last November, and quoted by her [illegible] were admitted in evidence by Justice Peabody, despite the strenuous objections of her counsel, Attorney Heath.

This is all that Marion Carey could remember of it: "Dear May: Do you know that Charley Northey is sitting up nights playing games with Mrs. Cooper, after Mr. Cooper has retired? A Friend."

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, with their two older children, Lore and Velma, who have been with their mother in Augusta for a few days, will drive out to Chelsea tomorrow to see the younger boy, Ralph. The children will then go on to their grandmother's to stay until they are wanted to testify in court. This will probably be Wednesday or Thursday.

Four of the jurors complained to Sheriff Ham tonight of feeling ill. Dr. George R. Campbell was summoned, and he found Andrew Tozier suffering from rheumatism, and C. H. Stevens, the foreman, Russell Chase and Edwin R. Staine suffering from colds. None of the men was seriously ill.

MRS. RAYMOND ANXIOUS TO COMFORT MRS. COOPER

Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, at the home of her parents, in Turner, Me., facing possible accusation before the Grand Jury of knowledge of the manner in which Mattie Hackett met her death in Readfield, hopes that Mrs. Alice Cooper will be acquitted of the charge of killing Charles E. Northey, Jr.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN sent a representative to Mrs. Raymond, asking her to attend the trial of Mrs. Cooper and express her opinion of the case. Mrs. Raymond's attorneys, however, believing that she should remain as much as possible in seclusion, vetoed the proposition.

To the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN Mrs. Raymond expresses her belief in the innocence of Mrs. Cooper. She says:

"Mrs. Cooper never killed that boy any more than I killed Mattie Hackett."

Then she added: "[illegible] is going to step [illegible] woman I mean [illegible] have hounded Mrs. Cooper and [illegible]."

Mrs. Raymond was asked if she would go to Augusta and see Mrs. Cooper. She said she would be glad to do so. She said that she was anxious to give Mrs. Cooper any help that she could.

"Why," she said with feeling, "she is more to be pitied than I am. She was called upon to suffer more [illegible] woman is called upon to suffer. Think of that skull in the trial and the brains that were fitted into it. Why, I do not see how any woman on earth could stand the ordeal."

"Are you willing to go to Augusta today and meet Mrs. Cooper?"

"Gladly," replied Mrs. Raymond. "I want to comfort that woman, as I know she would try to comfort me if she were in a position to do so."

Mrs. Raymond discussed her own prospective case freely. The authorities asked her to go to Augusta a few days ago and she refused. She will go when she is legally summoned. She has heard that she will be wanted on April 18.

"As for me," said Mrs. Raymond, "I have suffered through [illegible] people just as Mrs. Cooper has [illegible] but my friends have [illegible]. I have no fear now when I [illegible] them in the face. They [illegible] kind."

Mrs. Raymond seemed to think a moment and then she said:

"There are moments in a woman's life when she feels everything. I have lived through them as I have read of Mrs. Cooper's anguish. I have put myself in her place. But to me there can come none of the horrible pictures that dim her eyes. I cannot see one dying before my eyes. I cannot dream of that picture that presented itself when Northey fell dead at her feet. I can only know how it feels to be accused."

Proud of Her Baby.

As Mrs. Raymond was talking her baby woke up and cried. She ran to the crib and picked up a handsome child of seven months. Then turning to me she said:

"When they said I killed Mattie Hackett this baby was not born. Look at him. Does he show any trace of having passed through any such tragedy as the murder of a young girl? Isn't he pretty and plump and healthy and everything else that is good?

"They even took Mrs. Cooper's baby from her in the trial. It seemed cruel, uncalled for and unjust. Why has that little one no right to plead for mamma in his baby tongue? In all the world, he is the [illegible] her welfare. [illegible] to her."

Then she turned to her baby.

"They will never take me away from you, will they, darling?" she exclaimed.

"I wanted to go to Mrs. Cooper," continued Mrs. Raymond. "I wanted to tell her how I sympathize with her. Perhaps she might not have cared for it. I think she would, though, and I am sure were I on trial she would extend the same sympathy to me. And if I am, when she is free, I hope she will come to me and say a cheering [illegible].

"I don't know [illegible], but I know [illegible] the whole state and after all I am only a woman. And think, if anything should happen to baby!"

Has Given Up Her Home.

Mrs. Raymond has given up her home in Readfield because of all the talk, and now divides her time between her parents' home, that of Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Hobbs in Turner, and [illegible] of her grand[illegible] Readfield.

[illegible] has to cheer her is the absolute confidence of her relatives [illegible] believe in her implicitly.

"Why," said her mother, "they sent the other day for her to go to Augusta. They wanted to talk about the case."

"Did she go?"

"Why, of course she did not go. She will not go on any such authority as that. When she is really wanted they can summon her [illegible]. She is [illegible] and [illegible] the right that any one, high or low, rich or poor, has in the State of Maine."

The representative of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN drove [illegible] Mrs. Raymond to [illegible] with her attorney, Mr. Mc[illegible]. She came out of the office and said that the lawyer would not permit her to go to the Cooper trial.

"It would not be well for her to go to this trial," said the lawyer. "But she is as innocent of the murder of Mattie Hackett as you are."

A PRETTY MATRON OWES HEALTH TO PE-RU-NA.

MRS. ANNA N. KAISER,

Had Suffered Severely From Pelvic Catarrh—Cannot Praise Peruna Too Highly—Read Her Letter.

Mrs. Anna N. Kaiser, Two Rivers, Wis., was a sufferer from pelvic catarrh to such an extent that she could scarcely do her own work. In describing her symptoms, she wrote:

"I have such terrible backaches and pains below my shoulder blades, way down my back and across my hips and at times pains in the pelvic organs, so that I am not able to lie down or sleep. I also have pains through my left side and am afraid I may be getting heart trouble."

"I feel much stronger and do not get nervous as I used to. The pain is entirely gone, except when I work a little too hard. The medicine has done me wonderful good. I am taking Peruna and Manalin. My bowels are also in good condition."

Reports Her Cure.

"I must drop you a line to let you know that I am well now and cured with your medicine. I must thank you for the advice you gave me.

"The medicine is something wonderful. I cannot praise it enough for the good it has done for me and I hope many others will be freed from their suffering.

"I have advised others who are suffering as I did to consult you and many are taking my advice. If ever I need medicine again, I know that Peruna will help me."

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Pe-ru-na that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

NOTABLE ADVANCE IN BOSTON Y. M. C. A.

In its annual report for 1905 the Boston Young Men's Christian Association says that the year was noteworthy for the substantial material advances made in equipment and building funds, as well as the amount of work accomplished. The crowded condition of the main building has made advancement extremely difficult, however.

The work of the past year was conducted under five departments: city, railroad, army, college and outing, and a summary of the year's activities shows that 6,837 men and boys were connected with the Association during 1905.

E. C. SWIFT'S FUNERAL TO-DAY; $22,000,000 LEFT TO FAMILY

Edwin C. Swift, the multi-millionaire beef packer, whose dearest ambition was to crown a successful business life with social prestige, is to-day at "Swiftmoor," the magnificent home which he had erected for himself at Pride's Crossing, in which to entertain royally—but he entered the beautiful estate in a casket, death thwarting the pet desires which seemed just about to be realized.

The funeral of the shrewd financier and master of 21,000 workmen, takes place at 11 o'clock to-day from "Swiftmoor." A [illegible] instance of the irony of fate which attended the death bed of this captain of industry is in the fact that his wife is unable to be present at his funeral. The beautiful Lowell woman, whom he married forty years ago, was away on a pleasure trip, cruising over the blue Mediterranean even while her husband was in his last illness. She left Naples yesterday by steamer, but, by the time she arrives in this country, Edwin C. Swift will have been laid [illegible].

The widow inherits one-third of her husband's $22,000,000 estate, according to the will filed for probate at Salem yesterday. The only child, Mrs. Clarence B. Moore of Washington, whose presence at the death bed was the one comforting ray in the gloom attending the last illness of Mr. Swift, receives nearly all of the remaining two-thirds when she reaches the age of thirty years.

The testator said that all of his brothers except Nathaniel had money enough of their own, and so he would not leave them anything. To Nathaniel Swift he bequeathed $10,000 cash and 100 shares in Swift & Co.

Two servants and one friend are the only persons, and a church and a cemetery association the only institutions besides Mr. Swift's blood relatives, among the beneficiaries.

The second clause in the will gives to the wife, Florence A. Swift, the house and estate at Beverly, 250 shares in Swift & Co., 500 shares in Swift Transportation and 250 shares in Swift Refrigerator Company.

Mabel, the daughter, gets 250 shares of both Swift & Co. and Transportation, and $150,000 with which to build herself a home. Caroline B. Hallett of Bridgeport, Ct., and Sarah B. Swift of Boston each get 100 shares Swift & Co. and $10,000.

In clause 26 the trustees are directed to pay the widow, Mrs. Florence A. Swift, $36,000 yearly in equal monthly installments. Mrs. Moore is allotted the same amount.

The funeral will be held at the Beverly Farms Episcopal Church. The body will be placed in a receiving vault until Mrs. Swift arrives.

CUTS INSURANCE CLERK'S PAY $150

New York, April 7.—Charles A. Peabody, the Ryan-Rockefeller-Morgan president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, it became known to-day, has lopped off from the Mutual's expenditures and saved to the policy holders $150 a year from the salaries of some hundred odd clerks.

CATTLE EXCHANGE DECLARED A TRUST

Topeka, Kas., April 7.—The Supreme Court to-day decided the Watson case, declaring the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange to be a trust. The decision practically invalidates all chattel mortgages on cattle given in Kansas to members of the exchange.

SOLONS HANDLE MERGER ISSUE GINGERLY.

Committees Will Report in Very General Way on That and Eminent Domain.

BIG FIELD OPENED UP FOR LOBBYISTS

After many hearings, at which all shades of opinion were submitted, the committees on street railways and railroads, sitting jointly to consider the report of the recess committee of the Legislature, which reported a revision and new codification of the street railway and steam railroad laws, will now digest the evidence in executive sessions.

The committees have practically agreed on the nature of their reports to the Legislature, and they will be among the most important features of the session. But very few changes will be made in the work of the recess committee relative to the general laws affecting railways and railroads. The recess committee reported very few changes in the existing statutes, condensing the superfluous sections and straightening out the conflicting and vague laws.

Questions that the joint committee considers of paramount importance are those referring to the merging of street railways and railroads and the right of eminent domain. These two questions the committee will handle gingerly. And so they will report them separately, with special essays. The job of drafting appropriate bills will be left largely to the Legislature.

There are various ways of looking at the merger proposition. The Boston & Maine claims that the Boston & Albany (leased to the New York Central) and the New York, New Haven & Hartford can and have absorbed street railways because they are foreign corporations, while the Boston & Maine, being a domestic corporation, cannot do the same thing. Counsel for the Boston & Maine argues that the laws should not bear down more heavily on the home corporations than upon the outside ones, and his argument impresses many members of the Legislature as being fair. Attorney Brandeis for the Public Franchise League sets forth that the principle of merging is the principle of monopoly and that his league opposes the principle, but that, under the conditions existing in this State, he would favor a merger law giving the Railroad Commissioners the right to decide every specific instance of proposed merging and to stop it if, in their opinion, the merging would not be in the public interest.

The State Board of Trade opposes the granting of any merger rights. And others hold that to appease the complaining Boston & Maine the law should not grant that road merger rights, but should take away from the other roads the merging rights which they claim to hold.

To cover the eminent domain question a general electric railways bill will be recommended. The idea will be to cover the points involved in interurban franchise grants and to fix a general limit to the right of domain for railways and railroads. Last year the big fights in the Legislature were over the merger and eminent domain cases, and they promise to bring out the same excitement this year. They will be great nuts for the swell lobbyists.

Pabst Blue Ribbon

The Beer of Quality

Malt, the pre-digested nutrition of barley, is the soul, the life, the vitality, the substance of beer, and pure, wholesome beer cannot be brewed without perfect malt.

Perfect malt is made by the exclusive Pabst eight-day method. This is Nature's own process and by no other process can all the nutritious, invigorating food extractives of the malt be obtained. It is these rich, vitalizing properties of the eight-day malt that make Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer the perfect beer.

The old four-day malting process, still used by many brewers, costs less, very much less, than the Pabst eight-day method. The rule—"You can't get something for nothing," holds true in malting. Four-day malt is a forced, unnatural process of development, and necessarily inferior. It lacks those strength and life-giving food elements which distinguish the perfect Pabst eight-day malt.

If you would drink beer made from perfect eight-day malt there is a safe guide. It's the guide physicians follow,—the guide for all who want pure, healthful, delicious beer. It's the Pabst Blue Ribbon.

POLICE-EXCISE BILLS UNDER FIRE

Friends and Opponents to Be on Hand for Struggle for Existence.

LOMASNEY AND MAYOR TO MARSHAL FORCES

Members of the Republican State Committee will be on hand fighting for the Boston police and excise commission bill on Tuesday. Representatives of certain liquor interests will also be on hand to fight the bill. The politicians are expected to make promises and the other fellows are expected to give something more substantial.

Martin Lomasney's and Mayor Fitzgerald's warriors will line up for the fray on Wednesday. They have been skirmishing for several days, but decisive battle is expected on that day, when the Kiley bill, promoted by Lomasney, comes up. The bill would extend the civil service laws so that [illegible] employes under the civil service would have the right of appeal to the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation for final [illegible] when removed, transferred or suspended against their wishes.

The Puritan Sunday bill is also on the card for Wednesday. Senator Kyle wants it killed and a commission appointed to consider a recodification of the Sunday laws. The House has passed this [illegible]. The House opponents of the bill woke up too late. Kidder-Peabody are reported to be fighting the bill in the Senate on the ground that it would affect the receipts of "Wonderland," which they are said to be financing.

To-morrow Representative Ames of Easton will attempt to resuscitate the 11 o'clock liquor bill by moving that the House vote by which the bill was defeated Friday be reconsidered. The [illegible] was beaten by only nine votes and eighty seven members of the House were absent. Many of the absentees are said to be favorable to the bill. The temperance people are fighting the bill with all their might.

The House will engross the Weeks peaceful picketing bill this week. The child labor bill which passed the Senate with the overtime rider for minors is on the House calendar. Some of the labor leaders in the House will attempt to take off the rider. They believe it is a sop to the textile unions and it will hurt the chances of an overtime bill for women.

HOSPITAL'S REPORT SHOWS DEFICIT

The annual report of the Massachusetts General Hospital shows a deficit of $23,446.07. This is about $2,000 in excess of the deficit of last year, but in spite of this fact, this year is looked upon as a favorable one, as a considerable part of the expense was incurred by the construction of new buildings.

The Waverley Chapel is completed and work upon the building for women at Waverley has started. The total number of patients treated was 5,843, of this number 3,073 were free. The donations through the year amounted to $415,03[illegible].20.

E. A. Filene of Boston Addresses American Academy of Political and Social Science.

EDUCATION SYSTEM SHOULD BE VOCATIONAL

Philadelphia, April 7.—Edward A. Filene, of Boston, struck the keynote of the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science at Witherspoon Hall this evening when, in introducing the speakers, he said:

"The first [illegible] that we have stopped [illegible] ... [illegible] to grant [illegible] that the whole [illegible].

Mr. Filene presided at the [illegible]th annual meeting [illegible]. The general topic was [illegible]. Mr. Filene took [illegible] the condition of W[illegible]. He said in part:

"POOR BOY, LEG BROKEN; TOO BAD!"—IT WAS WOOD

Shrill screams from a pitiful little figure lying helpless in the gutter on Hanover street, near station 1, brought a crowd of sympathizing men and women and the usual mob of street urchins.

Carl Johnson, a [illegible] of twelve, had fallen from a wagon and [illegible] the [illegible] of his fall was [illegible] managed to limp [illegible] twist [illegible] that he had broken [illegible].

The lad cried and shrieked in agony, tears running down his cheeks as the broken leg moved at his writhings.

"Oh, my leg, my leg, it hurts, [illegible]."

The boy's cries rose to a heart-rending wail and some little girls in the crowd began to cry out of sheer sympathy. A [illegible] teamster stooped down to help. At the first gentle touch the boy screamed louder than ever.

At the hospital Carl's pain was exceeded by his terror. He was carried into one of the emergency operating rooms protesting shrilly.

[illegible] "I won't [illegible] ... Ow, [illegible] you hurt me [illegible]."

"[illegible]" he gasped. "[illegible] if it ain't."

A NEW FORCE
for the Extension of
HIGHEST MUSIC

PROGRESS is in the very nature of things—all is movement. Emerson says: "If anything could stand still it would be crushed and dissipated by the torrent it resisted." The pure, genuine and indisputable art qualities of the

Mason & Hamlin

are an active force that cannot stand still, and that have always marked a distinctive and independent path in the musical world.

The appreciation of these qualities which are indispensable in a piano for musicians, is growing so rapidly throughout this country as to prove the birth of a broader understanding of what the highest attainments in a piano really are. People are buying with more knowledge and putting less faith in mere claims and promises.

This very appreciation has made possible the most potent co-operation of interests for the extension of true art in piano construction ever known in the piano industry. By

recently established, the Mason & Hamlin Co., of Boston, and The Cable Company, of Chicago, have at their service a capital, an executive force, an experience and a manufacturing equipment certain to be far-reaching in their influence for the broad extension of the very Highest Ideals in Piano Construction.

Two results which this community of interests has positively produced:

First.—The Mason & Hamlin factory has a wider scope than at any time in its history, by which to extend that subtle and indefinable genius which, during more than half a century, and the world over, has always made the construction of the Mason & Hamlin instruments the envy of every manufacturer and the admiration of every artist.

Second.—The Mason & Hamlin Co. has been put in a position to extend to pianos of moderate price its art influence and constructive knowledge. This gives those who do not wish to spend the money necessary to buy the very highest type of instrument made—the Mason & Hamlin Piano—an opportunity to get more REAL MUSICAL SATISFACTION for their money than ever before. These are positive facts that no one can honestly or successfully contradict.

For those who wish to buy a piano of moderate price, we know of no piano that will give equal satisfaction for the money. They are

THE KINGSBURY.—Over eighty thousand in use.
THE WELLINGTON.—The best possible value at the lowest possible price.

"I WAS THE BRAINS OF FAMILY," SAYS MRS. COLLIER.

"Willie," at Park Theatre, "Ashamed" to Talk of Wife's Suit for a Division of Property on Long Island

> "I picked out his successful plays. I helped him make his money. I was the brains of the family."—What Mrs. Collier says of Willie.

Willie Collier, the actor, is "too [illegible] ashamed" about the suit his wife has brought against him to compel him to sell their $80,000 country place at St. James, L. I., and give her half the proceeds, to talk about it at all.

He said so last night at the Park Theatre at the close of his play, "On The Quiet." Why Mr. Collier is "ashamed," he will not say. His mortification is too deep for utterance.

Mrs. Collier, in her suit, which was begun in Riverhead, L. I., yesterday, has not been so reticent. She declares frankly that she was the brains of the family. She testified to this effect in the hearing before Supreme Court Justice Kelley in Riverhead, L. I. She said:

"I was the business head, the brains of the family. Mr. Collier left everything to me. I picked out his successful plays and helped him make his money. His trip to London was a financial failure because I did not pay attention to his business. I had too much [illegible].

"When he agreed to part," Mrs. Collier said, "Mr. Collier agreed to pay me $100 a week and sell [illegible] the property at St. James. This was bought upon my advice, and it has increased in value as I said it would. Mr. Collier would not have it [illegible]."

EVA LEE, AGED NINE, PRODIGY OF MUSIC AND STAGE.

Singing "The Streets of New York"

Singing "True Irish Hearts."

Boston's Child Wonder, Pianist, Actress, Dancer

Eva Lee, at nine years, is the sensation of Boston's musical colony, startling the critics by a recital unequalled by one so young, save, possibly, by the wonderful Josef Hoffman.

Her talents are varied.

At four years she had a speaking part before the footlights.

She has also displayed exceptional cleverness as a dancer.

Pretty Little Eva Lee, Nine Years, Holds Audience Spellbound at Huntington Chambers by Her Work on Piano

A musical prodigy, whose career promises to outrival that of Josef Hoffman, is little nine-year-old Eva Lee, who gave a most interesting recital in Huntington Chambers yesterday afternoon before an audience composed mainly of musical critics. The recital included six solo pieces and a trio, all perfectly memorized by the child wonder, and in her trio pieces showed marked adaptability as an ensemble player. She played Haydn in C minor, accompanied by William Howard, violin, and Carl Behr, violincello. In her solo numbers she displayed a remarkable technique for one of her tender years, especially in her last number, a difficult concerto in F major.

Miss Lee has been the sensation of the musical colony of this section this season. Her wonderful versatility has not been confined to music alone, as at the age of four years she first made her public appearance in the old Bowdoin Square Theatre in a child's part, including speaking lines. Since then her career has been notable. At the Dorothy Dix Home she was [illegible] in her stage career and proved so apt a pupil that at five years she appeared with speaking parts in "The Streets of New York," "True Irish Hearts," and other melodramas in which she had speaking parts.

Her natural ability led Miss Wyman, the dancing teacher, to give Eva a course in dancing, and the remarkable musical talent which led Mrs. Cary Eaeton to stand as musical sponsor for the prodigy then developed. Mrs. Frelton and her husband discovered that Eva possessed something unknown in many musicians, that of a true musical positive pitch. A career as a piano virtuoso was decided upon and for the past four years little Eva has been faithfully studying the piano.

The furore created by the prodigy has resulted in several engagements. She will appear at the Hotel Somerset on April 15 in [illegible] with Mr. Carl Behr and William Howard. A brilliant future for the child is [illegible] by a number of well known [illegible], including Rudolph Gans and Walter [illegible] Loesting of the Symphony orchestra.

CHILDREN WITH CROUP.

Mothers Should Be Careful About the Medicine Used.

A great many children suffer from croup at this season of the year, and mothers cannot be too careful of the medicine they use. The majority of the so called "cough syrups" and "balsams" contain opium, morphine, or other poisonous drugs and they are dangerous to the health of the little ones.

Mr. J. P. Corr of 223 Cross Street, Lowell, Mass., says: "My wife was very anxious about one of our little ones who was suffering from a dangerous attack of croup. We tried many remedies without success until we used Father John's Medicine, which speedily cured. I think every mother ought to know of its value. We would not be without it in the house.

ROXBURY COUPLE IN DIVORCE COURT BATTLE

Too Much Club Life, Says Husband; Too Much Politics, Wife's Retort

Prominent Clubwoman and Real Estate Man Take Domestic Troubles to Judge in Effort to Break Tie That is Distasteful to Both.

Her husband says he wants a divorce because she belongs to too many clubs.

MRS. ERNEST RICHMOND BUFFINTON

Mrs. Lucy F. Buffinton of Roxbury, a stately brunette, very stylish, known for her musical talents and said to have had membership in more women's clubs and organizations than any other woman in the city except one, has lodged a cross libel for divorce against her husband, Ernest R. Buffinton, the Roxbury real estate dealer and politician of Ward 21. She alleges cruel and abusive treatment and has been quoted as saying that when politics came into their family, domestic harmony left.

Too Much Club Life.

Mr. Buffinton, who filed his libel under the name of Lewis, mentioned the name of a prominent Roxbury man in the bill of complaint. Recently, under a court decree, he has been paying Mrs. Buffinton $4 a week for her support. He has said that their domestic troubles began in her belonging to so many clubs.

The Buffintons have been prominent socially, in an amateur dramatic and a musical way, ever since their marriage. They have appeared together in entertainments. Mr. Buffinton has played leading roles in the Dudley [illegible] operas and plays, and is helping to prepare the coming production of "The Campaigners," which is to be produced by the Dudley Club on May 8. [illegible] had an office near the Dudley Street Opera House, but now is located at No. 67 Warren avenue.

Says He Abused Her.

One of the principal organizations of which Mrs. Buffinton is a member is the Le Blanc Trio. It is said that of late she has been tending more and more toward public singing, and that Mr. Buffinton objected to it. But when he lodged his divorce libel last January in the Suffolk Superior Court, he based his complaint on harsher lines than that.

Mrs. Buffinton declares in her cross-libel that Mr. Buffinton treated her cruelly and abused her to the extent of threatening her with a dangerous weapon and choking her. Mrs. Buffinton was formerly Miss Soren of Roxbury.

In cross-libel sh says that politic came into the fami ly and harmony be came something of the past.

DUCKS DIVE FOR FISH AND DROWN IN NETS

St. Joseph, Mich., April 7.—One of the strangest sights in connection with the local fishing industry is the catching of wild ducks fifty and sixty feet below the surface of the water in the nets of the fisher[illegible].

H. O. Wilson made a phenomenal catch and brought the ducks with him in order to convince the skeptical of the truth of his statements. When his men lifted the nets they found 500 wild ducks. The ducks had been attracted by the fish in the nets and dove far down in the water for them. When they reached the nets they were entangled in the meshes and were drowned.

STOCKS High Money Again Sends Prices Down; Market Dull BONDS

Bank Statement Shows Deficit in Surplus, but List of Losses Is Small--Big Men Holding Aloof from Participation in Deals at Present.

The coal situation, high money rates and an expected wiping out of the surplus reserve of the associated banks caused an all pervading spirit of dullness in the New York stock market yesterday.

Pending the announcement of the bank statement traders held aloof. Stocks drooped again under their own weight in a manner to remind one of the deadly period of stagnation which preceded the news of the coal strike. Fractional losses extended throughout the list and were slightly added to when the expectations regarding the bank statement were realized. The statement showed a deficit of $2,580,825 below the legal requirements. It had been fairly discounted, however, and aside from tending to increase the dullness it had little effect.

Market of Many Shades.

It was what might almost be called a week of versatility in both the Boston and the New York stock markets. On Monday there was a broad and active market, and for a while it looked as though a bull movement had started in because of the ending of the suspense regarding the coal strike. Then came alternations of activity and dullness, with spasmodic rallies of prices, then more drooping of the whole list until on Friday, and again yesterday, prices reached about their lowest for several weeks. There were some exceptions, of course, especially Amalgamated and the leading railroad stocks, but the stock market on the whole has finally become rather a poor and dispirited being.

The money situation is having more influence on the stock market than it has had since call rates went to 100 per cent some three months ago. The rise to [illegible] per cent this last week naturally lessened activity of stocks. The flurry was caused to some extent by the April disbursement of dividends and interest, the aggregate of which has been estimated to be greater than ever before for a quarter. The disbursements have temporarily weakened the resources of the New York banks, but easier conditions must follow a return of the funds. [illegible] The high money rates are likely to [illegible] gold from Europe in quantities [illegible] those already contracted for [illegible] ing of sterling exchange forecasts [illegible] early gold imports.

Gold from Europe.

A reduction in the Bank of England rate to 3½ per cent. was regarded by bankers as the most significant financial event that has occurred in weeks. It is the first substantial indication of a favorable change in [illegible] It reflects a [illegible] New York.

Poor Bank Statement.

The bank [illegible] of yesterday showed that the [illegible] decreased $7,601,[illegible] [illegible] above [illegible] with a surplus of [illegible] [illegible] September 17, 1902 [illegible] $1,042,000. [illegible] speculative activity [illegible].

Spot Copper Scarce.

The copper-producing industry has been enjoying [illegible] prosperity for over a year. [illegible] is practically impossible to buy spot copper, and the price is firmly maintained at about the highest [illegible] the treasuries of many of the companies are overflowing with cash [illegible] Even the coal strike would, if continued, improve the position of copper. [illegible] ready forced the price of [illegible] up to 18¾ cents a pound [illegible] rapid growth of [illegible] the copper industry has ever known.

Call Money at 30.

As already pointed out the money market is in an [illegible] condition and closed the week with rates high. Call loans were quoted yesterday at 6 per cent. [illegible] on Friday [illegible] per cent. In Boston rates [illegible] stiffened [illegible] near the end of the week. [illegible] bankers took the position [illegible] in New York was only temporary and the rates here were not quite so responsive as usual. Time money is nominally 5 to 6 per cent. for [illegible]

Local Coppers Steady.

The local copper market was steady yesterday, but with trading showing an absolute absence of animation. There was some investment buying of Massachusetts Gas preferred around 87, and a new high record was made for Boston & Worcester Electric [illegible] a net gain of one point. Leading interests in the Boston & Worcester company disclaim any knowledge as to who has been back of the recent buying of the stock. The rumor is that the New Haven Railroad is after the Boston & Worcester, but officials of both companies

KING-CROWTHER CORPORATION

Capital Stock $3,000,000, divided into 30,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, all full paid and non-assessible.

OFFICERS:

C. F. King, of Boston	President
George C. Boggs, of Finleyville, Penn.	First Vice-President
Stephen A. Hopkins, of Brookline, Mass.	Sec'y and Treasurer

DIRECTORS:

C. F. King	Boston, Mass.
George C. Boggs	Finleyville, Penn.
Stephen A. Hopkins	Brookline, Mass.
John Thomson	Quebec, Canada
Francis Van Dresar	Westernville, N. Y.
Edward Gilliam	Winthrop, Mass.
William T. Soulee	Winchester, Mass.
Alfred E. King	Brookline, Mass.

The King-Crowther Corporation was incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine, March 27th, 1906, for the purpose of taking over, developing and operating the valuable Texas oil lands and other properties formerly controlled by the King-Crowther Corporation of Texas, which corporation was succeeded in December, 1903, by the Boston & Texas Corporation, which company was organized for the purpose of operating and developing the property in the interest of and for the protection of the stockholders of the former King-Crowther Corporation.

The new King-Crowther Corporation of Maine represents a complete and successful reorganization of the former King-Crowther Corporation of Texas, full control of the property having been acquired by New England interests.

All stockholders of the former company are to receive shares in the new King-Crowther Corporation of Maine to correspond in par value with their holdings in the former company. No assessments of any kind are to be levied, and new certificates in exchange for old are to be issued without expense to any stockholder.

The following is a list of the real estate and other property now being conveyed, and which become the assets of the King-Crowther Corporation free and clear of all debt and mortgage encumbrances:

Sixty thousand acres, more or less, additional oil lands held under leases covering all mineral rights.

Fourteen oil wells, with more being drilled, producing the very highest grades of lubricating and illuminating oils, and a tankage capacity for several thousand barrels.

Three complete drilling outfits, including rotary and standard machines, with thousands of feet of piping of various sizes used in well drilling.

A complete water plant with capacity sufficient to supply pure, fresh water for its town of Crowther and all the country round about.

All of this property is located in McMullen, Live Oak and Atascosa Counties, Texas, about sixty miles southwest of San Antonio, the entire section of which was at the beginning of the King-Crowther development five years ago a barren waste, given over to the growth of wild cactus and the grazing of cattle.

The development work which was commenced in that section of Texas five years ago by the King-Crowther Corporation and since continued by its successor, the Boston & Texas Corporation, has brought about a new and better condition for all the country round about. It shall be the policy of the King-Crowther Corporation to encourage the complete development of the property, not only as an oil property, but from an agricultural and general upbuilding point of view as well. Everyone who has visited the property agrees in the statement that it represents an opportunity for the profitable investment of capital that has few, if any, equals in the United States.

Having accepted, at the earnest solicitation of a large majority of stockholders and at the unanimous request of the Board of Directors, the office of president of the King-Crowther Corporation, and feeling in every way able and equipped to direct the successful development of the property, and being fully determined to place it at an early date in the front rank of dividend-paying corporations, I earnestly advise all stockholders against accepting any reasonable offer for their holdings.

The King-Crowther Corporation of Maine comes into existence with assets of exceedingly great value, all free and clear of mortgage and without owing a dollar in the world. Some tremendous surprises are in store for the public in connection with this valuable property, and my earnest advice to every stockholder—the advice which I would give my dearest and best friend—is:

POINT TO EUROPE AS LESSON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

The so-called inside interests that are forcing a higher market expect to use the growing business boom of Europe as an object lesson for the American public. The great public in the United States has been educated on stocks. It lost faith in the leaders just when they began to tell the truth. It threw away its success at panic prices and the Wall Street leaders have grown richer by hundreds of millions as a result.

Call money at thirty per cent has not terrified the big stockholders the past week because they are borrowing but little. Only the traders have been hurt by the money corner. There has been less money borrowed in Wall Street this Spring, when the prices of stock are considered, than ever before. The volume of money in circulation in the United States is the largest per capita in the history of the country. But it has been employed in places where a dollar means nothing but one hundred cents. In Wall Street a dollar means four hundred cents, and the millions that are busy in the West would carry business of four times their value in the hands of the professional money handlers of the East.

For this reason the volume credit here per capita, as compared with the volume of circulation per capita, is abnormally small. The big stockholders understand, and the law of finance and high money rates temporarily do not terrify them.

For a decade Europe has been living in constant dread of war and has been hoarding its gold. It has not kept pace with modern improvements, as the United States has done. Now that a war has been suddenly removed, Europe is quivering with industrial activity. Wall Street leaders expect business in Europe to become sensationally active. But even at its best it can do no more than catch up with what has already been done in the United States. The leaders expect that Europe's awakening will make Americans realize their own wealth and bring them into the stock market. It is in anticipation of such a thing that prices are being held so firm.

30% Net Gain in 3 Days

OUGHT TO INTEREST YOU.

This may seem impossible, but I know it is a positive fact. At midnight on Wednesday, April 11th, the stock of the Holcomb Automatic Engine Co., which owns and controls the most wonderful invention of the age, will advance from 30 cents to 40 cents per share (par value $1.00), making a clean profit of over 30 per cent. for those who act within the next three days.

DO NOT DELAY.

This opportunity may mean independence for you and your family the rest of your natural life.

WIRE OR WRITE TO-DAY

For as much of this stock as you can possibly afford to buy. Send your reservation and then investigate! But your letter must be postmarked before midnight (Wednesday) in order to buy this stock at 30 cents.

Leading mechanical engineers throughout the country have personally examined the Holcomb Engine at our factory and have without exception endorsed it as the marvel of the age. I invite the most critical inspection and know that if you could see a demonstration you would not hesitate to join me in this enterprise, especially after you had investigated the standing of the company's officials and became convinced of their honest intentions.

I am not a promoter nor a speculator. I have spent the best years of my life in the development of this Engine, and, aside from my own conviction, I have received the opinion of experts that this invention will revolutionize the engine industry of the world.

Every dollar of my own money and of my friends is invested in this enterprise, and in the small town of Beloit, Wisconsin, where I formerly resided and where I am well known, forty-three of the leading citizens, including the mayor and all public officials, have subscribed and are now stockholders in the enterprise.

I only ask that you investigate and make the investigation as thorough as possible. If you cannot come to my office yourself, write to any firm of mechanical engineers or to any friend you may have in Chicago to come and investigate for you, and the time to do that is TO-DAY, because you cannot afford to overlook this opportunity. It may make you independent for life. The dividends that this stock should pay and the advance in the price will make your investment double your money within a short time, but you must act AT ONCE, if you want to join me in this enterprise, which is not a speculation, but an industry that promises to make a fortune for its stockholders.

C. A. Holcomb, mechanical engineer, Sec'y and Gen'l Manager Mechanical Department, for twenty years, a successful inventor of machinery.

The Company is safeguarded by its officers and its plan of allotting stock. No officers or set of stockholders can at any time control its stock.

The stock of this Company is all alike. The stock you purchase is exactly the same as that owned by the officers of this Company and you will have the same rights and privileges as the officers and all other stockholders.

VALUABLE FEATURES OF THE HOLCOMB ENGINE.

In the Holcomb Engine is incorporated every valuable feature found in the Corliss or any other engine, including economy, perfect regulation, instantaneous reverse and long life, combining with these features a speed much greater than has ever been attained by any reciprocating engine, and [illegible] no more than is necessary to sustain its own weight. All moving parts revolve on their own centers and are perfectly balanced. The displacement of steam is the same as in any reciprocating engine, but the power is continuous instead of intermittent.

The Holcomb Engine is multiple cylinder and is attached to the power shaft, revolves around the crank shaft, which is fixed, allowing of very high speed without vibration or dead centers, [illegible] stopping and reversing at any point.

[illegible] owing to these peculiar motions, are capable of producing the quick opening and closing of the admission ports and full opening of the exhaust ports, and are capable of a wider range of cutoff than is practical in the Corliss Engine, and this is accomplished with a single valve.

[illegible] economy [illegible] merits, [illegible] We can give you one instance. The selling price of the ordinary type engine of ten horse power is $300.00. The Holcomb Engine of equal power costs to build $45.00. You [illegible] proposition.

MANAGEMENT IN SAFE HANDS.

The Holcomb Automatic Engine Company management is in the hands of practical business men and manufacturers, men who are [illegible] capable of [illegible] every detail of the business in a way to make it earn large dividends.

LEWIS INSTITUTE TESTS ENGINE.

These features have made the Holcomb [illegible] Recent tests made at the Lewis Institute of [illegible] and various tests [illegible] made by ourselves, warrant us in believing that [illegible] for economy [illegible] will be [illegible].

Our high pressure superheating steam generator, continuous water tube type, which has developed under the supervision of an expert of years of experience in marine service, will give us a combination for Auto Trucks and Auto Express Rigs, Launches, Tug Boats and Lake Vessels that is not now equaled. It will also solve the problem of suburban railway power.

IT IS A CERTAINTY

that enormous fortunes should be earned by the Holcomb Engine Company for the manufacture of the Holcomb Automatic [illegible] experts and [illegible] most severe tests [illegible] and technical men who have seen it in practical operation [illegible] in steam engines has been achieved. The experimental stage has been passed because HOLCOMB engines are now in operation, and a variety of types for various purposes are now being [illegible].

WE ARE MANUFACTURING THESE ENGINES NOW.

We have more orders than we can fill with the present capacity of our factory. A new plant, complete with every modern improvement of mechanical appliances, is to be built immediately. It is to provide the funds for this factory that this stock is offered for sale at its present low price of 30c a share. With this plant completed, large and continuous dividends will be earned for our stockholders. Just what those dividends will be can be judged from what is paid annually by the Bell Telephone Co., the American Locomotive Works and numerous other companies which manufacture engines, machinery and appliances for which they hold the exclusive patent rights. The Holcomb Automatic Engine Company owns all the broad and basic patents, as well as those on the various essential parts which allow of it, and no one else can manufacture and sell a perfect rotating steam engine.

NOT FIGHTING THE TRUSTS.

We are often asked "Are you not afraid of the trusts and great concerns now manufacturing engines?" We answer "No," for the reason our engine has a field of its own. 75 per cent of the steam and gas engine power of this country is represented by engines of from 2 to 75 horse power units. While millions of dollars are spent in developing economy in engines of 1,000 to 10,000 horse power, little or no thought or money has been applied to perfecting engines which go to the millions of users of small units. They need cheap and efficient power and we have the engine to [illegible] at reasonable cost.

PROF. HOLCOMB A SUCCESS IN LIFE.

Professor Holcomb [illegible] having invented several articles that [illegible] are making big [illegible] He has now invented a device that will be the greatest [illegible] the history of this country. This device is called the Holcomb Automatic Engine. [illegible] of the steam engine. It is the last stroke necessary to make the steam engine complete. This is admitted to be true by the leading mechanical engineers of this country. It is to-day in successful operation. The experimental stage has been passed. $60,000 has been spent to reach this point. We are now ready to put it on the market. When this is done it is bound to make an enormous fortune for the Holcomb Automatic Engine Company and its stockholders.

YOU CAN NEVER GET RICH ON A SALARY.

All great fortunes are founded upon successful investments. Your money invested in Holcomb Automatic Engine stock should earn more for you than can be earned by the most willing hand or brain. So sure of this are we, that the officers of this company, men of the highest business reputation, have put their own money, all they could possibly afford, in this company, for they are sincere in their belief that it will make them rich and independent for life. Here is your opportunity to do likewise. To-day is the time to make money. We have given you the absolute proofs—you must judge for yourself and ACT NOW. If you want some of this stock at the present low price you must send in your application to-day. There is but a small amount to be sold at 30c. In 3 days the price will advance and there is no question but what it will soon be selling for $1.00 a share.

READ THE REPORT OF A WELL-KNOWN MECHANICAL ENGINEER:

In the matter of the new Automatic engine introduced by Mr. C. A. Holcomb, for your information will state that I have carefully examined this engine in all its details and have to report as follows.

First, that the engine must not be confounded with what is commonly known as the rotary engine. This engine is not a rotary engine, but is a rotating engine, and the difference is as follows: In the rotary engine the steam or air acts directly on a wheel or disk having on its periphery or side various forms of cups or wings, and in some instances have valves that when they fill the opening and the steam or compressed air that would actuate this machine has no chance whatever for expansion, and the loss thereby is very great; while in the rotating engine the motion is produced exactly the same as in a stationary engine—like the Corliss type, for instance. In this new rotating machine that we examined I found four cylinders, each with a piston head operating on one crank shaft, giving exactly the same results as in a Corliss engine or a locomotive, and its life may be said to be equally as long.

The main steam valve has a sliding motion similar to that in use in the latest improved Corliss engine, and the wear on this valve by reason of the novel design will be little or nothing.

I find that this engine is capable of being reversed instantly and the difference in motion being obtained by one lever, also find that this engine is capable of being worked under what is known as the expansive system very much the same as in vogue on all locomotives now in use. Also find that this machine is capable of being compounded, which in some instances will be found to be very [illegible].

I have given this matter careful [illegible] the details bearing on the manufacture, sale, operation and maintenance [illegible] I believe that the market is large for this peculiar type of an engine and would not hesitate to recommend it.

Finally, I see no reason why with careful, conservative management in the manufacture, that the industry should not pay a handsome return to all those interested.

Respectfully submitted, Signed H. B. TEFFT.

All this big mine now needs in order to begin pouring its great wealth into the pockets of the stockholders is the proper machinery, and for the purpose of purchasing and installing same, and for other expenditures, the company has made a contract with me, to sell a limited amount of its treasury stock. You can get in now, after all risk has been eliminated, when your investment is absolutely safe, at a ground-floor price.

Ore Value $66.20 a Ton

I recently spent two days thoroughly investigating the Nevada-Commonwealth Mine and was astonished at its wonderful state of development. There is a tunnel 1115 feet long at the bottom of a 500 foot shaft in the mountain, striking and extending along the ledge 140 feet. The ledge is twelve feet wide where it is cut by the tunnel, and wider at many places. There are four additional levels above the main tunnel. The highest level has a well defined vein thirty-two feet wide, maintaining highest grade values from eighty-five to one hundred feet in distance. The ore is silver-lead, and having knocked down an average lot, I had it assayed, with the result that it showed 40.60 ounces silver and 39.80 per cent lead, with a value of $66.20 a ton. I think it conservative to say that one-third of the thirty-two foot vein will equal this ore assayed and average as much in value. There is undoubtedly enough ore in this mine to work for many lifetimes. Signed:

J. B. Hamner, of lawful age, being duly sworn, on his oath says the foregoing statement is true.

View of Mill Showing Enormous Development of Mine in Operation Today

Oceans Of Ore

I have recently personally examined the Nevada-Commonwealth Mine, situated near Washoe, between Reno and Carson City, Nevada. I am glad to state that this company has a large mill building erected and has development, in the shape of tunnels and drifts, which must have cost somewhere in the vicinity of one hundred thousand dollars.

There is ample water from which to get power from the same source from which the great Virginia-Comstock Mine secured theirs.

The development has opened up such an enormous body of ore that I can only describe it as oceans of ore. All the property needs is a concentrating plant to pay enormous dividends.

I can certify that, from this personal investigation, I have invested a large sum of money in the stock of the company, and, if every one could have the opportunity of seeing as I have had, they would all do likewise. Signed:

H. H. Hammond, of lawful age, being duly sworn, says that the foregoing statement is true

Every Share Shares Alike. No Preferred Stock or Bonds. All Full Paid and Non-assessable. Par Value, $1.00.

Cash valuation on this big mine only $500,000. The ore in sight should give you a thousand per cent dividends. If we strike the Comstock lode they will be a hundred times greater. This is not a stock selling scheme but a plain business enterprise with the definite object in view of securing the necessary machinery to pay dividends quickly. Subscriptions for stock will only be received until this result is accomplished. The Company reserves the right to take the stock off the market at any time or to advance the price without notice. If you want in on the ground floor of this great enterprise, act quickly. Write today—or, better still, telegraph, reserving the number of shares you want. Buy all the Nevada-Commonwealth you can as quick as you can.

Location of Nevada-Commonwealth Mine.

The Nevada-Commonwealth Mine is located in the greatest mineral lode in the wonderful state of Nevada, surrounded on every side by world-famous mines. The illustration shows the great Virginia-Comstock Mine, located just six miles away, with a shaft sunk over a mile into the earth and the ore maintaining its richness just as great as at the first day of production. From this mine dividends have already been paid to date of over one billion five hundred million dollars. The Great Harris Mine which is a comparatively late acquisition, has been operated by hand and windlass and paid thousands of dollars a year profits even in the use of these crude methods, and has now just contracted for a thirty thousand dollar mill. The Galena Mine, in the opposite direction, just one and one-quarter miles, is shipping today such valuable ore that they require it to be sacked for protection. The Jumbo Mine, shown in this cut, has received offers that will run into hundreds of thousands for its lease and royalty. The Rock Hill Mine, just three thousand feet east of the Nevada-Commonwealth, has unlimited quantities of two hundred dollar ore.

A Successful Piano House.

The J. B. Cook Piano Co. at 172 Tremont st. is becoming widely known among the music loving people of Greater Boston. The courteous treatment of customers and the square dealing of this concern partly explains its flourishing condition. The low, medium and high priced pianos are shown in such great numbers that, no matter what the needs of a customer may be, he is sure of finding just the piano that suits him and at a price temptingly low.

From the manager down this concern is in the hands of young men whose business methods are the most modern and up-to-date.

The out-of-town business has increased to such an extent during the last year, that they have been obliged to open several branches in near-by cities.

The Haines Bros. and Marshall & Wendall Pianos are the leaders of this progressive concern and they invite the most st[illegible] comparison of these beautiful instruments with any high grade piano in the world.

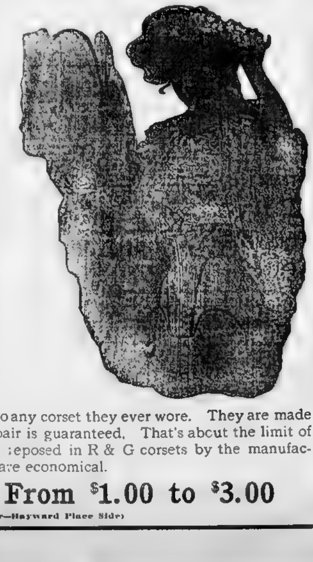
R&G CORSETS

With the Tapering Waists. That is not all of this highly interesting corset story, but it is one predominating point that will appeal to all women of taste—all women who discriminate in favor of the best—who demand style and a corset that possesses the qualities of figure-moulding and comfort-giving.

The construction of R & G Corsets is not left to chance. To begin with, the materials are selected with a view to long wear under all sorts of conditions. They are cut according to scientific principles that involve form, fit and health, and then they are put together by experts and every thread is perfectly applied.



To be strictly in harmony with the latest dictates of fashion your gown must be modeled over the graceful, easy-fitting R & G Tapering Waist Corset. In no other way can you secure the rounded shapeliness and "defined waist-line" which distinguish the newest styles. Moreover, the R & G Corset will retain and sustain this shape as long as you wear it.

Many women who have worn R & G Corsets consider them superior to any corset they ever wore. They are made to fit snugly and stay fit, and every pair is guaranteed. That's about the limit of assurance, and shows the confidence reposed in R & G corsets by the manufacturers and ourselves. R & G corsets are economical.

[illegible] FAVORITES

ON TOP

Is the [illegible] be for there the pressure [illegible] a few numbers [illegible] near the [illegible] and the result is [illegible] more power [illegible] people [illegible] for at a [illegible] them to that [illegible] fail to get our best [illegible] fishing in strange [illegible] part of the catch [illegible] in this week's bill.

FOUR

BARD BROTHERS

Positively the greatest of all the real American gymnasts [illegible]. It's in a class by itself, a real [illegible] of [illegible] and has created more talk than any [illegible] ever seen in this country. There's nothing on the stage to compare with it. Some feats that will make your wonder [illegible]. These boys went abroad last season and won all sorts of laurels in the places where the foremost athletic entertainers are supposed to come from. They are far to the fore in the race for supremacy among the many teams of ground tumblers.

MAY DURYEA —AND— W. A. MORTIMER

An act that will come very near setting a new [illegible] record [illegible] in the bill. "The [illegible]" is the [illegible] of the [illegible] sketch that will [illegible] them to hold [illegible] in the Howard's [illegible] of fame. Nothing [illegible] in the sketch line has ever hit the Howard and this goes without any ifs, ands or buts.

"SANDY" CHAPMAN

Is it any use to say anything further? His name [illegible] in this burg knows he is [illegible] balladist. "Sandy" will sing several new songs [illegible] he will endeavor to [illegible] "Pals" and "Ange-[illegible]." He will be accompanied by his old chum, Larry O'C[illegible].

FRED RAY AND COMPANY

The droll travestyist, formerly of the firm of Ray and West, assisted by [illegible] Mae Crawford. [illegible] a collector and distributor of nonsense without a peer, and his [illegible] Roman [illegible] is a marvel as a laugh provoker. It's full of fun of the fast and furious brand.

HOWARD —AND— HOWARD

New York lads who do a character skit that is one of the best [illegible]. They are two-thirds of the famous Messenger Boys Trio, and are crackajack [illegible] humorists and dancers. Players [illegible] from the word [illegible] they're facing the footlights. They'll draw a heavy draft on your Bank of Laughter.

KITTY BINGHAM

A [illegible] with winning ways. She made [illegible] with the Howardites when a member of [illegible] burlesquers a couple of seasons [illegible]. [illegible] be happy to help make her welcome [illegible], for "she's the goods" for sure. She puts such an amount of vim and vigor into [illegible] that she makes dull care get a [illegible] move on.

WESLEY NORRIS CORINNE

A [illegible] show you a pastime [illegible] to the good. A warmer pair of [illegible] entertainers never came out [illegible]. What they don't know about genuine darkey [illegible] knowing.

THE BURKES

A duo of [illegible]. What they do and the way [illegible] will make you second them the [illegible]. It's one of the most entertaining acts [illegible] day, John Burke's unequalled [illegible] being a leading card.

MAUDE De LORA

She's a leading light among contortionists. There [illegible] on the same circuit. Some feats of dexterity most fascinatingly effected.

MEYER and MASON

A pair who caught on [illegible] last season. Their [illegible] is one of the [illegible] athletes [illegible] now on the market. Full of new [illegible] legmania.

MAC and MAC

Here's where you'll writhe laughter without limit. Two of the [illegible] of all the real folks. What they don't know about acrobatic comedy isn't worth knowing.

THE HOWARDSCOPE

THE BURLESQUE

A sight draft on the Bank of Pleasure is what we have drawn this week and it's a cinch it will be honored [illegible]. The twenty-eighth [illegible] merry [illegible] against the [illegible] will find [illegible] knocked out by the new [illegible].

WEB WEAVERS

This [illegible] will work every [illegible] action by any [illegible].

GEORGE B. ALEXANDER

You know the [illegible] Smithers. Swore [illegible] and [illegible] all over [illegible] is the party responsible. He'll [illegible] his [illegible] of new [illegible] have a [illegible] song called "Swinging" [illegible] will have the assistance of the entire company. It's a sure-fire hit.

FRIDAY, April 13th
A Souvenir Photograph
SOME ONE

Of the bunch [illegible] be given to every purchaser of a parlor chair, orchestra circle or balcony seat. You can take [illegible] of those we have issued this season [illegible] they last. Here's a chance to pick your favorite.

COAL TRUST DEFIES STATE.

License Suspended, but Still Sells Anthracite at $8 Price.

CLAIM PRIVILEGE AS APPEAL IS "PENDING"

Although Secretary of the Commonwealth Olin, who heard the evidence of extortion presented by the BOSTON AMERICAN to show that the Metropolitan Coal Company, better known as the Boston Coal Trust, has suspended the license of that company, the Trust is continuing to sell coal. It defied the order of the secretary yesterday, claiming that it has the right to continue to do business until the Superior Court has passed upon the case. Coal was sold at all the offices of the company, at the same extortionate rate of $8 a ton—the same coal that was previously sold for the regular winter rate.

The officials of the Trust were in a state of panic yesterday. Attempts to locate the more important ones were unsuccessful. It was said that President Hamlin was out of town. While keeping carefully away from newspaper reporters, the official held serious and prolonged conferences with their attorneys, endeavoring to secure a method of escape from the judgment of the tribunal before which they were haled.

The law under which Secretary Olin took away the Trust's license to sell coal specifies that dealers may continue to sell "pending the decision upon an appeal." The lawyers for the Trust say that this means that they can sell until they have appealed and the case has been decided. Some of the officials have gone so far as to say that they can take their time about filing an appeal, and that they need never do so if they do not wish to. It is the general interpretation of the law, however, that, once having filed an appeal, it may be regarded as "pending," within the meaning of the statute, and that until an appeal is entered it cannot be "pending."

It is generally believed, however, that an appeal will be entered to-morrow.

Trust Is Staggered.

No decision ever given in Massachusetts in regard to the high-handed actions of a Trust has ever caused such consternation as this judgment of Secretary Olin. The Coal Trust did not expect it. Its attitude at the hearing when Attorney Allen, representing the Metropolitan Company, sneered at the suit [illegible] "opera bouffe," declared that the increase in price did not injure the poor, and finally refused to seriously argue the question involved, indicated that it expected the result that usually follows an attempt to win a case against a great corporation under existing laws, in which [illegible] of the corporation are [illegible] to have had a hand.

Already [illegible] Coal Trust had been found guilty of extortion by two tribunals of a character of which trusts take very little cognizance. The general public had condemned it and the press of Massachusetts, practically without exception, had ridiculed the Trust's excuse that the increase in price was to "steady the market" and "for the benefit of the poor." The BOSTON AMERICAN determined to take the matter before another tribunal—the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

After evidence had been secured by its staff of reporters, a complaint was made to Secretary Olin by Ernest L. Jackson, a reporter for the AMERICAN—the other papers have carefully refrained from noting that fact—and at a hearing a portion of the evidence was presented. President Hamlin of the Metropolitan Coal Company was the only witness for the defence. He repeated the excuses the trust had already made, adding that there was in Boston but two weeks' coal supply, and furnishing the really interesting information that, although the coal operators had not put up their price, they were refusing to sell the 10,000,000 tons of coal they have above ground at any figure.

NO DENIAL MADE.

Mr. Hamlin did not deny the fundamental fact—that his company had not had to pay more for the coal it was selling for $8 after the strike than before it, that it was the same coal, in fact.

It was apparent from the attitude of the trust throughout the hearing that it did not expect to lose. This same attitude characterized the Gas Trust during the BOSTON AMERICAN'S fight for cheaper gas for Boston [illegible] ago. The Coal Trust had taken no lesson from the Gas Trust's experience.

When Secretary Olin's decision was handed down late Friday afternoon, and the coal company learned that it had lost its license, its officers were astounded. The telephone wires were busy between officials and attorneys until late that night, and their activity continued yesterday. "We cannot understand it," was the attitude of the heads of the big company.

[illegible] of the Secretary of State [illegible] the [illegible] which convicted of violating the statutes, of attempting to prove [illegible] of [illegible] offenses, dragging the case out to as great lengths as possible, in the hope of wearing out the patience and purses of those who fight them.

While the Coal Trust was in a panic, the sentiment throughout the city was one of satisfaction that the BOSTON AMERICAN had succeeded in its fight for the interests of the hundreds of thousands of people it represents. From merchants, friends of union labor and citizens generally, congratulations came fast to the office of this newspaper. A typical conversation took place at the State House between a group of politicians high in the State's affairs. They had been talking of the tariff and reciprocity, and the conversation had swung around to Secretary Olin's decision.

AMERICAN PRAISED.

"That was the work of the BOSTON AMERICAN," said one of the biggest men in the group, "and it only goes to show that the Hearst paper is a power in this community. You may talk about the tariff all you please, and I admit that at present the State is pretty evenly divided in thought on the question and that it is one that is bound to give the Republican party a lot of bother before it is settled, but the first page and the last page of the BOSTON AMERICAN are going to cause it the most trouble, to my way of thinking."

100,000 SIGN PLEA TO SAVE TUCKER FROM THE CHAIR

Enormous Crowds Flock to Headquarters to Aid in Fight for Condemned.

As was predicted early in the week, the monster petition for the commutation of the death sentence imposed upon Charles L. Tucker for the murder of Mabel Page has received more than 100,000 signatures. The press in the petition headquarters, Room 133, Kimball Building, was greater yesterday than on any previous day. Men and women thronged the office all day long, and while affixing their names to the petition [illegible] their belief in the innocence of the young prisoner.

Tucker's lawyers, Messrs. Vahey, [illegible] A. Mansfield, [illegible] to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible] which [illegible] part.

Rumors Contradicted.

"Our attention has been called to some extraordinary rumors which have gained credence in certain localities, chiefly Melrose, and Arlington, which [illegible] fatal to Tucker. They [illegible] that the body of Mabel Page was mutilated [illegible] Medical witnesses who had examined the body declared that there were [illegible] wounds and that there had been [illegible] treatment.

"In connection with the rumor relating to the death of his wife, we submit the letter received from former Police Chief of Newton, Fred A. Tarbox, as follows:

"'I fear that a very unfavorable impression concerning Tucker arose against him by reason of the [illegible] surrounding his wife's death. As chief of police of Newton I investigated this matter, and I believe that I can satisfy any one who cares to talk with me [illegible] that Tucker had absolutely nothing [illegible] with it and was in no way responsible for her death.'"

Fifty Lawyers Sign.

A list containing nearly 500 names was received from the employes of the North Station. The paper was nearly fourteen feet long.

YOUNG JAY GOULD NEW CHAMPION IN COURT TENNIS

Son of George J. Wins Brilliant Match in All-Week Tournament in New York.

New York, April 7.—Jay Gould, the seventeen-year-old son of George J. Gould, is now the national court tennis champion. The young player won the title to-day by defeating former Champion Charles E. Sands, of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club. This match was the final contest in the tournament which has been going on all week at the New York Club court.

A few weeks ago young Gould attracted a good deal of attention by winning the gold racquet trophy at the Tuxedo Park Court, and while many who saw him play then, as well as in subsequent matches, believed that he would give Sands a good battle for the title, his victory to-day surprised many of the seasoned players, both amateur and professional.

It was a closely contested game all through the three sets, and Gould won all of them, the scores standing 6—2, 6—2, and 6—4.

REV. P. S. HENSON,
Pastor of Tremont Temple:

"I am in favor of using the law against anybody that attempts to squeeze and take advantage of the people through their necessities. I heartily approve of the action of the BOSTON AMERICAN."

GEORGE B. FROST,
Independent Coal Dealer of Neponset Bridge:

"The attitude of the BOSTON AMERICAN against the Metropolitan Coal Company is something that I was glad to see. It is a good test case. We independent dealers are 'between the devil and the deep sea.' I cannot fill the orders that I am getting at the advanced price and am having all that I can do to fill the orders that I received previous to the trouble."

F. A. CLAFLIN,
Avery Chemical Company:

"The [illegible] was an outrage. The BOSTON AMERICAN has won a great victory. The coal companies' pretence of raising the price to check the demand and thereby benevolently protect the poor is altogether too diaphanous to merit the consideration of intelligent people."

JOHN W. CROOKS,
Treasurer Boston B[illegible] Company, No. 284 Franklin street:

"The price of $8 is [illegible] But we seem to be in the hands of the trust, so what are we going to do about it. The BOSTON AMERICAN is to be commended for its work in securing the suspension of the Metropolitan's license."

C. A. DODGE,
C. A. Dodge & Co., Builders, No. 6 Beacon street:

"I see no cause for the advance in the price of coal until the wholesale price is changed. When the dealers pay more for their coal they are entitled to sell at an advanced price. In this case the advance was uncalled for and the action of the AMERICAN is to be commended."

F. E. ANGELL,
Treasurer of the American Shoe Machinery Company:

"I heartily agree with the action of the BOSTON AMERICAN in bringing the coal matter before the Secretary of State. I congratulate the paper on its success in this matter."

Charges Dowie Is Racing to Zion City to Refute

THAT he was secretly married in Europe to Ruth Hofer, becoming a bigamist.

THAT he was a devotee of Scotch high balls and Italian wines.

THAT he planned to drive his wife and son from Zion as outcasts.

THAT he was attentive to all pretty women and was free in bestowing the "apostolic kiss."

ZION BANS DOWIE AS BIGAMIST;

"Elijah," Vowing Revenge, Hurries to Face Foes

WIFE AND SON WITH LEADERS OF REVOLT

Factional Fight Feared Between New Management and the "Prophet's" Friends.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, April 7.—John Alexander Dowie, "Elijah II," is expected to arrive at Zion City Monday night. The leaders of the church who have deposed him are said to be planning to have him arrested.

[illegible] the sentiment among the more intelligent members has been unanimous [illegible] "prophet," there is a fear that [illegible] the weak-kneed may rally to [illegible] support in reply to his mesmeric [illegible].

Dowie has wired his followers that he will perform a miracle upon his arrival, causing fire to descend upon the Shiloh Tabernacle, turning night into day, and bringing back upon those who have been healed their former ills. He has also said he will bring back $10,000,000 in gold. He has given out an interview, at San Antonio, Tex., to the effect that within a week he will "again be Zion's leader, accepted as a holy man of God."

Prophet in Good Health.

The deposed leader of the "Zion hosts" is reported to be in the best of health. He walks firmly, and declares that he is perfectly well.

It has come to light that Dowie had planned to divorce Mrs. Dowie, take seven new wives, and found a polygamous colony in Mexico. It is freely said by the overseers that Ruth Hofer, the wealthy Swiss girl who was driven from Zion by Mrs. Dowie, was to have been the first wife. Mrs. Dowie, nearly prostrated, says she believes her husband is insane. In this view she is supported by Gladstone Dowie, her son. Mrs. Dowie declares that she does not entirely blame her husband, saying that she believes, although he has sworn [illegible] that it was all the work of an [illegible].

Dowie strenuously denies that he intended to adopt polygamy. "Women may have proved the downfall of the prophets of old," he says, "but they have cast no spell upon the modern prophet."

It has developed that on at least one occasion before Miss Hofer's banishment from Zion a terrible quarrel arose between Dowie and his wife, after Mrs. Dowie had entered a room in which he and the young woman were, and that Dowie threw a chair at his wife, soon after which he proposed to his counsellors that he be allowed to divorce her for incompatibility. Charges are also made that Dowie lost $1,200,000 in Wall street speculation.

Reception May Be Surprise.

When Dowie, deposed leader of the Zion [illegible], arrives here on Monday night he [illegible] his resumption of his old [illegible] as his boasts en route indicate [illegible]. The new leaders of the church have [illegible] stripped him of his power [illegible] his titles of "Apostle," "Elijah the Restorer" and "Prophet," [illegible] that if he enters Zion City at [illegible] be as an humble member of the [illegible] him in a manner that will settle his position once [illegible]. As a coup de grace, it is said they are prepared to ask for a warrant charging Dowie with bigamy, under which [illegible] arrested if he attempts to make good his threats against his former followers who have now revolted.

It is charged that Dowie and Ruth Hofer were secretly married in Europe. This accusation became public to-night. It is expected to be made at the great meeting of Zionites at the Tabernacle to-morrow. A warrant is expected to be asked for on Monday.

No particulars have been given out regarding the facts upon which such a warrant might be based. Gladstone Dowie, the "prophet's" son, who is aligned with his father's enemies, and says he is charitably [illegible] that there is any evidence that Dowie has been a bigamist.

Devotee of Scotch Highballs.

It is also charged that the "prophet" was a devotee of Scotch highballs and Italian wines, and that he kept a secret store of liquor in his basement; that he had formed a plan to drive his wife and son from Zion City as outcasts, and that he had paid attention to every pretty woman he met [illegible] in Zion to rebel by [illegible] the apostolic kiss too freely.

"The report of Dowie's apparent good health has come as a surprise to Zionites, and it is feared by [illegible] of the leaders of the insurrection that this will cause some to follow him, believing that in his restoration to strength a miracle has been wrought. Dispatches from San Antonio show that there is a considerable body guard with Dowie, and it is thought there may [illegible] to force when he arrives here. There [illegible] will be difficulties if [illegible] forcibly assume any of [illegible].

"Little Lump of Gold."

Letters said to have been written Miss Hofer by Dowie are in the possession of his accusers. One of the [illegible], "My Little Lump of Gold," [illegible]:

"I am [illegible] for you to-day, [illegible] am hoping to hear again your words of comfort. I know you [illegible] change, for you are the same yesterday and to-day, yea and forever. I wait to hear again your expressions of [illegible] because they give me new hope in the womanhood of Zion. You have demonstrated to that Christ is to rule in the spirits, souls and bodies of my people. The eyes of the world are on John Alexander, first apostle of the Lord Jesus, the Christ, in the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church in Zion. Come to me again to-day and pray with me. Yours till the devil [illegible]. JOHN ALEXANDER DOWIE."

Miss Edith Ware, prominent in crisis in Zion City; Gladstone Dowie, the "unkissed son" of the "prophet," who has turned against his father, and the former head of the community, who is speeding back to refute charges made against him.

LITTLE GIRL VICTIM OF AN INHUMAN STEPMOTHER.

The most abused little child in Boston is six-year-old Julia Krasnovsky, according to Agent Mann of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. He says her case is the worst he ever experienced.

[illegible] teeth have been knocked out of [illegible] by her stepmother, Mrs. Krasnovsky, who was angered by [illegible] childish prattle. Her feet were [illegible] she was locked in a [illegible] and a night. She bears marks [illegible] beating and at the Children's [illegible] on Harrison avenue the girl is [illegible] cared for.

[illegible] is the daughter of John Krasnovsky, a [illegible] living at No. 730 East Seventh street, South Boston, and earning good pay that he averages [illegible] a week. There are five other children besides Julia. Julia and two of the others are children of Krasnovsky by his first wife.

The other three are children by his second wife, who now is beginning a three months' sentence in the House of Correction for her cruelty to Julia. In South Boston District Court yesterday Mrs. Krasnovsky denied abusing the child and resisted fiercely when sent away. It took four men to overpower her.

BOSTON BRIDE LEAPS FIVE STORIES TO HER DEATH.

A bride of one year, Mrs. Lena Sears Ives, a Boston woman, plunged from the window of her home in the fifth story of No. 918 East street, New York, say despatches to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, and was picked up dead. She had complained a few hours previously of feeling ill, but her husband [illegible] account for her death.

Mrs. Ives's maiden name was Sears. She was married in this city a [illegible] year ago to John Ives, a foreman with the Fuller Construction Company.

The death of Mrs. Ives was most sensational. Persons [illegible] looked up to the fifth story and were horrified to see the woman raise her hands above her [illegible] as if about to dive and plunge forward. She fell upon the stone pavement and was dead when picked up. Her skull was crushed.

ISAAC RICH BACK FROM INDIAN TOUR

Manager Isaac B. Rich, of the Hollis Street, Colonial and Park Theatres, returned to Boston yesterday after an absence of a month, which he spent in a cruise to and from the West Indies. In the course of his journey he visited St. Thomas, Martinique, Port au Prince, Barbadoes, Porto Rico and Havana.

Excitement Caused By Work of Firebug.

Engine driver, responding to fire, seriously hurt.

Woman dropped in faint

Three alarms run in.

Ten fires from 4 a. m. yesterday to 1:30 a. m. to-day.

FIREBUG PUTS HUNDREDS IN PERIL.

THREE ALARMS ADD TO EXCITEMENT OF NIGHT

A fire believed to be incendiary [illegible] in a lumber yard endangered [illegible] caused a woman to faint [illegible] necessitated three alarms, in the course of responding to which one engine driver was seriously injured [illegible] extinguished with a comparatively [illegible] soon after nine o'clock last night.

The blaze was the largest of the fires that occurred within a short time of each other last night.

It started in George McCauley's lumber yard in the rear of No. [illegible] Albany street. In its early stages it was [illegible], and as it threatened a number of residence blocks, three alarms were sent in. One of the buildings in danger was the frame dwelling occupied on the second floor by a family named Winters. Mrs. Caroline Winters, in her husband's absence, was overcome by fright, and was carried by Charles J. Wright to the open air, where she soon revived.

Save Horses from Flames.

Four horses were rescued from the stables of George McCauley and four more from those of the Hayes City Express Company and of J. J. Mahoney. The loss is about $4,000, divided between McCauley, the Gordin Fire Roofing Manufacturing Company and the G. J. McPherson Company.

Fifty people on an Allston-bound car at the corner of Brookline and Boston streets, were thrown into a panic last night when the side of the car suddenly burst into flame. For a moment there was a wild rush for the doors. Several people were slightly hurt. The blowing out of a fuse caused the fire, which was all out when the apparatus arrived.

Box 52, regarded by the fire department as the fatal box, was rung in last night for a fire that would have been [illegible] out for exceptionally quick work by the department. A blaze started in a lot of packing cases in the place of W. B. White & Son, boot and shoe patents, on the third floor of the block at the corner of Summer street and Church Green. A chemical engine extinguished the blaze with a loss of only $100, after a run of less than three minutes from the sounding of the alarm.

Found Unconscious.

Charles McCue and Thomas Morgan, boarders with Mrs. Catherine Leahy at No. 121 Tyler street, were dragged unconscious from their beds early this morning by boarders who occupied an adjoining room. Their mattress was on fire. Firemen extinguished the blaze after $100 damage had been done.

While driving to the three-alarm lumber yard fire, Driver Daniel Barriss of engine 37, Longwood, was thrown from his seat by the fall of one of his horses at the corner of Massachusetts and Huntington avenues. He was picked up in a semi-conscious condition, and is reported to be severely injured. The driver of a hose wagon that came up a moment later [illegible] upon the seat and took the engine to the fire.

This is the list of Boston fires between 4 a. m. yesterday and 1:30 to-day:

Mr. Driscoll was driving the horse, when the latter bolted, pitched Mr. Driscoll out, ran into a post, ripped himself loose from the carriage and continued. Mr. Driscoll was slightly injured.

METHODIST STORM ON RUM ADS.

Charge Also Made That Its Book Concern Published Bernard Shaw Book.

LETTER AS BOMB IN CHURCH CONFERENCE

HERESY AND LABOR LAW DISCUSSED AT LENGTH

Book Suppressed in New England Published by the Church Firm.

The publication of Bernard Shaw's book, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," which was suppressed in New England and New York, the setting up of cocktail and whiskey advertisements, the trouble over the eight-hour day and union shop for printers employed in the Methodist Book concern, in New York, charges of heresy and maladministration, have demanded more attention at the New England Methodist Conference at Malden the past week than the actual church business for which the conference was called.

After a long argument on the trouble in the Book Concern yesterday afternoon, the special investigation committee of nine clergymen had not arrived at a decision. Another committee meeting will be held Monday.

A stormy session is expected at that time, as the members are divided upon the question, five sustaining the question and four for the management of the concern. Nathan Newman of the executive committee of the New York Typographical Union, Frank K. Foster and President David N. Coughlan of Boston Typographical Union, are conducting the fight in behalf of the union workmen.

Affidavit of Printer.

Yesterday the committee received an affidavit from a printer in the book concern, supporting the charges of the labor union that the company had published Shaw's book and had also set up or printed much material not of a character tending to help church work.

The printer avers that he called the attention of the management and spoke to the authors regarding this matter, but the only answer he received characterized him as "insubordinate and impudent."

Ten clergymen who have been on trial for two years were received into full membership by Bishop D. H. Moore of Oregon, presiding officer. In addressing them Bishop Moore said:

"You have came to the threshold of the most blessed calling in the world. You must give up many of the earthly joys which are experienced by many men. Unless you are the sons of rich parents, or marry riches, you must give up all ideas of ever being wealthy, as there is nothing we can offer you which will overburden you with wealth."

The whole question is referred to a higher court. Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Johnston, of Manhattan, precipitated the whole argument by offering a resolution, calling attention to the charges against the Methodist Book Concern and empowering the committee on publications of the conference to make a "thorough and searching investigation."

Dispatches from New York say that the East conference at its session in the New York Avenue Methodist Church, to-day, was the scene of one of the worst internal conflicts it has ever had in open meeting. At the bottom of the trouble was "Big Six" Typographical Union, which has brought charges against the Methodist book concern that it has been setting up and making electrotype plates advertisements for whiskies, cocktails and similar liquors and has been printing other matter improper for a religious publishing house.

The ministers were thrown into a row over whether the charges should be investigated, and the ramification of the fight led to the imputations against the judgment of the presiding bishop, Charles C. McCabe, in permitting a letter of violent attack from the defense committee of the union to be read.

Bomb Thrown by Letter.

Then came the bomb that threw the whole conference into almost an uproar. Secretary Sanford arose and [illegible] a letter that he had received yesterday by special delivery from the defense committee of "Big Six."

The letter said that the committee was not intoxicated either when it made the charges by any of the whiskey or cocktails so highly recommended in the advertisements of the Methodist Book Concern.

The reading of the letter was continued despite protests that Dr. Buckley and others [illegible] body called in loud voices for the [illegible] to go on. The letter [illegible] had been made to the personnel of the defense committee, with the insinuation that its members were Roman Catholics. The name of the chairman of the defense committee was signed to the letter [illegible] Douglas, and the letter [illegible] himself was baptized in [illegible] Grove Methodist Church and that [illegible] of the conference [illegible] standing, did not enter into the charges.

JESUIT PRIEST DYING FROM CANCER.

Father Martin, General of the Order, Lost His Right Arm From Same Cause.

OPPOSED TO CATHOLIC CHURCH IN AMERICA

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rome, April 7.—Father Louis Martin, general of the order of the Jesuits, whose right arm was amputated in April, 1905, for cancer, is in a very serious condition, and is sinking fast, a cancer having appeared in his breast.

Father Martin is a Spanish theologian, was born near Burgos in 1846. He entered the Jesuit [illegible] years, and rapidly acquired a great reputation. In 1878 he was made rector of the University of Salamanca, [illegible] later became provincial of [illegible] in Castile. He was one of the [illegible] of the general, Father Anderledy, who designated him to govern the order during the period following his death, which occurred in July, 189[illegible].

When the electors assembled in September of that year he was chosen head of the order. He was a great opponent of the Americanization of the Catholic church in the United States and some three years ago was sued by an Italian editor for alleged services in [illegible] the subsidence of the movement. He admitted his opposition to the attitude of certain American prelates, but denied that he owed anything to the editor, who was non-suited. After he lost his arm the Pope, by special indult, granted him the privilege of continuing to say mass.

SIBERIAN EXILE IS A FEMALE CASE OF ENOCH ARDEN.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, April 7.—The wife of Dr. Lenickoff of this city has returned from exile in Siberia, and finds herself in a position of a female Enoch Arden.

Mme. Lenickoff was banished to Siberia for life in 1903 and divested of all rights. Her husband was not allowed to communicate with her, and finally was informed that she was dead. As he had a large family of children, he married again, and his second wife proved a kind mother to the little ones.

By the decree of last October Mme. Lenickoff, with numerous other prisoners, was liberated. She returned to St. Petersburg the other day, and, discovering what had taken place, decided not to disturb the arrangement, and went away to live quietly in the country.

But news of her return reached the doctor's home, and the second wife insisted on giving up her place to the first. Mme. Lenickoff was found and communicated with, and she refused to accept the sacrifice, but Mme. Lenickoff No. 2 persisted, and has petitioned for a divorce. As soon as it is granted the doctor and the returned exile will remarry.

NEW BRITISH SHIP IS UNSEAWORTHY

London, April 7.—The Daily Express says that the new armored cruiser Duke of Edinburgh, which was commissioned three weeks ago to join the first cruiser squadron, has been unseaworthy, owing to her excessive [illegible], and has been docked at [illegible] so badly that four of her [illegible] started and threatened to [illegible] adrift.

HUNGARY SEES NEW HOPE OF FREEDOM.

REGARDED AS A STEP TOWARD SEPARATION

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Vienna, April 7.—It was officially announced this afternoon that the new Hungarian Cabinet, which was formed yesterday with Herr Alexander Wekerle as Premier, will also include Herr Kossuth, a son of the coalition leader; Count Agrassy, Count Andrassy, Count Apponyi and Aldor. Althought the Hungarians have postponed their military demands, the appointment of the son of Leader Kossuth is regarded by them as a step toward the separation of Hungary and Austria.

The negotiations between the two countries for a new ministry were carried on at the Hotel Bristol, where numerous Americans were guests. The Americans used their kodaks and made several snapshots of the Hungarian nobles whenever the opportunity presented itself.

ESCAPES FROM JAIL DISGUISED AS A NUN

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Warsaw, April 7.—Disguised as a nun, and with the help of his revolutionary comrades, a political prisoner named Radke has made a sensational escape from custody here.

He had been arrested under suspicion of bomb throwing, after being besieged in his house for two hours. He defended himself with a revolver, and was only captured when he was severely wounded. Radke was then taken to the hospital, and was there kept under guard of two policemen.

A band of armed men entered the hospital, tied up the porter and forced one of the sisters who tended the patients to give them her gown. Others of the band had meanwhile seized and bound the two policemen. Radke put on the nun's clothing and [illegible] the hospital unchallenged.

AMERICAN SET STIRRED BY TROTH OF LONDON BEUATY

FAIR DAUGHTER OF THE HOUSE OF ROSSLYN WHO IS TO WED SCION OF JERSEY.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, April 7.—The American set in London is particularly interested in the latest London engagement, that of Lady Ivy Gordon-Lennox to Viscount Villiers, on account of the wide American acquaintance possessed by Lady Ivy's parents, Lord and Lady Algernon Gordon-Lennox. Lady "Algy," as she is familiarly called by her social cronies, is an especial favorite with the smart set. She is called the best dressed woman in London, and her social tact and talents have descended in no stinted measure on her petite and only child.

This engagement of her daughter to the heir of the Earl of Jersey is considered quite a social coup for Lady "Algy," and congratulations are being showered on the Viscount, Lady "Algy" and Lady Ivy alike.

Our American cousins will remember the social triumphs achieved by Lord and Lady Gordon Lennox on their trip to America four years ago when they were guests of prominent society people.

Lady "Algy" was praised unstintedly for her patrician beauty, her grace and her truly aristocratic bearing. These gifts, which she inherited from her mother, the Dowager Countess of Rosslyn, have descended on her daughter, who was one of the fairest debutantes of the last London season.

Lady Ivy's betrothed is George Henry Robert Child, Viscount Villiers, eldest son of the Earl and Countess of Jersey. As the heir presumptive he will succeed to the earldom, and Lady Ivy is the future Countess of Jersey.

Viscount Villiers's father, the present Earl of Jersey, is the seventh of that title. He has a rent roll of £60,000 a year and a large share in the big banking house of Child & Co., which is one of the family assets. The family seats include the noted Osterly Park at Isleworth and Middleton Park at Bicester.

KAISER ENNOBLES CONVERTED JEWS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, April 7.—The Kaiser has conferred the patent of nobility on four distinguished converted Jews of his realm: Herr Schwabach, the head of the famous banking firm of Bleichroder; Privy Councillor Caro, Fritz Friedlander, the great owner of the great racing stable in Frankfort.

It is only fair to the Kaiser to mention that, according to the Jewish Chronicle, he last week received at his table four Jewish gentlemen who were not converts. Of course, the anti-Semites in the Fatherland are furious at these favors shown to the Jewish race, and are as horrified at the honor done to the converts as at the distinction conferred upon those who retain their faith.

Refuge Stations on the Pass Are Numbered and Clever Animals Know These—Quick to Rush There With Relief

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Geneva, April 7.—The monks of the famous hospice of the St. Bernard Pass have fallen on evil days, their revenues having steadily decreased since the beginning of the Eighteenth Century. Notwithstanding their [illegible] state, however, the good monks still extend their hospitality to travelers.

The number of tourists and others who yearly accept the monks' hospitality is something like 25,000, and only about eight per cent of the number pay anything for the entertainment. It has been calculated that $375 represents the average yearly income of the monks from guests, while the expenses of the hospice amount to from $7,500 to $10,000 annually. At the hospice tourists get for nothing what they would be charged at least $6 or $7 for at a hotel in the same [illegible] elsewhere in the Alps, and the hospice will probably be replaced by a modern and expensive hotel, unless those who are entertained by the monks realize their obligations.

Meanwhile, the monks have slackened not a whit in their humane work of assisting travellers across the snowbound pass. They have erected refuge huts in the dangerous places, and even installed telephone connection with the hospice in order that help may be expedited. The St. Bernard dogs have been taught to run to any particular hut when its number is repeated to them.

REV. FATHER CHAGNON'S HELPFUL LIFE WORK

A TIME TESTED SPRING REMEDY

No one comes into closer contact with the people and their actual needs than a Catholic priest. He shares their happiness and he ministers to their suffering.

Such an one is the Rev. Father F. X. Chagnon, the pastor of St. Mary's church in Champlain, N. Y., who is a firm believer in the virtues and curative qualities of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This belief has been the result of years of experience and observation among sick and suffering people of his home town. Not only that but from his own personal experience of actual benefit received from this wonderful medicine.

The Rev. Father Chagnon knows that Dr. Greene's Nervura cures all nervous diseases, vitalizes and cleanses the blood and gives new strength to young and old. He knows that in many, many cases of serious attacks of nervous debility and even collapse Dr. Greene's Nervura has brought health and happiness. He has seen weak nervous men and women gain in strength and the ruddy glow return to the cheeks and the light to the eyes. He has seen these wonderful results produced by taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and he knows whereof he speaks.

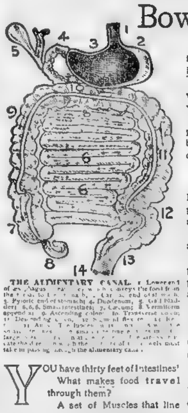
The Rev. Father F. X. Chagnon is loved and respected by everyone in town, and his word goes far. Among his people he is a hard worker, but the good he does reaches far beyond his own parish. His is a wonderfully helpful life. What he says in his letter to the public he has said hundreds of times in private to members of his own congregation and others suffering from nervousness, weakness, debility, sleepless nights or dyspepsia. Read the Reverend Father's letter:

"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and can say that it gave me entire satisfaction. I have known others of my acquaintance who have used it, and they were entirely satisfied with the results. I am free to say that I think it is a good remedy, and I can and do recommend it to others publicly. It has benefited me in nervous dyspepsia and insomnia. You have permission to publish this letter for others' good.

"F. X. CHAGNON,
"Pastor of St. Mary's Church,
"Champlain, N. Y."

Take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy this spring, for now of all times it is most dangerous to neglect your health, and the system is always made strong and vigorous by this perfect spring medicine.

Remember the great advantage of having your medicine put up by Dr. Greene, a regular practicing physician, who guarantees his nervura and will stand behind it at all times. Dr. Greene himself will give free consultation and advice, personally or by mail, at his office, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., to all who use Nervura, or contemplate its use.



Your Thirty Feet of Bowels

THE ALIMENTARY CANAL. 1 Lower end of the gullet [illegible] which conveys the food from the throat to the stomach; 2 Cardiac end of stomach; 3 Pyloric end of stomach; 4 Duodenum; 5 Gall bladder; 6, 6, 6 Small intestines; 7 Cæcum; 8 Vermiform appendix; 9 Ascending colon; 10 Transverse colon; 11 Descending colon; 12 Sigmoid flexure; 13 Rectum; 14 Anus. [illegible] the alimentary canal.

YOU have thirty feet of Intestines! What makes food travel through them?

A set of Muscles that line the walls of these Intestines or Bowels.

When a piece of Food rubs the walls of the Intestines these Muscles tighten behind it, and thus it starts a Muscle-wave which drives it through the whole length of the Bowels.

It should take about 12 hours to do this properly, so that nutritious parts of the food may have time to be digested and absorbed.

But,—if it takes twice or three times that period the food spoils in passing, and becomes as poisonous as if it had decayed before being eaten.

Now, the cause of delay (Constipation) is simply Weakness, or laziness of the Bowel-Muscles.

Want of Exercise, Indoor Employment, weakens these Bowel-Muscles, just as it weakens Arm and Leg Muscles.

Castor Oil or Glycerine, will grease the passages for one load of Food at a time, but these lubricants can't help the Cause of Delay.

* * *

They do not remove the Cause of Constipation.

Moreover, they waste so much of the precious Digestive Fluids, in the flushing process, that takes a bigger dose every succeeding time to move the Bowel load.

But this is different with Cascarets.

Cascarets act on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines. They act just as Cold Water, or Exercise act on a Lazy man.

They act like exercise.

How to Cure Rheumatism

I searched the whole earth for a specific for Rheumatism—something that I or any physician could feel safe in prescribing—something that we could count on not only occasionally, but with reasonable certainty. For the ravages of Rheumatism are everywhere, and genuine relief is rare.

After twenty years of search and experiment I learned of the German chemical I now employ and I knew then that my search and my efforts were well rewarded. For this chemical, in combination with others, gave me the basis of a remedy which in the cure of Rheumatism is practically certain. In many, many tests and difficult cases this prescription has with [illegible] justified the confidence I had in it.

I don't mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Tablets can [illegible] flesh again and never [illegible] will with reasonable [illegible] and the poison that causes pain [illegible] and then that is the end of the [illegible] the end of the suffering [illegible] of Rheumatism.

Any Rheumatic sufferer who writes may receive my little book on Rheumatism, including professional advice as to diet, etc., free. With the book I will also send without charge my "Health Token," an intended passport to good health. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 5898, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases are sometimes reached by a single package—for sale by 40 000 Druggists.

BE STRONG AND YOU WILL BE SUCCESSFUL

Whatever you aim at, start with the strength that Electro-Vigor gives.

Almost everybody is ambitious. Have you achieved your ambition? If not, do you know why you fail? [illegible] tell you.

Those who succeed usually possess a sound mind in a sound body. As the phrenologist would say, they have the faculty of continuity, the habit of pursuing an object without swerving or wavering because of obstacles—fixity of purpose.

The person who succeeds must have strong nerves—nerves of steel—popularly termed natural ability.

The persons who fail to achieve their ambition, the people who tire easily, give up at the first few obstacles and blame that uncertain quantity called circumstance.

Success depends on your own nervous energy—failure attends the lack of it.

While it is true we owe much to science, science owes all to the nervous energy of those who scorn to fail, no matter what obstacles are in the path of their investigations. Such people were Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat; Stephenson, the father of the railroad; Morse, the inventor of the telegraph; Cyrus Field, who laid the first cable; the living Marconi, who succeeded in sending wireless messages, in spite of [illegible] remarkable [illegible] and our own versatile Edison, who works incessantly to wrest the secrets of Nature for the use of mankind.

Such people succeed because their nerves are chock full of energy, or nerve force, which sustains fixity of purpose.

[illegible] force or energy? It [illegible] the human body [illegible] or weak person, does not have enough. How can they get it?

They must supplement the natural with a supply from other sources than their own bodies. They must draw on another supply furnished by Nature. Is it drugs? No. Drugs are poisons to the nerves. Electricity is the natural food of the nerves. When the mother's breast fails, the child is fed by milk from the cow. The parent doesn't go to a drug shop and buy poisons and dope with which to nourish the child. So the persons of weak nerves must feed, not poison, their nerves if they would get stronger and able to achieve their ambitions. The food they must use is Electricity.

[illegible] spent more than a score of years investigating and [illegible]

My success is due to the fact that I have known [illegible] prevent the attainment of my object, viz., to find some remedy other than drugs which will in a natural way build up and restore men and women to the full standard of manhood and womanhood, and put into them the nervous energy which will enable them to achieve their ambitions. My success has been demonstrated by my making the lame from Rheumatism to walk, strengthening weak and lame backs, restoring [illegible] of digestion to weak stomachs, regulating the bowels and inducing livers to work [illegible] who were unsteady [illegible]

ELECTRO-VIGOR [illegible] it is always charged [illegible] day, either while you sleep, walk or work [illegible] When you have [illegible] feel a pleasant sensation [illegible] succeeded by a feeling of acquired strength. [illegible] back what was lost and what you thought could never be [illegible] empty reservoir of nervous energy is being refilled and you are getting

SPRING BOOM IN REAL ESTATE CONTINUES.

CULVER FARM, GROTON, SOLD TO BOSTON MAN

Spring trade in the real estate market continues to maintain the activity which began some three weeks ago. Business is fairly well distributed, but the city property has perhaps not had its full share during the past week. In the suburbs and country, however, transactions have been brisk. A number of large [illegible] were consummated during the week.

An interesting farm sale was that of the Culver farm, situated in Groton on what is known as "F[illegible] Row," on the main thoroughfare leading from Ayer to Groton. It is in close proximity to the famous Groton School. It is one of the high-class $15,000 farms which the town of Groton boasts, and contains seventy-five acres of land, in a high state of cultivation, a large orchard and a typical old New England house. The property has been purchased by one of Boston's wealthiest men, who will occupy it as a summer home, after making extensive improvements. The sale was made through the Edward T. Harrington Company.

The Edward T. Harrington Company reports that final papers have been passed for the sale of the John Scott estate in West Newton. The property consists of a ten-room house, stable, three large greenhouses, and three acres of land with large peach and pear orchards. The purchaser, Mrs. Lizzie S. Stone of Allston, will occupy after making extensive alterations and repairs. The whole is assessed on a valuation of $8,500. This office also reports that deeds have gone to record conveying the estate No. 15 Hutchinson street, Winthrop, to Dr. George L. Van Deursen of Lowell. The property was owned by the Columbia Trust Company of East Boston, and comprises a modern two-family house of fourteen rooms, together with 5,000 square feet of land, all assessed for $5,300. The purchaser paid cash and will occupy for a home.

At Arlington Heights.

Through the same office the double house, No. 19 Wollaston avenue, Arlington Heights, together with 5,000 square feet of land, has been sold for Emma L. Hall, to a party who buys for occupancy. The house was built three years ago and is one of the many attractive places which this part of Arlington boasts. The price paid was $5,[illegible].

Edward T. Harrington Company reports that contracts have been signed through its office for the sale for Mary E. Cameron of the estate No. 14-16 Marie avenue, Everett, consisting of a modern two-family house of twelve rooms and 4,000 square feet of land. The purchaser buys for investment.

P. F. Lotard has negotiated the sale for Mrs. Christiana Joergensen of a seventy-five-acre stock farm in that part of Plainville called Sheppardville. There are an attractive house, a large barn and several henneries, and a trout brook which forms the boundary. A herd of cattle and all other personal property were included in the deal. This is one of the first farms sold in Plainville since it was set off from Wrentham.

The same agent also has sold for Edward P. Johnson an estate upon Leland avenue, Ashland, to Charles H. P. Eldridge of the Boon-Mumford Works. There are nearly 50,000 square feet of land, an eight-room house and stable in the premises.

Sale in Claremont Park.

In the South End Henry W. Savage reports the sale for Abbie F. Wood of her three-story brick dwelling No. 26 Claremont park, assessed on $6,[illegible] of which $2,800 is on the 1,872 feet of land in the estate. Frederick Kem, the purchaser, buys for investment.

W. O. Wilkins has sold through the E. G. Bradshaw Company to Buffalo (N. Y.) parties his fine country estate situated in [illegible] Rockingham County, N. H., comprising eighty acres of land and a large modern house, barns and various other outbuildings, commanding a magnificent unobstructed view from the White Mountains to the Atlantic Ocean. The terms of the sale are private. The selling price was $7,500. The same firm has also sold for the owner, Mrs. Ada M. Marsh of Barre, her ten-acre farm located in the eastern part of Barre on the Hubbardston road, with a set of farm buildings and a lot of standing timber. The present owner buys for investment on private terms, and will establish a large poultry plant, and will build extensive poultry houses. The buyer's name is not made public. Mr. Landshaw has sold for the owner, Chauncey Sawin, his ninety-acre stock and fruit farm located in the southerly part of Westminster, on the Princeton road. The buyer, Oliver S. Upham of Somerville, who will occupy the property, will make extensive improvements. The price paid is not made public.

Lawyer to Build Fine House.

Edward T. Harrington Company has sold for the Boston Co-operative Bank a lot of land, corner Oxford and Warren streets, Winchester, containing about 10,000 square feet, to a well-known Boston lawyer, who will erect thereon, for his own occupancy, a beautiful house. This is one of the few remaining lots in this most exclusive section. The same firm has sold for Edward J. Pierce of Boston the estate No. 16 Beacon street, Winthrop, known as "The Halcyon," comprising a cottage of nine rooms, together with 3,400 square feet of land, located on Cottage Hill, near the Beach station. The purchaser, Mrs. Adeline Billings of Somerville, buys for a home.

$3,000,000 CAPITAL IN REORGANIZED COMPANY.

The reorganized King-Crowther Company was incorporated at Augusta, Me., yesterday with an authorized capital of $3,000,000. News of the reorganization was received in Boston with surprise, as the company forfeited its charter in 190[illegible] as the result of litigation and the appointment of a receiver. It had undertaken the development of a large tract of oil land in southwestern Texas, comprising all told nearly 100,000 acres. Officers and friends of the company claimed that the proceedings resulting in the forfeiture of the charter were summary, unwarranted and high handed.

The company originally had its main office in State street, Boston, with branch offices in New York, Providence, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis and other American cities, also in London and various European capitals.

It appears that after the company's charter was revoked, reorganization was speedily effected and the development of the oil field continued with but slight interruption.

C. F. King, the financial agent of the company, who has offices in the Journal Building, on Washington street, speaks of the reorganization as follows:

"The property was not only saved from devastation and ruin after loss of its charter, but was speedily reorganized as the Boston & Texas Corporation, which nearly continued to carry forward development work and operations in the field. All of this was accomplished in such a short space of time that the interruption in the development of the property was less than six months. Stockholders of the former King-Crowther Corporation were given shares in the new Boston & Texas Corporation in exchange for their holdings.

"The development work which was commenced in Texas five years ago by the King-Crowther Corporation and since continued by its successor, the Boston & Texas Corporation, has brought about a new and better condition for all the country round about. It shall be the policy of the King-Crowther Corporation to encourage the complete development of the country, not only as an oil property, but from an agricultural and general upbuilding point of view as well.

"All debts of the old King-Crowther Corporation have been satisfactorily adjusted and the new King-Crowther Corporation comes into existence free and clear of debt, owing no man a dollar."

SCHIDLOFSKI, SULLEN AND UNKEMPT, HEARS HIS DOOM

BY REV. A. E. GEORGE.

John Schidlofski, who was found guilty of the murder of his wife, Mat[illegible], at the Arlington Golf Club links last July, was sentenced yesterday to death in the electric chair in the week beginning July 8, by Judge Lawton in the East Cambridge court.

He came into court in charge of Deputy Sheriffs Wardwell and Fairburn.

His countenance did not reveal much at first, but when he took his seat in the cage he then began to indicate by his various motions that he was thinking of the end. He was muttering to himself. Occasionally he lifted his eyes and took in at a side glance the spectators who were watching him.

His hands twitched and when he was asked to stand up to receive his sentence his body swayed for a moment [illegible] straightened up itself, and without a word [illegible] he received his sentence.

He sat down after [illegible] there was a momentary silence [illegible] felt a solemn [illegible] less, friendless and miserable did he appear [illegible] He was thinking of something. Was he thinking of his wife, Marelda? Was he [illegible] what he did? Was he [illegible] and peeped into the future [illegible] passed over his countenance [illegible] expression. It was worth nothing [illegible] the Judge [illegible] for the next move of [illegible] officers.

It was the expression of inward feeling [illegible] as if it would seek to make itself known. But as soon as the [illegible] of the court officials was laid upon the prisoner it died away and silently this sad spectacle was brought to an end, and the crowd paused in its breathing as the figure faded in the distance.

There was a marked difference between the interest shown in the sentence of [illegible] and in the sentence of Schidlofski. [illegible] There was no sentiment in the latter [illegible] Nobody seemed to care. No friend [illegible] to be present. The spectators were largely indifferent and the whole scene barely consumed five minutes.

House Work

Need Not Wear Her Out

The drudgery of house work seems never ending to tired-out, dispirited women who suffer from female complaints or irregularities. Inflammation and ulceration of the womb and ovaries cause fearful bearing down pains which are aggravated by much standing on the feet, and lifting necessary in house work.

But let no woman despair of relief from this torture, the famous tonic reconstructor of diseased or disordered female organism, has cured more than one million American Women, and it will cure you. When monthly periods are painful or irregular, when backaches and headaches drive out all ambition, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring back health, strength, and happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

It Gave Me New Life and Vigor

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Last spring, while we were moving, I did considerable more work than my strength permitted, and, having mental trouble at the same time, my health broke down completely and I found myself unable to rest or eat. My nervous system became shattered and I was pale and emaciated and had to take to my bed.

My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, although I had no faith in patent medicines, I was so miserable that I would take anything for relief. I found that it made a complete change for the better, inducing appetite and restful sleep and imparting new life and vigor to my entire system.

I gained nearly fourteen pounds, my complexion looked fresh and clear, and my best friends were surprised and pleased at the change and could hardly credit the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had accomplished it.

FREE TO MEN!

UNTIL CURED

Manly strength—strength of [illegible] nature's highest perfected work. Which man is [illegible] without it failure. Nearly all men have [illegible] a constitution to build such a structure upon but through foolish dissipations have wasted the material [illegible]. Men live too fast these days. The search for imaginary pleasure, trying to squeeze the happiness of a lifetime into a few years, exhausts the strength [illegible] they are wrecked in man's grandest ambition [illegible] strength of brain and body. There are thousands of [illegible] weak, timid, puny men—half men—who can be made perfect specimens of manhood when the grand element that has been drained from their system is restored. This element is Electricity. We know there is no strength, no vitality, in fact, no life, without it. This being the fact, can there be a more natural remedy? I say there is not, and tens of thousands of cures during my nearly forty years' practice in Electricity say the same. I have the greatest invention for self treatment by Electricity the world has ever known and so sure am I of what it will do that any man who needs it can have the use of my latest modern Herculex

DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT FREE UNTIL CURED

I don't ask one cent in advance or on deposit but upon request I furnish you the belt, and if you are well or satisfied in say two months, pay me my price, many cases as low as $5.00. If not satisfied, return it and the transaction is closed. I have made a sworn statement to faithfully carry out this offer and trust you will not confound it with the C. O. D. shams advertised, as I send no goods C. O. D., unless you so order, or for cash I give wholesale discount.

What would you not give to have your old vim back, to feel as your did a few years ago, to have the same snap and energy, the same gladsome, joyous, light-hearted spirit and the physical strenght you used to have? You might as well have these blessings, for my offer must convince you what I feel I can do for you. I will give you the use of the best Electric Belt the world knows and you probably know I am the father of the electric appliance system of treatment—and advice gathered from the experience of nearly forty years' success in my line. But this does not mean that I am giving belts away, but does mean you are not to pay one penny until you are cured. By this method I do tenfold the business and good I would were I trying to sell "a pig in a bag." It pays me and it pays my patients. Of course, imitators imitate my goods (what good thing is not imitated?), but my great knowledge from long, successful experience is mine alone and free to my patients.

This offer is especially to men who want more strength and vitality, who suffer from impotency, drains, varicocele, &c., but my belt also cures Rheumatism, Lame Back, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Troubles, general ill-health, &c., and I give it on same terms. It is simply worn around the body while you sleep, in the morning you wake up full of strength and vim, prepared to face the world [illegible].

Call or write to-day and let me assist you to health and happiness, as I have so many thousand others. I will at once arrange to give you my belt on terms mentioned above, and two best little books ever written upon Electricity and its medical uses. Free, sealed, by mail. Address

CITIZENS IN MASS MEETING TO FIGHT SALEM LIQUOR LICENSE DEALS

Seventeen Out of Thirty-Seven Men and Places Granted Privilege Have Been Convicted of Illegal Rum Selling.

Incensed because seventeen out of the thirty-seven liquor licenses, which will go into effect in Salem May 1, have been granted to men who were convicted in open court of illegal selling of liquor when the city was [illegible] members of the Salem Anti-Saloon League and a number of citizens who are not members, will assemble in mass meeting next Thursday night to pr[illegible] what they consi[illegible] on the part of the Board of License Commissioners. Talk of "graft" is heard openly on the streets and this subject is expected to be aired at the mass meeting. The protest which is being formulated is intended for Mayor Pinnock.

Among other grievances against the commissioners is that they granted a license to sell liquor in a cellar and other [illegible] the cellar or the vacant lot had

Had Been in Bridgewater.

That the rule in regard to the qualifications of an applicant cut no figure with the commissioners is instanced by the fact that they granted a license to a man who has "done time" in Bridgewater.

While there is no law prohibiting the granting of a license to persons convicted of violating the liquor law, a popular feeling [illegible] in Salem that when there is a [illegible] licenses, as there was in the town last week, preference should be given to business men with absolutely clean records.

BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporters learned in Salem yesterday from [illegible] and court records that seventeen convictions stand against recently licensed persons. Some of the locations are where "express offices" or kitchen bar rooms have been maintained and their alleged proprietors convicted of violating the liquor law.

Conspicuous Seventeen.

EUGENE LARRIVEE, Nos. 20 and 24 Congress street.

P. FRANCIS WHEARTY, No. 22 Derby square.

RICHARD J. THORNTON, No. 23 Derby square.

ALDEN B. GARDNER, Nos. 16 and 20 Front street, and Nos. 29 and 20½ Derby square.

JEREMIAH F. DAILEY, No. 27 Congress street.

JAMES J. CARROLL, No. 14 Aborn street.

DENIS HAGERTY, No. 131½ Boston street.

J. EDWARD HENNESSEY, No. 105 Mason street.

THOMAS L. BRADY, No. 16 Mill street.

CLIFFORD J. BRANELLE, No. 21 Derby square.

CHARLES W. MEADY, No. 72 Lafayette street.

DELPHIS RIOUX, No. 22 New Derby street.

MILLER and O'DONNELL, Colonial House, Washington street.

The License Board.

There are three license commissioners in Salem—Robert E. Pollock, who is chairman of the board; Edward J. Sweeney and Morgan J. McSweeney. The Anti-Saloon League has no grievance against Mr. McSweeney, who is described as altogether out of sympathy with his colleagues. Licenses are granted by a majority vote. Pollock and Sweeney invariably vote together.

"Bob" Pollock, as his friends call him, is a barber. His shop on Lafayette street has for years been a favorite resort for sports and men engaged in the liquor selling industry.

"Teddy" Sweeney, who was a leather dealer until he recently failed in business, has no regular occupation now. In bankruptcy proceedings last week he testified that he was unable to read and that the only writing he could do was to sign his name. Three years ago Sweeney was sued for $10,000 by a French woman for breach of promise. The case was compromised for $150.

Invited to make statements in reply to the clamor raised against them, Commissioners Pollock and Sweeney bluntly declined to do so, both saying in effect that it would be time enough to answer charges when, if ever, official charges are made.

Mayor Is Keeping Still.

From a thoroughly authoritative source, however, it was learned by a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter that Mayor Pinnock would gladly rid his administration of Pollock and Sweeney only for a recent decision of the Supreme Court which prohibits a mayor from summarily removing his commissioners until after they have been tried on charges.

President Hill of the Anti-Saloon League is determined that Pollock and Sweeney shall go. His courteous appeals to them, he says, to respect the just demands of the people have been rejected with arrogance amounting to contempt.

Of course, the pilloried license commissioners have their friends, too. But generally speaking, and for reasons best known to themselves, they are keeping under cover. Everybody in Salem seems to be taking sides in the controversy over the licenses—even the humorists, as this advertisement published in a local afternoon newspaper plainly proves:

WANTED—Two first-class license commissioners and one city marshal; references required. Address T. G. P., City Hall, Salem.

Thomas G. Pinnock is Salem's perplexed mayor.

WITTE IN MINORITY FORCED TO RETIRE

Russian Premier's Withdrawal Now Matter of Short Time.

London, April 8.—Reynolds's newspaper states that the retirement of Count Witte as the Russian premier is now only a matter of hours. The ostensible reason which will be given for his retirement is ill health. The real reason for his surrender of his office is because the moderate party is in a minority in St. Petersburg.

FIRST RAILROAD TO PAY BACK TAXES

Lansing, Mich., April 7.—The Chicago & Northwestern Railroad has paid into the Michigan state treasury $640,758 for back taxes. This is the first road to pay up its taxes under the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding the Michigan ad valorem tax law of 1901.

Pneumonia and Bronchitis Cured

Mr. Charles W. Temple, of Manchester, New Hampshire, aged 73, praises Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for its wonderful curative powers.

Mr. Temple was enabled recently to celebrate his golden wedding anniversary, thanks to Duffy's, which cured him of pneumonia after having been confined to his bed for four long weary months.

He also finds Duffy's his only relief from bronchitis, with which he has suffered for years.

In an appreciative letter Mr. Temple says:

"I am nearly 73 years old and celebrated my golden wedding anniversary on November 15th last in the very best of health.

"In February, 1904, I was taken sick with pneumonia and was laid up for four months. No one thought I would recover, and I had almost given up hope myself, when I decided to try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

"It soon cured me and brought back my health and strength to me. I find Duffy's my only relief for bronchitis, with which I have suffered for years, and I am never without a bottle of your grand medicine. CHAS. W. TEMPLE, 63 Peacock St., Manchester, N. H., Dec. 22nd, 1905."

UNCLE SAM DIVIDENDS IN KANSAS START JUNE 20TH 06.

Kansas Oil Brings $4.29 per Barrel—Uncle Sam Will Soon Be Handling Nine Hundred (900) Barrels Per Day.

At Cherryvale this company has refinery No. 1 in successful operation, and commencing with this week will [illegible] three hundred (300) barrels every twenty-four hours. We have been selling oil for several months and know that under the present market price, $4.29 per barrel is conservative. We own or control our own production. Even if the oil trust should break the market one-half Uncle Sam would still make big money.

The Big River Refinery No. 2 Will Start in Sixty Days With 600 Barrels More Per Day.

Go up to Atchison, Kas., and you will find Uncle Sam refinery No. 2 nearing completion. This refinery will start with 600 barrels daily capacity and will be increased to 1,200 barrels by some time in July or August.

Refinery No. 3 at Tulsa Will Start at 600 Barrels Per Day.

Work is not only crowding ahead at the big river refinery, but nearly 300 miles to the southwest the Uncle Sam flag is flying on the banks of the Arkansas, in the very heart of the great Indian territory—surrounded by thousands of friends, with a market waiting for Uncle Sam oil all over Oklahoma. Tulsa not only has five railroads, but light barges can be taken down the Arkansas River to the Southern markets.

Combined Capacity of the Three Uncle Sam Refineries Will Be 1,500 Barrels by July or August.

By the middle of July or August Uncle Sam chain of three refineries will be handling Fifteen Hundred barrels daily. Nine hundred barrels of this oil will bring the company under the present market conditions $4.29 per barrel, while 600 barrels will bring Uncle Sam $5.04 per barrel. Those of you who think Uncle Sam stock will not increase in solid values to $1.00 per share and continue to grow in value will have sufficient proof in less than four months that the stock offered to you in this announcement was a fortune maker.

By September 15 Uncle Sam Refineries No. 2 and No. 3 Will Be Up to 2,400 Barrels Daily.

The big river refinery, No. 2, by Atchison, and also refinery No. 3, on the banks of the Arkansas by Tulsa, are being built so that in sixty days' time they can both be increased at a very small expense to 1,200 barrels capacity per day at each plant. This will make Uncle Sam combined output by early fall 2,700 barrels daily. This will be done regardless of what any knocker may say, for this company does what it lays plans to complete. Even allow Uncle Sam a profit of only 25 cents per barrel, while we will make nearer ten times that amount, and you will realize that the man's head is level who is buying Uncle Sam stock.

Uncle Sam Company owns four complete drilling rigs. Every one of these drills is at work and may be increased to six or ten drills in less than ninety days. Uncle Sam started in to win and with the loyal backing of nine-tenths of the voters of the Missouri Valley is growing stronger every hour and will force a change for the good in the oil fields. The time to join our band is while you can. The company is offering you a square deal and a great money maker.

We Can Sell the Oil—Sixteen Distributing Stations Now Completed—More Under Construction.

At the following trade centres in the Missouri Valley states Uncle Sam Company has refined oil storage tanks, tank wagons and loyal men delivering Uncle Sam oil to its thousands of customers. No trouble to sell the oil. Could be selling right now the output of a Ten Thousand barrel daily capacity refinery. There are over five hundred good trade centres that want Uncle Sam distributing stations and it will be just a question of a few months until Uncle Sam oil will be placed on the market in several scores of these places. It takes time to line up all of these stations, but steadily and safely Uncle Sam is taking one stronghold after another until the day will come by fair dealing and superior oils Uncle Sam will secure and maintain the oil market of the Missouri Valley. Better join our army now, over seven thousand strong, and do your part to push the good work to success. Meantime, if you do your trading at any of the following cities insist on your merchant standing by a home product. From one to three tank wagons are delivering Uncle Sam oil every day from Uncle Sam storage tanks in the following named cities:

Sixty Six Miles More Main Trunk Pipe Line Purchased.

This will give Uncle Sam one hundred and thirty-five miles main trunk pipe line. The [illegible] oil trust and their railroad allies, following the black flag of criminal rebates, with all the power of their dirty millions, cannot hinder the onward march of the Uncle Sam chain of three refineries and pipe lines, simply because Uncle Sam is fast getting onto independent grounds. Just a matter of a few weeks until sixty-six miles more of the main trunk pipe line will be delivered and completed. Uncle Sam is going into the oil industry to stay, and is purchasing Byers wrought iron pipe, which will last for thirty years. With main trunk pipe line completed, Uncle Sam can pump oil from the great oil fields near Bartlesville to the Missouri river for nine cents per barrel, while from the larger part of the Kansas field we can pump to the Missouri river for from three to six cents per barrel. Without this pipe line the Oil trust railroads would refuse to haul our cars, would delay our shipments and juggle freight rates until Uncle Sam would be crippled. However, Uncle Sam has followed the safe course and over our pipe line we can transport our oil to the Missouri river, and then by light barge to Omaha, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Jefferson City, St. Louis, Memphis and, in fact, can and will reach the markets of the world from St. Louis. Uncle Sam will save yearly in freights alone enough to pay more than six (6) cents per share in dividends on the stock now selling and herein offered you at only twenty cents per share, when its capacity is up to three thousand (3,000) barrels per day. However, allowing for many a mishap, the investment still stands one thousand chances to one of going to considerable past par or $1.00 per share, or five times the present selling price of the stock.

Mammoth Pipe Line Pumps.

Two of the main trunk pipe line pumps and boilers are now at Cherryvale and paid for. Three more will be shipped at once. The first five stations will be completed during the next sixty days and the one hundred and thirty-five miles of pipe line put into immediate use.

Cash Paid In for Stock and Refined Oils Up to Date Is Over $480,000.

Just a matter of a few days until the half million dollar mark will be reached by Uncle Sam in cash that has been paid in for stock and oil up to date. Thousands upon thousands of this money have been invested where it has five-folded in value for Uncle Sam. Besides this, there is now subscribed for stock already allotted from the treasury close to sixty thousand dollars (60,000), which will be paid during the next three to six months.

One Million Dollars and Ten Thousand Stockholders

Will be back of Uncle Sam in less than ninety days. With this vast army of loyal men it means a power for success and that in every hamlet Uncle Sam men will be guarding the interests of Uncle Sam. Uncle Sam from the start has tried to secure men as well as money and would rather have ten men subscribe $100 each than one man $1,000. From the way the stock is selling now the balance of one million dollars will be received during the next four months and our band of loyal stockholders increased to past ten thousand. Every state in the Union is represented. Makes no difference whether you live in New York, California or Florida, you are welcome to join our band. The people of the entire Nation are back of Uncle Sam, and the time will come that Uncle Sam oil will be sold as far and as wide as its stockholders are now located. Canada, Old Mexico and several places across the sea are also represented in Uncle Sam Company.

Remittances for the Past Thirty Days Over Fifty Thousand Dollars.

You may think that Uncle Sam stock is not in demand and that you have plenty of time to secure stock before it is all sold. However, a few minutes at the home office of the company would soon change your mind. From ten to sixteen clerks are kept busy at work on the company's books and in sending out reports and information to the thousands of stockholders and prospective investors. Every day telegrams are received reserving stock while special delivery and registered letters are continuously arriving, and other mail by the hundreds from the four corners of the United States. Remittances for stock and oil during the past thirty days are over fifty thousand dollars. Wise investors from everywhere are buying the stock, and from telegrams and inquiries now received indicate that close to one hundred thousand dollars will be received during the next thirty days, and when the next thirty days have passed just that much more pipe line and refinery equipment will be back of Uncle Sam.

Thousands Have Paid What You Are Asked to Pay.

When you join the Uncle Sam you pay no more than thousands of others. The stock to-day would bring thirty to forty cents per share, but Uncle Sam can complete the great work outlined and sell the stock at twenty cents per share. So we are going to crowd the work to completion, and the stock will soon go to par after the refineries and pipe lines are all completed. Don't you think you had better invest $10.00 to $1,000 while you can do so at a price you know is right?

Good Will and Good Fortune for Uncle Sam on Every Hand.

When you invest your money with this rapidly growing enterprise you place your investment where it not only will bring you good results, but you further the cause of a square deal in the oil fields. Every day Uncle Sam is growing stronger, while every day the attacks on the criminal oil trust are increasing from every point in the United States. Uncle Sam is the recognized formidable foe of the trust, around whom the common people and all followers of the square deal can rally and do effective work. Attorney General Hadley has forced the oil trust anarchists of New York to testify, and has won his case in Missouri, and has discovered testimony that will start suits against the aggressive trust in twenty-five more states. Every day the oil trust is losing ground, and, like every band of criminals following a black flag, will be driven to defeat and forced to respect law, and compelled to be decent, and that leaves an opening for independent oil, and Uncle Sam is the only enterprise in a position to step in and secure this great oil trade. Good will and good fortune seem to be with Uncle Sam, and the man who can read the signs of the times just a little bit knows Uncle Sam stock is the winner of the day, and the greatest investment offered in the United States. Now is the time for you to invest and help the good work along.

Will Commence Paying Dividends June 20, 1906.

Figure for yourself the great profits made in refining oil and consider the strong line-up of Uncle Sam Refinery No. 1 at Cherryvale, now in successful operation, and with two more great refineries under construction that will soon be turning in much greater earnings, and you will readily see that dividends will not only commence June 20, 1906, but will continue and double and treble.

Don't Be Misled by Oil Trust Lies or Skin Game Brokers.

For several months there has been a systematic game of blackmail against Uncle Sam. Certain supposed financial mediums have circulated trust lies for so much per. Other blackmailing and skin game brokers have sneaked cut rate advertisements on Uncle Sam stock in a few papers.

Don't let these parties beat you out of your money or delay you in your investment until others have the stock you want. When you want stock send your remittances direct to the company and you will be properly enrolled and receive your stocks by return registered mail.

Own or Controls Oil Rights in Over Thirty Thousand (30,000) Acres.

Owning refineries, pipe lines, tank cars, storage tanks for both refined and crude oil and also tank wagons, backed by public sentiment and our territory where Uncle Sam is selling the output of Refinery No. 1, and will sell the output of Refineries No. 2 and No. 3 by thousands of stockholders, and with oil rights on which Uncle Sam can drill thousands of oil wells, certainly is a line-up that all must admit is impregnable. Among the Thirty Thousand (30,000) acres above mentioned is Eleven Hundred Acre Lot 43, Osage, where the company now has a settled production of between 300 and 400 barrels daily. We have thousands of barrels of this high grade oil in storage, with which to [illegible] Refinery No. 2. We are now tank carrying some of [illegible] Refinery No. 1 [illegible] will only do so temporar[illegible] [illegible] Paraffine plant that will [illegible] will bring Uncle Sam [illegible] [illegible] the oil pools, and every hour additional pipe line and refinery equipment is going back of Uncle Sam, making the stock [illegible] in value. It would take you over six weeks' time to go over the different oil properties and visit the different refineries and [illegible] Eleven Hundred Acre Lot 43 [illegible]

You Should Act Promptly.

NEW ORLEANS WINS HEAVY-HITTING GAME FROM COLLINS' TEAM

By Boston American Staff Correspondent with Team.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 7.—New Orleans took the third game of the series from Boston yesterday afternoon at Athletic Park by the score of 4 to 3. For the first time in a long while the New Orleans were in their batting clothes, and it was heavy hitting that won the game for the local team. Two three-base hits, one two-base hit and seven singles fell to the credit of the Pelicans, and while the Beaneaters also did some good batting their hits were more scattered, and errors at critical times proved disastrous for them. When the Pelicans landed on Harris they batted the ball unmercifully. Bolin pitched the whole game for New Orleans and put up a very good showing.

The Beaneaters did not find him very puzzling, however, and although they did not smash out as long hits as the Pelicans did they generally found the ball when they were looking for it. Huber again played a star game for the Pelicans. He was called upon for two sacrifice hits, and so his stickwork did not show up conspicuously as it has in former games. His fielding was fast, and several times he accepted some very difficult chances.

"Old Man" Breitenstein held the indicator and proved an able diamond boss. The Beaneaters did not think his decisions came exactly up to the high standard set by "Big Jim" Sullivan yesterday, but they honored him by declaring that he was fully as good as Professor Charley Green.

New Orleans scored one run in the first inning. Nadeau reached first on an error of Parent's at shortstop. Knoll lined out a single, and advanced Nadeau to third, and he came home on a drive of Beck into centre garden. Then the Pelicans didn't score another run until the seventh inning. Bolin reached first on a bunt and came in on a three-base hit of Nadeau.

The Pelicans got their last two runs in the eighth inning. Knoll led off with a three-base hit, and when Beck sent one skipping over the grass to Manager Collins, the latter threw wild to first, and Knoll came home, while Beck reached the second sack. He was advanced to third on a bunt of O'Brien, and when Huber bunted down the first base line he bounded across the rubber.

The Beaneaters scored their first two runs in the fourth inning, after two men had been put out. Freeman walked to first, and stole second. Grimshaw got a two-bagger into right centre, and Freeman came home. Then Godwin got a single over second base, and Grimshaw scored.

The score stood four to two in the Pelicans' favor when the Beaneaters came to the bat in the last half of the ninth inning, and this ended the matter. The score:

TENNEY'S MEN LOSE TO WASHINGTON IN NINTH.

Boston Nationals Had Stahl's Team Whipped Up to the Last Minute.

Special to the Sunday American.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—The final game of the series between the Senators and Fred Tenney's Boston National League team this afternoon wound up with a sensational finish, the final score being 4 to 3 in favor of the local team. Charley Jones was the hero of the occasion for, with two men out in the last inning and two bases occupied, he connected with one of Pfeffer's curves and drove it to the centrefield fence.

It was an ideal day for baseball—not a bit of breeze was stirring, and it was just cool enough for the players to keep in a right temperature. Although the locals did not get many hits, all of those made were timely. The Boston's had their hits scattered, and in only one inning was any damage done.

Smith was sent to the rubber for Washington and twirled a fine game. In the four innings he performed but two scratch hits were made off him, and seven batters struck out. McCoy, who relieved him, also did good work, allowing but three hits and fanning two batters.

Pfeffer, the man whom Manager Stahl tried to land, but did not, was on the firing line for the "Beaneaters," and pitched a fair game, although at times he was very wild. Lave Cross got back into the game and made his presence felt by getting the first of the Senators out and scoring the first run of the game. Williams covered the short field in Nill's place, who is walking around with a sprained ankle. Schlafly, at the "keystone" sack, played a great game, making one of the most sensational stops and throws to first seen on these grounds for some time.

For the visitors, Jack O'Neil started to do the receiving, but was forced to retire in the first inning when a foul tip from Hickman's bat split his thumb. He went to Freedman's hospital, where several stitches were put in it. The Bostons will be without his services for several weeks.

Fred Tenney, at the initial corner played in his old style form, but could do nothing with the stick. Brain, the youngster at second for the visitors, played a good game. Two long running catches were pulled off by Bates in the left garden. Strobel did much toward stirring up the scare of defeat which stared the Senators in the face in the ninth inning. He secured three outs and pulled off a triple through Charley Jones's territory in the seventh inning which started the run getting of the visitors.

New York, April 7.—With an exhibition game between the New York Nationals, champions of the world, and the Yale collegiate team, the baseball season of 1906 was begun at the Polo Grounds today. McGraw's men, who only arrived from their Southern training tour yesterday, showed a good deal of their championship ability, while the Yale men were so completely outclassed that the game was one-sided and uninteresting. New York won by a score of 10 to 3, but the weather was so cold and raw that barring the greeting given to the teams when they came on the field, there was little enthusiasm exhibited by the spectators.

McGraw sent McGinnity to the pitcher's box for five innings and "Dummy" Taylor pitched the remaining four. Captain O'Brien, of the Yale team, called upon three pitchers, Jackson, Pratt and Parsons, during the game. New York scored three times in the first, fifth and sixth innings, and added another tally in the eighth. Errors by Mallory and O'Brien, a balk by Jackson, and three bases on balls were responsible for the home team's three runs in the opening inning.

With one man out in the fifth, a base on balls to Mertes, two doubles by Dahlen and a bad throw by Chapin, gave the locals three more in the fifth. Donlin knocked a three bagger to centre in the following inning, after Taylor had been dismissed. Browne beat out an infield hit and a double steal brought Donlin home. A fumble of McGann's by O'Brien, and a single by Mertes scored McGann and Browne. Browne's single and Camp's wild throw followed by McGann's two-bagger gave the locals their last tally in the eighth inning.

Yale did not get a man past second until the seventh inning, when Mallory doubled to centre, but was caught at third on Camp's grounder. In the eighth, with one out, O'Brien singled to centre and reached second on Donlin's slow fielding. Kinney doubled, scoring O'Brien. Donlin dropped Smith's fly, and on Madden's single to left Kinney scored, but Smith was nailed at third. Camp was retired by Taylor and McGann, and this ended the rungetting for the visitors, as they went out in one, two, three order in the ninth. The score:

MANHATTAN IS SHUT OUT BY BROWN NINE

Providence, April 7.—Brown shut out Manhattan on Andrews Field yesterday, 7 to 0. The game was a comedy of errors on the visitors' side. In the pitching line the visitors' twirler did well. Each pitcher retired ten men. Tift allowed six hits and Mahoney ten, and one base on balls. The home team made two errors, while the opponents gave an exhibition of ten errors. Seaton batted well for the visitors, getting three hits. Score by innings:

The remainder of the forty-one horses in the string are green trotters and pacers. Many have been highly tried in their work, some having been trained for two seasons. As Geers is noted for bringing out a few sensational green ones every year there is no reason that the coming campaign will be different from the others.

HARVARD SOCCERS OUTCLASS SOLDIERS

The Harvard Association football team defeated the soldiers from Fort Warren on Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 goals to 0. The work of the Harvard aggregation was the best that they have shown this year. Their team play was such that they completely outclassed the soldiers. Osborne and A. N. Reggio were the star performers of the afternoon. Osborne scored the only goal in the first half, while Reggio scored three times in the second period. Tobin played well for Fort Warren. Readville Men Pool Stock to Protect Themselves

It has been decided by the [illegible] of the New England Breeders' Association to unite the heavy stockholders to [illegible] their interests for a term of five years. This action is for the purpose of mutual protection in holding the Readville [illegible] track itself.

There has been rumored for some time that the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad have quietly had their agents buying the holdings of the minor stockholders in the Breeders' Association. It could not be construed in any other way than the road was doing so only with the object of securing fifty-one per cent of the stock. Then it would lay in their power to convert the track to their own use, building car shops, freight yards, etc.

Directors Must Hustle.

Unless the directors are very alert there will not be a great deal of trouble in the railroad getting control of the stock, as it is so widely distributed. There is 15,000 [illegible] of all of this 12,400 have been [illegible] and the remainder is in the treasury. Every holder of the original Breeders' Association received a share of stock gratis when it was incorporated for the purpose of holding the Readville track. Then all through New England horsemen took blocks of from ten to twenty shares, the par value being $10.

In the ten years the track has run there has never been a dividend declared, so that the small stockholders have in many instances felt that receiving fifty cents on the dollar for their stock was doing pretty well.

Andy Welsh Chief Holder.

The largest controller of the stock is Andy Welsh of Hartford. Then there is several holding 500 shares each, viz: Colonel John E. Thayer, Ralph H. Williams, George Graves, George G. Hall, Charles Whittemore, George Litchfield and a few others. These are now the ones pooling their issues and working to induce enough of the smaller holders to secure sufficient stock to be safe against the opposition.

POORLY PLAYED GAME EASILY TAKEN BY HARVARD.

M'CALL THE STAR OF CAMBRIDGE FORCES

Harvard defeated the Trinity nine on Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon by the score of 13 to 0. The game throughout was one of the poorest exhibitions that has been put up on Soldiers Field in recent years, neither team hitting well and Trinity fielding worse than a second-rate high school nine, making ten errors in all. The redeeming features of the game were the excellent all-round playing of Second Baseman McCall of Harvard and the effective pitching of Gardiner Greene, a former Volkmann School boy, who pitched the last four innings for the Crimson.

In the four innings in which he was on the slab, Greene, who is a left hander, allowed the Trinity players two hits and struck eight of them out. Greene is too small to have much speed, and depends for the most part on his slow curves over which he has excellent control. He had the Trinity batsmen breaking their backs to connect with his quick drop. Castle, who began the game in the box for Harvard, did not appear to such good advantage as he did in the last game he pitched. When he was taken out the Hartford collegians were begining to connect with his benders in a telling manner.

Harvard Men Shifted.

McCall played a steady fielding game at second, accepting his four chances without an error. He again got three nice singles. Charlie Leonard hit well, sending out two opportune singles.

Captain Stephenson tried Burr on first during the first half of the game, with McCarty in centre field. In the last inning this order was shifted. Harvey, a freshman, was used at short during the last portion of the exhibition, and performed well. Morgan in centre field and Badgely on first base were the real ball players on the Trinity team.

Harvard did not hit hard in the game, securing but seven safe drives. Hitting was not necessary, for Trinity rolled up an aggregate of ten errors, and her pitchers, of whom she tried three in the course of the game, were most generous in issuing free passes, giving twelve in eight innings. Harvard rolled up seven runs in the second inning. The only thing that the Crimson players did to earn this was a single scratch hit by Castle. Passes, wild throws and errors did the rest. AMATEUR BOUTS AT B. A. A. WERE TAME BOXING CONTESTS.

Boxing bouts were the feature attraction at the B. A. A. last night in connection with the entertainment to the Crescent Gun Club members, who were their guests.

The bouts were made up between the best matched of the local amateurs. In the opening bout John Connolly of South Boston met Albert Bates of Cambridge, both rating in 120-pound class.

The boys travelled at an even pace for two rounds, when Bates cut loose and opened up a bunch of wallop, the found resting places on Connolly's [illegible], and a few nose scratches set [illegible] going flowing full blast. Bates caught the eye of the judges and pulled the decision his way.

Albert Hickey of Dorchester and S. J. McKenzie, Somerville, hooked up both within a pound of each other at 148.

Hickey set the pace at the gong, and soon had his foe going back from speedy left jabs. He had reach and height in his favor, and the combination was too strong for McKenzie.

At the end of the second round it was so obviously Hickey's bout that Referee Peters called hostilities off and made the award to Hickey.

Daniels was leading all over the ring, when he suddenly handed over a right to the jaw and Stangel measured his length. The round was cut short.

Stangel did all the forcing in the third round, but Daniels' early lead earned him the decision from the judges.

T. J. Sullivan and John Stanton, both of South Boston, were paired at 115 pounds.

They appeared too friendly and had to get a little ginger talk from the master of ceremonies. They slapped each other for three rounds and the judges agreed that Stanton slapped harder.

Investigation developed that "Sullivan" was a brother of Stanton. The windup was a clash between the "heavies," Fred Bradley of Roxbury and Joe Hanlon of Brookline.

The end came rather sudden in the first round, when Hanlon claimed he was hit below the belt, and collapsed, and the decision went against Hanlon.

SIGNBOARDS BETWEEN PHILADELPHIA AND BOSTON FOR AUTOISTS

American Association Votes $2,000 for the Purpose. Kerrison to Manage Bay State Meet.

Louis R. Spear, president of the Bay State Automobile Association, will return to Boston to-day after a hard week spent in New York in the interest of automobile affairs. While in New York he presided at a meeting of the directors of the American Automobile Association, at which it was decided to erect $2,000 worth of signboards between Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This signboard feature is a step that has long been contemplated, and it savors of Mr. Spear's energy. Road fingers are absolutely necessary now that motor car travel between these cities has become usual and common, and it has been a pet scheme of Boston motorists to see the idea in execution. Mr. Spear proved himself a friend at court.

The signs will be of a uniform size, shape and color, and will prove the much needed aid to motorists.

One of the important subjects discussed at the meeting was the Vanderbilt Cup race. W. K. Vanderbilt, who was present, explained that the recent kicks registered in France and England did not come from either the Automobile Club of France or the British Club, but from disgruntled individuals who circulated stories abroad upon the mismanagement of the entire affair.

The protest of the British Club on the Ormond races was laid aside until the next meeting.

To explain the advantages of the A. A. A. and in order to increase the membership as much as possible, it was voted that 7,000 explanatory circulars should be sent out to motorists. A fifty per cent. discount on trade publications and reduced premiums on accident, fire and liability automobile insurance will be enjoyed hereafter by members of the association.

Those present at the meeting were L. R. Spear of the Bay State Automobile Association, third vice-president of the A. A. A., who presided, Secretary Sidney B. Gorham, Chicago Automobile Club; Windsor T. White, Cleveland A. C.; George E. Farrington, Automobile Club of New Jersey; Dave Hennen Morris, Automobile Club of America; S. L. Haynes, Automobile Club of Springfield; G. A. Post, North Jersey A. S.; J. H. Edwards, Automobile Club of Hudson County; W. E. Edge, Atlantic City A. C.; A. R. Pardington, L. I. A. C., and A. G. Batchelder, N. Y. Motor Club.

Kerrison to Manage Races.

That the automobile races of the Bay State Club at Readville on May 30 will be a success is assured by the latest act of the racing committee in appointing J. C. Kerrison as manager of the event.

Jack, as everybody in the auto world knows, is a conspicuous figure at all the big events and has been closely identified with the automobile in every department since the earliest days of its inception and knows the game from A to Z.

Mr. Kerrison had much to do with the success of the meeting held last year, and he is in a position to draw upon some of the stars of the racing game to appear as attractions.

Yankee Car Wins in Australia.

Word has just been received of the winning by an American automobile of the biggest track race ever held in Australia, with the distinction of being the first American car to win any speed event there. This race is the J. R. Crooke Cup, valued at one hundred guineas ($500), the most valuable prize ever offered for an automobile race in the southern hemisphere. The race is a three mile handicap, and the Pope-Hartford ran away with the event so easily that the spectators could hardly believe it was finished. In fact, this 10-horsepower car made faster time than most of the 16-horsepower English and continental cars entered, to the chagrin of the English and French agents interested.

The Continental Tyre Company presented the winner with a gold medal in addition to the cup, and being the first appearance of the Pope car on the track in Australia, this creditable performance adds materially to its prestige.

As They Do in Paris.

The Parisian garages are noted for the inducements held out to customers in the shape of comfort. They have baths and dressing rooms, newspapers, books and facilities for writing letters. M. Henri Fournier is now getting up a "Salle d'armes" in connection with his garage in the Rue d'Anjou, where his clients may meet for a bout of boxing, fencing, or "le fisticuffs." All clients storing their cars with M. Fournier may thus practice physical culture, fencing and rounds with the gloves free of cost.

Paris has an annual show at which the exhibits are comprised solely of the devices of individual inventors. It is a small show, but one that answers succinctly the question of "what's new?" There ought to be enough Yankee ingenuity in this country to permit of such a show.

MRS. WALLACE MITCHELL OF BROOKLINE AND FRIENDS IN HER RAMBLER CAR.

CHARITY GETS $200 FROM AUTO CONCERN.

The New England Reform Society of West Brookline street has been awarded the $200 won by the Maxwell automobile in the recent hill climbing contest on Parker Hill avenue.

The committee of newspaper men selected by the Morrison-Tyler Motor Company of No. 121 Massachusetts avenue, New England distributors for the Maxwell car, after carefully considering the many requests from charitable institutions, decided that the society was in more urgent need of funds than the others which applied for the money.

The $200 was won by C. W. Kelsey, sales manager of the Maxwell Briscoe Motor Company, in the hill climb which took place after the automobile show. The manufacturers of the Maxwell car left the appointment of the committee to their New England agents, the Morrison-Tyler Company.

After two weeks' consideration the committee selected the reform society, believing that the money would be well expended by this institution. There were many requests for the money, but the majority of the institutions were in good financial standing. The reform society had less money in its treasury than any of the institutions applying for the money.

The stake money, which was held by the BOSTON AMERICAN, has been forwarded to the reform society.

COMING DOG SHOWS ATTRACT LOCAL FANCIERS.

It's merry times in dogdom this week with the four days' show at Atlantic City beginning Wednesday and the opening on the same day of the Merrimac Valley Kennel Club show at Lawrence.

It is the fourth annual at Lawrence and all the local fanciers are in line with their best breeds to go after the ribbons. The exhibition will be held in the City Hall and M. F. Mulcahy will judge the Bostons, while Frank Dole will handle all other breeds.

Already an unofficial announcement has been made that there are 500 entries and nearly 400 dogs to be benched.

Nxt Week New Bedford will be the centre of attraction, as that hustling organization of the Whaling City, the New Bedford Kennel Club, holds forth in the City Hall on April 19 and 20, and coming on the holiday will carry a big delegation down from the Hub.

Harry Lacy will be the all round judge and the following will act with him: T. Benson, French bulldogs; C. W. Barney, beagles; F. A. Teeling, Bostons.

Mr. Teeling is one of the oldest active breeders of the terrier in the Hub and has done lots to raise the standard of the breed.

The premium lists have been sent out and the entries were heavy, closing yesterday, but any with the date on will be accepted.

Useful specials are offered in all classes. The club's medal, containing the head of the English setter, Ch. Ruby D. III.'s, likeness in relief, makes a fine watch charm.

Whippet racing will be one of the features and with the stars of this section in the ring, there will be something doing for the entire two days.

It is remarkable to what state of perfection the muffling of motors in automobiles has now reached. Some of the latest types have motors that run just as quiet as an electric motor. One of the most notable of these is the new model K Queen, which must have a muffler that is perfection itself, as it not only runs almost silently but will take the steepest hills without the use of a cutout on the muffler.

O'BRIEN SHOULD BE JEFFRIES' OPPONENT, SAYS FIGHT EXPERT

The Big Fellow Now Thinks He Can Fight Once in a While and Still Attend to Business.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

San Francisco, April 7.—As big Jim Jeffries has been notably silent of late on the subject of fisticuffs, and as a still tongue has been from time immemorial associated with a wise head, some persons have taken to call Jim the "Sage of Burbank." Jeff has broken his lingual fast and his utterances, skeletonized, just about mean that he is ready to unpack his ring habiliments and place himself inside of them if anyone will show him a worthy opponent and an attractive financial prospect.

Jim tries to explain that he never really retired. He holds that he was forced to resign the championship because there was no one in sight for him to defend it again. The public discharged him, according to the way Jim tells it, and now if the public wants to put him to work again he is quite willing to buckle down.

From Jim's remarks it is gathered that he always had a hankering after his old job. The free life of the cow-yard has not lost its charm altogether, but Jim thinks probably he can get enough of it between fights.

Small Chance of Trouble.

Now that Jeffries is in the "Show me" mood, fight fans are asking themselves what can be done. It is admitted on all sides that there is small chance just at present of creating any serious trouble for him. Berger and Kaufman are fledglings, and either of them would probably be rendered cataleptic with buck fever if turned loose in a Queensbury inclosure with the side-tracked champion. Marvin Hart, plucky and well meaning though he may be, is out of the running, while the idea of pitting that runt, Tommy Burns, against the Titanic majesty Jeffries, merely appeals to one's sense of the ridiculous.

Jack O'Brien seems to think that he carries guns enough for Jeff, but doubtless he means rapiers and javelins.

If Jack is sincere in his effort to pave the way for a tilt with the big fellow, he probably figures he can prod Jeff into defeat the way Jim Corbett did with John L. Sullivan at New Orleans.

If O'Brien had sought a match with Jeffries two or three years ago, the proposition could have been laughed at, but circumstances alter cases. The public would strain a point to see Jeff in action again, and it can be hardly agreed that there is any one in the list at present who could face the big fellow with better chances of success than O'Brien. If Jeffries comes a few steps further and begins to look around for a fight, it seems to me that O'Brien is the man the promoters will select to go against him, and if the big crowd which makes pugilism a paying venture gets to thinking that the kind of cleverness which enabled Jim Corbett to wear down Sullivan may stand O'Brien in need in a battle with Jeffries, there will be a gradual warming up to the bout.

When Sullivan was beaten by Pompadour Jim the aftermath reeked with arguments to the effect that long absence from the ring, followed by a severe course of training, had taken all the starch out of the once mighty John L. It was reasoned too, of course, that Sullivan's joints and hinges had stiffened up naturally through disuse.

Is Jeff the Same?

Don't you think there are any number of good sports and true wondering whether Jeffries is as fast and free fisted as formerly, after being out of the ring for the better part of two years? I know there are, and the doubt which exists on the point will create interest in any kind of an event which is arranged for the re-discovered champion.

Encouraged by newspaper discussion of his enforced lonesomeness, Joe Gans is out with a direct challenge to Battling Nelson. Gans says the purse and the division of the purse are secondary considerations. He does not care a tinker's curse about the size of the wallet, and he is willing to have Nelson take the entire contents if Nelson proves the better man.

What is more, Gans says he will box at the lightweight limit, his ability to make "133 ringside" being attested by several trainers and pugilistic managers at present sojourning in San Francisco.

Gans says that when he saw Nelson in the East, a couple of months ago, the Dane promised him a fight.

"He said he could meet me after he had boxed McGovern and had had a contest in Los Angeles," said Joe.

Nelson, on his arrival in Los Angeles the other day, said he would fight any man living but Gans.

Is Gans telling truth about the Eastern interview, or has Nelson repented of hastily given promise?

A Warmed Over Match.

The bout with Herrera naturally appeals to the Dane, for he has been over the ground before. It is a warmed-over match, in fact, and will scarcely cause a big ripple of interest as would an event in which the durable Dane was tackling a brand new opponent. Roast turkey the first time out is always more appetising than it is when you meet it later in the form of timbales.

One thing Nelson can thank his stars for is that he has steadfastly boomed Herrera as the hardest thumper of the many men he has met. All that the Dane has said on this point now becomes gilt-edged advertising.

April will probably be a matchless month so far as San Francisco is concerned. The fight trust appointed Coffroth matchmaker for the month in question, but after thinking the matter over Coffroth declined the position. The game of cross purposes in which the stockholders of the trust are engaged still continues.

Al Kaufman thinks Sam Berger has no right to break "amateur ranks" without consulting him. The idea of a Berger-O'Brien match is particularly distasteful to Kaufman. He says he will box Berger for anything in sight, and a side bet to boot, with the understanding that the winner is to have the privilege of signing with O'Brien. Berger says nothing.

AUTO LEGISLATION IS PROGRESSING NICELY, SAYS PRESIDENT LEE

By Elliot C. Lee.

President Massachusetts Automobile Club.

ELLIOT C. LEE.

AUTOMOBILE legislation is progressing nicely and the bills regulating speed limits and State control over automobiles will be of mutual benefit to the users of cars and all people who use the roads for practical purposes.

It takes some time to convince the inhabitants of the outlying districts the economy of having good roads, but the advantages are already seen in State roads, which are always in fit condition and prove the most available for travel.

I recall an instance down near Stockbridge which came to my notice last Summer. There is a large hill over which it takes the full power of a team of horses to get over with only a small load. Now, if considerable leveling was done it would save time and trouble, but for some reason the farmers fail to heed the possibilities of improvements and are satisfied to plod along in the same old way.

It would take very little labor to keep all the country roads in good shape during the bad season if they would dig ditches along the side of the road for the water to drain in. To do this would only be the cost of a little time and the accruing benefits would be infinitesimal.

Careful Men Have No Trouble.

In my five years' activity in the use of the automobile I have never encountered any kind of trouble with local officials and can't understand why so many get mixed up in difficulties with town authorities.

I have been particularly careful in running my car, always slowing down when approaching a pedestrian in the open country, and made it a point to use the utmost caution.

It's a funny thing, but the more noise a machine makes the greater the liability of officials to think that enormous speed is developed. Take a big red devil or a car with an exhaust like a switch engine, it creates the impression of making terrific speed, while the smooth running car will often get by, although it might be exceeding the speed limit.

It's a wonder to me that the laws regarding horse-driven vehicles are not enforced more. I know from actual experience by following vehicles and having an accurate speedometer that the law was being infringed, but what constable would think of arresting a driver unless he was actually racing?

Everybody Blames the Auto.

At the present time everybody judges the automobile as an instrument of destruction, something like the electric car when it first came into use. A person may be struck down by a horse, and there are countless accidents reported every day of the kind, but they are taken as a matter of course, while if an automobile strikes a person it is murder.

People should stop to think of the difference between a modern auto equipped with all the necessary appliances for stopping in a short space of ground, no matter what the rate of speed, and a heavily laden express team thundering along, which could not be stopped until it completely run over one.

It's a strange thing how at times people look at things done by autoists. I remember last year, in the Glidden tour, I was having a little extended brush with Harlan Whipple in the western part of the State, and those persons along the roadside who saw us yelled, "Go it," "Beat him," "There's only two ahead of you." Now, under ordinary circumstances, these same people would frown on speeding, but in this instance they considered that a race was on, and took a different view of the matter.

To show what queer ideas some people have for the proper regulation of automobiles, the bill presented to the Committee on Roads and Bridges calling for every car to have a bell that would ring continuously is a good example. What chance would a person have with a dozen bells clanging in his ears all at once. It would be enough to bewilder any one.

Yale Tries Rugby Game Against English Team

Special to the Sunday American.

New Haven, April 7.—Yale met a team of former English university players this afternoon on the Yale Field in the first English rugby football game ever played by an American varsity team. Neither side scored.

Yale twice had the ball at the English men's ten-yard line, only to lose it because of penalties incurred through ignorance of the game. The English players had never played together before and gave a sorry exhibition of team play. They excelled Yale greatly in passing, but in line forcing, kicking and running Yale was easily superior.

This is your last and only chance to send in an opinion on the baseball contest. To-day's coupon is the last that will be printed. These coupons will be received until Thursday noon through the mail, or otherwise, but after that time, on account of the fact that the Nationals will line up against Brooklyn at Brooklyn on Thursday, the coupon box will be closed.

After almost two months of doping out suggestions as to how the two teams will line up in their first games, it looks as though the fans will have to begin all over again. The signing of "Cozy" Dolan when the contest has almost closed, has upset the dreams of thousands of fans who saw themselves seated in the grand stand of the National League grounds for a whole season at the expense of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. The fans who were thoughtful enough to leave an order for extra papers with their news dealers are not regretting it. The fact that the National line-up has been turned upside down will start thousands of fans on the warpath to-day to get the last coupons.

It is probable that many thousands of the suggestions which the contest editor has received have not mentioned Dolan at all. This means that an avalanche of opinions will pour into the contest department from to-day until the ballot box is closed on Thursday.

Have you noticed the few changes that are likely to occur in the regular line-up and batting of the teams? In spite of all the touting that the new men have received, it is probable that there won't be two new men on either team! Remember, this is the last coupon that will be published, and it must be turned in before Friday, as none will be received on that day. Send your line-up to-day. The twelve that come the nearest to getting the batting orders correct will receive a season ticket book to the grounds of the league whose team he placed in correct order. It's your last chance to enjoy a season at the ball park.

STATE'S BEST ASSET IS A GOOD ROAD SAYS AUTOIST.

Poor Highways Are a Big Handicap to Any Live Community.

"Did you ever consider what a handicap it is to a State to have poor roads?"

That question was asked by a prominent motorist in New York the other day. He had been touring all Summer through New England and had had a chance to get an idea of where the best roads for motoring were located. His remarks on the subject are worth serious consideration, not alone by automobilists, but by legislators as well.

"In Massachusetts there is a system of roads that is not surpassed in America," he said. "And that State gets the benefit from the fine highways in more ways than one. It is a paying investment. Any person who has ever travelled through the State in a motor car finds the riding so comfortable that he wishes to repeat the trip.

State Makes Money.

"Not only that, but he prolongs his stay in the State to take advantage of the fine driving. Ordinarily accompanied by two or three others, this means an expenditure for living expenses that brings money into places in the State where before there was no such revenue.

"No one city has a monopoly on this, for many of the smaller towns have had strangers within their portals who never would have been seen there but for the roads that led them where they did not care. When they have lost the way in going from one city to another instead of displeasure at making a mistake the delightful places that presented themselves here and there, coupled with the well-kept roads, added a zest to the trip.

Other States Less Fortunate.

"We hear a lot about the beauties of this region or that one and plan to make a trip to see what the places are like. We see them, to be sure, but the discomforts experienced in making the journey often take away much of the pleasure that otherwise might have been enjoyed.

"If New Hampshire, for instance, had a system of roads anywhere near like that of Massachusetts, what a paradise it would be for the motorists. Some day the situation may be realized by the people of that State and something done to help the matter, but it looks as if it were a long way off.

"For example, there are roads in the northern part of the State where the scenery is simply magnificent that could be put in fair shape for a few dollars. I know of places where the expenditure of a couple of dollars a day by a town to fill up holes and level roads would in a week or two make the highways fifty per cent. better.

"At present they are abominable in some places. When you find you have to run a car at six or seven miles, and at times slow down to the point that just divides between actually stopping and barely moving, because of gullies and holes, when the road is perfectly level, too, for some miles, then some idea of the discomforts of motoring thereabouts may be gleaned."

NOBLE EARL IS NOW A TERRIFIC SCORCHER.

Earl of Portsmouth, of Evangelical Tendencies, Becomes a Bold, Bad Motorist.

Never, probably, has the possession of a motor car wrought a more striking change in its owner than that which has lately been apparent in the noble Earl of Portsmouth. Ever since he came out of Oxford his lordship has been known as that rare thing—a peer with evangelical tendencies. Imbued also with certain socialistic leanings, sport of any kind seemed completely out of his line, and if there was one law-abiding citizen in the land it certainly was he.

Just how the Earl came to acquire a motor car has not developed, but it seems to have turned Jekyll into Hyde so far as he is concerned. For all of a sudden the Earl has become no end of a "scorcher," and to talk to him about the police is like waving a red flag at a bull.

Posted a Warning.

He got himself into the papers the other day by posting up a warning to other motorists near a well-known "police trap" on the borders of his Hurstbourne Park estate, and he is one of the leading spirits of the newly-formed Automobile Association, whose avowed mission it is to fight the rural authorities who prosecute car owners. Other distinguished members of the association are Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who has twice been mulcted in heavy fines, and the Hon. Stephen Coleridge, who recently wrote to the Times that while motoring in the Andover road he "fell among magistrates," thus paraphrasing the Bible anecdote.

The Earl of Portsmouth, who is also Viscount Lymington and Baron Wallop, is forty-nine, and one of the richest men in his section of the country—Hampshire. His estate there comprises 47,000 acres, and besides Hurstbourne Park House he has a big town mansion in Westminster and another country residence in North Devonshire. One of his ancestors was vice-treasurer of Ireland under Elizabeth, and another sat to try Charles I., but declined to sign the monarch's death warrant.

Like His Father.

Now that the Earl has caught the motoring craze he reminds one more of his father, the late Earl, who was famous as a daredevil huntsman and owned the finest pack of hounds in Hampshire. Even in his carriage he always drove at breakneck speed. In London he was the terror of the cabbies, who could never go fast enough to suit him. One day, however, the Earl met a jehu who was rather more than his match. He was driving down Piccadilly in a hansom when the street became badly blocked. The cab stopped, whereupon the nobleman became wrathy and demanded to be hurried forward at once. The driver pointed out that the street was impassable. "Rubbish, man, clear the road!" cried his lordship. "I'm the Earl of Portsmouth!" "It's no good, sir," returned the cabbie, "you may be Lord Portsmouth in the country, but you ain't Lord Almighty up here."

STARS OF THE BILLIARD WORLD TO COMPETE IN BIG TOURNAMENT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 7.—One of the most interesting events in the history of billiards will start tomorrow at the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall, when the world's championship tournament at 18.2 balk line begins. The last tournament held in this city took place in 1901, when Schaefer won the 18.1 championship, defeating Slosson, Baruiel, Sutton, Morningstar and Howison.

The seven men who will contest in the tourney are the recognized masters of the world at the green cloth game. First and foremost is Willie Hoppe, now the world's champion at the 18.1 balk line game, who, fortunately for the tournament, settled his difference with the promoters at the eleventh hour. Hoppe recently beat Slosson, but he will find it much more difficult to win from a crowd of very clever men.

"Wizard" Schaefer in Form.

Then, there is Schaefer, the "wizard," who showed Hoppe the fine points of the game, and who is now playing in great form. Then Slosson, Cure, the French expert; George Sutton, who has developed his style at the Paris academies; Orlando Morningstar and Albert G. Cutler, the young Boston professional.

At the present time there is no recognised champion at this style of play, and this tournament will create one. A new championship emblem will be competed for. The contests are to be of 400 points, with games afternoon and evening. Each player will have to meet the other men and about two weeks will be required to decide the winner.

Two Shots in Balk.

This style of play is less difficult than the 18.1 as it allows two shots in balk instead of one. This gives the player a chance to play for position, which is not nearly so possible in the other game. It is more attractive than the one shot in, as the player has more chance for clever manoeuvring and is better suited for close playing and nursing.

Among the players, Hoppe has the centre of the stage. His brilliant work during the last two years in addition to his youth, has brought him before the public in great bounds. He is one of the most unconcerned players in a match, no matter what is at stake.

The "Wizard" is without a peer as to the stroke and touches for nursing positions. He is daring in his play, and is still considered one of the cleverest masse players in the world. His wrist stroke is considered the nearest to perfection than any other player that ever wielded the cue. He is original and resourceful and fully deserves the title of "The Wizard."

Slosson Is the "Student."

Slosson plays an entirely different style from his old time rival. When Schaefer is fast Slosson is deliberate. Every shot he tries he has studied out, and for this reason has earned for himself the name of "The Student."

Sutton plays more of a nursing game, and is very clever at keeping the balls together. He is a very careful player and very seldom gets tied up. He is fairly good at cushion and open play and at nursing he is more erratic in his playing than the other men, either playing a very good or bad game.

All of the billiard sharps are picking Hoppe as the winner and Schaefer as the second and Cure third man. Each player has paid $250 as an entrance fee, which will be added to a purse of $3,000 donated by the promoters, and divided as follows: Forty per cent to the winner, 25 per cent to the second, 18 per cent to the third, 12 per cent to the fourth and 5 per cent to the fifth.

HOLY CROSS ENJOYS PICNIC WITH AGGIES.

Worcester College Boys Bat Two Pitchers Out of the Box and Win Hands Down.

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, April 7.—After batting two of the opponents pitchers out of the box, Holy Cross won a signal victory over the Amherst Aggies team this afternoon by a score of 16 to 4.

In the first inning with two men on bases, Tirrell for the "Aggies" landed on the ball for three bases bringing in O'Donnell and Clarke. In the second inning O'Donnell and O'Grady bunched hits, the latter for two bases. Hubbard and O'Grady scoring the final runs for the "Aggies."

In the first inning Captain Flynn of Holy Cross drove out a homer and, abetted by a two-bagger by Barry, and errors by the Amherst men, five runs were tallied. In the last of the sixth, Kennedy succeeded Hubbard, and the change proved fatal.

In the seventh Holy Cross batted around, landed unmercifully on Kennedy for nine runs. The latter proved very wild, giving five bases on balls in one inning. He was succeeded by Cobb, who proved more consistent. O'Drain pitched a fast game for Holy Cross. In the eighth inning Fraser, a new twirler for Holy Cross, went into the box, holding the visitors down without a hit, and striking out five men in two innings. The score:

BELMONT IS LUCKY WIN WITH SECOND STRING.

Okenite Fails at Bennings, but H's Stablemate, Curriculum, Takes the Race.

Special to the Sunday American.

Washington, April 7.—Fully eight thousand people saw [illegible] day's sport with many [illegible] at Bennings to-day. The weather was [illegible] almost sultry, just the sort for fast racing.

August Belmont's Okenite, at 1 to 3, failed the [illegible] the Washington Nursery takes [illegible] stablemate, [illegible] of the five [illegible] with the rest beaten off half a [illegible].

James W. Colt's old [illegible], Douro, won the Spring steeplechase thanks to a perfect ride by Rodrick, the boy who promised to revolutionize steeplechase riding. He uses a crouching Tod Sloanesque seat and seems to conserve the energies of his mount with more snap than sit up riders.

Cut a Killing Pace.

Ray, on Panthom and Gallagher, on Copper, cut out a [illegible] pace so hot that they clipped four seconds off the record. Meanwhile, Rodrick waited eight or ten lengths in the rear with Douro. He made up his [illegible] the run home and on [illegible] practically fresh horse, who [illegible] lengths from Copper. Panthom [illegible] was an indifferent third.

Jack [illegible] the very liberal price of [illegible] the maiden jockey race [illegible] Nattie Bumppo, with [illegible] Yorkshire Lad and Workman [illegible] named Nattie Bumppo [illegible] speed and led by [illegible] to the stretch, where he [illegible] and the little negro Bryant was [illegible] him in the drive. Yorkshire Lad, probably the best horse in the race, got a very bad ride and should do [illegible].

Easy for Kure.

Kure, the favorite, was never extended to win the maiden race by five lengths from Frills, the second choice. [illegible] was third, 1½ lengths away.

At Powell inside Woolwitch look like a plater in the fifth. In the sixth Father Bill Daly put over Caronel at the sweet price of 20 to 1. Water Course, another outsider, was a good second after having been practically left. Royal Widow, heavily played last time again disappointed and was an indifferent third.

Summary:

FIRST RACE [illegible] and up, maiden jockeys [illegible] Jack McKeon, [illegible] (Dorelette), 3 to 1 and even, won; Nattie Bumppo, 92 (Bryant), 30 to 1 and 15 to 1, second; Paul Clifford, 94 (Reeves), 12 to 1 and 3 to 1, third. Time, 1.30. [illegible] Lad, Workman, Waddell H., Proceeds, [illegible] also ran.

TRAINED ON EGG DIET, CAMBRIDGE CREW WON EASILY FROM OXFORD

Cantabs Took the Lead from the Start and Held It All the Way in Annual Race.

London, April 7.—Cambridge University had no difficulty in defeating Oxford this morning in the annual boat race on the Thames by over three lengths in the fast time of 19 minutes and 24 seconds.

Considering that the winning boat was not pushed and that its occupants until the last few days have not been favorites, the race presents peculiar features in regard to modern training.

The weather was perfect for the great race. A bright sun was sparkling on a smooth surface, there was little wind and no choice of positions. Thousands of spectators lined the four miles of banks though there was little chance for any great enthusiasm as the Cambridge men took the lead at the gun and were never in danger.

Cambridge Off in the Lead.

Oxford won the toss and chose the Surrey side. The two boats got away nicely at 12:03 p. m. Cambridge struck the water first, pulling thirty-eight strokes during the first minute to Oxford's thirty-seven. The nose of the Cambridge boat quickly showed in front, and at the mile post Cambridge was half a length to the good. The leaders were rowing a very [illegible] style and with perfect finish to every stroke. They increased their lead to a full length before Craven Steps, about three-quarters of a mile from the start, were reached.

Thereafter Cambridge drew away with every stroke. At Hammersmith Bridge one and three-quarters of a mile from the start, Cambridge already had the race well in hand, with a lead of over two lengths. The Oxford boat at that stage of the race was rolling badly. Shortly afterward the Oxford men spurted and took their rivals' water, but from that time on it was merely a procession, though the Oxford oarsmen stuck to their work in a most persevering manner.

Distress in Oxford Boat.

Cambridge shot by Barnes' Bridge, a little over three and a half minutes from the finish, about five lengths in front of the Oxford, some of whose oarsmen were showing evident signs of distress. Cambridge could have won practically by any distance they liked, but their stroke slowed down on nearing the finish and Cambridge passed the finish post the easiest of winners.

A peculiar interest was attached to the race this year, for the winning crew has been dieting principally upon eggs. When the training season was begun several weeks ago the Cambridge men gave no promise of showing superior form.

Trained on Eggs.

Suddenly the crew began to show great improvement, but a general sneer was the response when it became known that their diet consisted largely of eggs. The comic papers of England seized upon the chance to cartoon the idea, with the result that the boat was held in utter ridicule. The result of the race, however, has given the sporting public something to think about.

Last year Oxford was the victor in twenty minutes thirty-five seconds. At the outset of the season it looked as though the same crew would have an easy time of it again. Later, however, several members of the Oxford shell were incapacitated. This made Cambridge yesterday almost a two-to-one favorite.

But once has the race resulted in a dead heat, Oxford winning thirty-four and Cambridge twenty-seven times since the inauguration of the event in 1853.

"MIDDY" CREWS WIN FROM OPPONENTS ON SEVERN.

Varsity Defeats Georgetown, While Second Eight Beat the Institute Men.

Annapolis, Md., April 7.—The Annapolis midshipmen won a double victory in rowing here to-day. Their first eight-oared shell crew won from the varsity crew of Georgetown University of Washington, and the second eight defeated the freshman crew of the Washington institution in a four-cornered race on Severn River this afternoon. The course was two miles straightaway, all four shells rowing the same distance. The contest marked the formal opening of the season of intercollegiate rowing, and the chief result was the demonstration by the midshipmen that they have a first eight equally as strong, or stronger, than the crew which made such a successful record last season.

Four Lengths Ahead.

The middy senior eight crossed the finish line about four lengths ahead of the varsity of Georgetown in the time of 10m. 50⅗s. The Washington varsity finished in 11m. 5s.; then came the academy second eight, just a length to the rear of [illegible] own senior's time, 11m. 5⅘s., while the freshmen, in finishing last, were three lengths behind the eight against which [illegible] was matched. The time of the freshmen was 11m. 17s. The slow time was due to the choppy sea.

The race was [illegible] a grand one, the splendid start which the navy seconds made only being surpassed by the [illegible] work which the middie first crew did afterwards. Ingram pulled a masterful stroke and every man in the seat behind him responded valiantly to the effort until the prow of the boat forged ahead of all the others. The lead was increased over the entire force.

Stuart's Powerful Oar.

Stuart, stroke of the 'Varsity, also did some powerful pulling, but the Washingtonians could not keep the pace with the faster middies. In fact, the navy second crew kept the nose of their shell up to that of Georgetown 'Varsity over almost the whole course, and it is a matter of question as to whether or not they would have finished second, as the crew was disabled after covering one and one-quarter miles when Bragg, who was rowing at number six, tore away the out-rigging of his oar.

At the end of the first mile the visiting crews realized the safe lead that the Annapolis eight had attained, and they struggled manfully to cover the gap, but there was too much power behind the navy oars.

CORNELL OARSMEN TRAINING FOR RACE WITH HARVARD.

Coach Courtney Has Fine Prospects for Another Winning Crew.

Ithaca, April 7.—This year the Cornell oarsmen will appear in two races outside of the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, which will come during the latter part of June. The first of these races will be the varsity eight-oared contest with Harvard on the Charles River at Boston on May 26. On Memorial Day Cornell will be host in a junior varsity race, which will be rowed at Ithaca on Cayuga Lake.

Will Race on the Charles.

The varsity race with Harvard will be held at Boston again this year because previous to the Charles River dual meeting last year Harvard had sent her oarsmen to Ithaca to participate in junior varsity contests on Cayuga Lake in which other colleges were entered in different years, including crews from Columbia and Pennsylvania.

Harvard and Cornell have always been on the most friendly terms in aquatics. Last year Cornell was able to defeat Harvard over the mile and seven-eighths course, but a short time afterward the defeated crew put up an excellent exhibition against Yale at New London. This year there is reason to believe Harvard will exert every effort to turn out a crew that will be able to revert last year's result, and if this is accomplished it will be the first time that Harvard has ever defeated the Ithacans on the water.

For the junior varsity race on Cayuga the Cornell Athletic Council has issued a [illegible]. This will mark Navy week, and as there was no race in Ithaca last year, it will be a prominent feature in undergraduate activities. Thus far Pennsylvania has been the only one to respond with acceptance of the invitation to this regatta, but others are expected.

The coming of the Quakers is accepted with much pleasure in Ithaca as they have not been seen on Cayuga for the past two years. The last race was a triangular contest against Harvard and Cornell.

"Navy Week" at Ithaca.

The Memorial Day contest will be held over the two-mile course and in view of the popularity of [illegible] racing in Ithaca, due perhaps to Cornell's long chain of victories, a large crowd of spectators is expected [illegible] with the numerous college entertainments, including concerts, receptions and dancing parties, Navy week will rival Junior week just now ended.

SCHOOLBOY CREWS SHOWING GOOD FORM IN THEIR PRACTICE WORK

Now that the interscholastic crews have swallowed the fundamental principles of managing the sweeps, Coaches Graney of the B. A. A. and "Pat" Donovan, of the Union Boat Club, hope to round out immediately some formidable combinations with the material on hand.

The candidates this year, although more numerous than in previous seasons, are not on the average of the usual quality. This can be readily seen now that an entire week of the Easter vacation has been passed in steady work. None of the boys have been allowed on the water without their sweaters, and three days have been rather choppy for the novices. Nevertheless the coaches have determined to cut a swath in the candidates and get down to the hard pan with the best material they can find. At present all the schools are supporting at least two boats, many of them three, and this makes it difficult for the coaches to get a team worth favorable comment.

Boston Latin School at present seems to have the best working quartet. The crew is good and heavy compared with the other boats and at present they are working well together. DeMeritte School has been handicapped through the week by the loss of Wallis, stroke, who has been laid up with a bad heel from a rowing machine.

Noble and Greenough has three boats working with constant shifting. What four will be the final men to work together is hard to decide yet.

Stone's school has added an auto launch and a paper eight-oar shell to the school fleet. This was necessary on account of twenty candidates who have had nothing to do while the other eight-oar was on the river. Coach Judd is doing good work with his charges.

OLD ELI NINE WILL LEAVE ON BIG PRACTICE TRIP WEDNESDAY NEXT

If Weather Conditions Are Favorable Yale Varsity Crew Will Take Four-Mile Spin on River This Week Before Easter Vacation.

New Haven, April 7.—Yale athletic teams have completed plans for their Easter training and trips. The recess begins next Wednesday and the baseball nine leaves at noon, meeting Georgetown in Washington the next day and playing six games before its return North. Yale would be about satisfied with an even break with Georgetown and with the University of Virginia with whom she has two games each scheduled. She expects to beat Norfolk College and she will put up a stiff fight in New York when she meets Fordham at the Polo Grounds for the last match of the trip. Yale should break even on the Easter schedule, winning at least three games.

All her young players will get a thorough trying out in the South. The veteran [illegible], Jackson, will not pitch many games for two or three weeks. He has a lame arm and will work into condition slowly. Howard Jones, the Exeter pitcher of last season, Eddie Pratt, substitute pitcher last year, and Parsons, who was pitcher at Lawrenceville, will do most of Yale's twirling till settled weather. Mallory will be given left field. He is a freshman from Andover. Tad Jones, the football quarterback, will be tried at first base on the Easter trip. He caught for two years at Exeter.

Camp Having Hard Fight.

The veteran, Camp, at second base, is having a hard fight to hold his place in view of the amazing game played by Williams, the former Andover third baseman. The better batter will win, as the rivals are fielding brilliantly.

The Yale track team will be sent home during the first part of its Easter recess. Captain Cates has notified the members that they can go away when vacation begins next Wednesday, and remain till the following Monday, when they will return for morning and afternoon work on the cinder path. The quarter-mile track has been in such shape for two weeks that it was not available for use, but the team will get three more days of hard work before vacation. The absence of Parsons, who has gone to the Olympic games, and Dray, the crippled pole vaulter, has cast a damper on the team, and hope of winning the intercollegiates is slender. Captain Tom Shevlin, the hammer thrower, is the only star left on the team, and he failed to perform in first-class fashion last year. Torrey, the best sprinter on the team, has done almost no work during the Winter.

Before the Yale crew goes home for its Easter vacation it will get over the four-mile course for the first time this year, if weather conditions are anywhere near favorable. The oarsmen will stay here after college closes next Wednesday till Saturday noon, rowing mornings and possibly afternoons till Saturday. The varsity eight has shown fast form up to the 2¼ miles. It has tried no longer distance than that, and Coach Kennedy will be keenly disappointed if rough water prevents the eight from covering the four miles before Easter. Next Saturday noon the oarsmen will go home to remain till college opens the following Thursday.

Thirteen Crews at Work in Harbor.

A total of thirteen crews is now at work on the harbor. Of these, four eights are the Yale varsity squad, three are freshmen, and the rest are class crews who are working into form for the inter-class events at the Spring regatta. Interest in class racing was never keener here, and its revival has already borne fruit for the varsity, for Rogers, a class oarsman, who has stuck to his rowing for four years, has just been taken from the '06 shell into the varsity boat. He has replaced Ide, who has been rowing No. 3. Ide was a member of the freshman eight last year. He is an excellent oarsman, but Rogers's persistency has crowded Ide out for the present. Not in years has a green oarsman stuck to his work so doggedly that in his senior year he has won a place in the varsity shell. The shift of Ide to Rogers is the only change made in the Yale varsity eight since it left the gymnasium for the harbor, six weeks ago.

The crew is now rowing in the following order:

Stroke, Boulton; No. 7, Captain Morse; No. 6, Noyes; No. 5, Chase; No. 4, Biglow; No. 3, Rogers; No. 2, Graham, and bow, Weeks.

There may be one or two more changes in the shell before the races against Harvard, but there is no indication now that there will be. Biglow, No. 4, is short-bodied and has long arms and legs. This makes him swing rather widely and he is occasionally out of time, but he is a strong oar and may remedy his faults.

Yale's rowing programme has just been completed and is as follows: May 12, Yale vs. Annapolis naval cadets; May 19, Yale spring regatta, Yale vs. Columbia freshmen; June 2, Yale freshmen vs. Springfield High School on Connecticut River; June 28, Yale-Harvard regatta at New London.

There has been some talk about entering a crew for the American Henley races on the Schuylkill May 20, but no action has yet been taken on the proposition.

CAMBRIDGE LATIN BEATS WAKEFIELD

Wakefield, Mass., April 7.—The Wakefield High and Cambridge Latin schools opened the baseball season here to-day, the latter winning by a score of 6 to 4.

Both teams played a fine game considering that it was their first contest. Cambridge scored their runs in the first and fourth innings, while the home team scored their four runs in the eighth.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd and was interesting throughout. The battery work of Chase and Reeves for the visitors was the feature of the game. The score by innings:

Duxbury Yacht Planning for a Lively Season

Interest in the Lipton cup race, to be sailed from Bay Ridge, N. Y., to Bermuda, a distance of 650 miles, is rapidly maturing in almost every seaport town on the eastern coast. The race is to be sailed about the last of May, and will be for boats under fifty feet only.

This is the first time such a distance has been undertaken by boats of this size. It has been Sir Thomas's idea to create an interest in deep sea sailing for small boats, and each year since he has become interested in racing on this side of the water he has offered a trophy to be contested for. Another entry for the long cruise will probably be made by C. H. Rawson of the New Haven Y. C., who is also known in Massachusetts waters. Mr. Rawson has been sailing the Frances, a forty-five-foot sloop, for several seasons, and has captured more than his share of the prizes. His boat is a seaworthy little craft and it is her owner's belief that he can make Bermuda under twenty days.

* * *

The Duxbury Yacht Club is planning for another prosperous year. A fifteen-foot class will give additional interest to the racing in the Bay. The same eighteen-foot class which has enjoyed the distinction of having some of the fastest boats of this design in Massachusetts Bay, will open the season on May 30, when the first regatta will be held. It is probable that several additional boats will be entered in the [illegible] class when the season opens.

* * *

* * *

Happy Three Bowlers Finish Their Season

The teams and standing follow: Powers, Putnam, Lothrop, won 30, lost 21; Roche, Deroo, Ingalls, [illegible]; Foster, Davis, Johnson, 29-32; Smith, Mullaise, Nichols, 18-42.

GAY BINGEN IS SOLD FOR $5,000 AND BRADY WILL CAMPAIGN HIM

Nancy Hanks Will Soon Have a Foal by John A. McKerron—No Racing at Nashua This Year.

Fred L. Lee, the West Springfield horseman, has sold to a patron of Trainer James Brady, Macon, Ga., his three-year-old stallion colt Gay Bingen, by Bingen, 2:06¼, dam Gaiety Girl, 2:15¼, by Red Wilkes, for $5,000. This makes two three-year-old Massachusetts trotting bred products to be sold in a week, that combined fetched the good amount of $15,000, calling the attention of the entire country to the high class of horses the breeders of the State are raising.

Gay Bingen was worked a little last season by Dave McClary at Hartford. No effort was made to have him trot a fast mile, the object being to only develop his speed for the big futurities of this year. Still he stepped a mile in 2:30, the final quarter in 32 seconds.

In the Fall he was sent by Mr. Lee to Brady at Macon to Winter, and be prepared for the campaign this season. Brady has become convinced that he has a good chance to win in the stakes he is entered. By having Gay Bingen Brady has two strings to his bow for futurities, as in his stable is Lotus, 2:10, winner of the Horse Breeder Futurity at Readville last Summer, when she trotted the middle half of the second heat in the remarkable fast time of 1:05½.

* * *

By John A. McKerron—Nancy Hanks.

Hon. J. M. Johnson, president of the New England Breeders' Association, has received a letter from Kentucky stating that the former trotting queen of the turf, Nancy Hanks (2:04), will soon produce a foal by John A. McKerron (2:04½).

The speed inheritance of this foal will exceed that of any youngster in the world, as the speed average from the sire and dam is 2:04¼. Mr. Johnson also reports that Fanella, 2:13, dam of Sadie Mac, 2:06¼, and Todd, 2:14¾, is safely in foal to Moko. She will be bred this year to Peter the Great, 2:07¼.

* * *

No Racing at Nashua.

There will be no racing over the Nashua (N. H.) half-mile track the coming season, except at the annual fair, according to the statement of J. F. Graham of that city, who was one of the party in the disposing of the property of the Fair Association yesterday by the Driving Park Association, which in previous years has held several meetings during the racing season.

With Nashua dropping from the list of half-mile tracks its place in the circuit will be taken by Taunton, Mass., track. They will hold a meeting in a few days to arrange their dates for the season, probably following the line with Worcester and Woonsocket for a three-town circuit with easy shipments for the horsemen.

Fred Clark at Readville.

A new addition to the Readville colony of trainers is Fred Clark, the Providence driver, who has engaged a string of stalls and is expected to arrive Monday with ten head of horses.

Last season Clark campaigned the pacing gelding Don Carr, [illegible], through the Grand Circuit, at the conclusion of which he was sold to go to England. Most of the horses in his stable this year belong to Tobias Burke of Providence, and have been liberally entered in the stake races down the "Big Line."

Local Horse Trainers Prepare for the Season

As the weather grows warmer local trainers are making rapid preparations for the racing season soon to be here. Yesterday Lon McDonald telephoned to his assistant, Ed Avery, at the Thorndale Farm, Andover, to ship to the Readville track to-morrow the stable of horses belonging to Ralph B. Williams.

In the string are the noted campaigners of last season: Lady Sealskin, 2:06¼; Glenwood M., 2:07½; Kruger, 2:08; Miss Adbell, 2:09¾; Sadie Fogg, etc. All are in the best of Winter shape, ready to commence the grand "prep" for the Grand Circuit meetings. Miss Adbell and Sadie Fogg will not be trained for racing this year, as McDonald is firm in the belief that it is better to not do too much with horses in the four-year-old form.

On account of the [illegible] selling of the Charles Oak Park, Dave McClary has decided to ship his horses to Readville. He will [illegible] be one of the colony by the middle of the month.

Another to add to the party is Doctor J. C. McCoy. It is his intention to wait till after the stallion season is over and then he will bring Admiral Dewey, 2:04¾, and some youngsters to the two-minute course of training. The doctor says that Admiral Dewey will this year beat his record of last season and without the aid of the wind shield either.

"Long Shot" Cox, the largest money winner of the New England trainers last year, has everything prepared to ship his third head of horses to the Dover, N. H., track on Monday. Those who have seen his horses are saying that he has the best string he ever sat in the sulky behind.

Star Riders Race at Revere Patriots' Day

Of the outdoor events on Patriots' Day the big motor paced race at the Revere track will be one of the chief attractions.

It is a top-liner card that will be presented on the occasion, as three racing stars, the leaders in the game, will meet in a terrific twenty-five mile race behind the new double cylinder motors. These men are Bobbie Walthour, Menus Bedell of New York and Hughey MacLean. If MacLean finds that he cannot get into his real form because of his recent illness, then Tommy Hall, the midget Englishman, will be the third rider.

Bedell is already on hand and is training daily on the banked track, as he intends being a factor in the races this year, and, with increased experience, he is coming along fast.

This week Walthour and Hall will arrive from abroad, where they have won many big events, and the former will remain in this section to ride at the Revere track, as he is under contract for several months. His recent performances on the other side show that he is in excellent condition, and will need only to take the stiffness of a sea voyage out of his frame to be in fighting form.

He is the one man that MacLean, the local champ, wants to beat, and he will proceed to put the kibosh on at the outset of the season. MacLean will decide this week whether he can fit himself for such a hard encounter as Walthour and Bedell are bound to give him if he should ride. If he finds that he needs more time to get back his speed, then Tommy Hall will be the selection for the great three-cornered clash.

It will be the first time that the new motor pacing machines are seen, and their substitution for the old style will add much to the racing, as the use of belts instead of chains will do away with the possibilities of breaks, which has marred the riding to such an extent in the past.

Their smooth running will allow the riders to let themselves out to the limit, and some new records should be established with their use.

The amateurs and "pro" sprinters are already on the track working into shape, and the scrap among them this year promises to be hotter than ever.

With the weeding out of the "pros" the amateur ranks have been increased, and their will be a lot of new timber to compete on the holiday.

WHY STORAGE IMPROVES A PIANO

It is not generally known that a Big Storage Warehouse has the same kind of storage rooms for Pianos as do the Best Makers of the instruments. When a fine piano is made it is put into a special storage or seasoning room—a room especially built for the pianos, where the temperature is kept even and exact—the rooms of this kind are thoroughly felted so as to insure proper dryness. No moisture is generated in such a room to injure the delicate wires of the piano. A piano in Our Storage Rooms, which are built exactly like those of the finest makers, improves every day in seasoning and tone. Don't let any one prejudice you against a Storage Piano. It keeps better in Our Storage than in a parlor.

PIANO SLAUGHTER

STORAGE SALE

A great many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Sale. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best of homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second-hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage sale, the price is simply put on, first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Several nice upright pianos which must be sold at a sacrifice, 2 nice uprights, Chickering and Vose, $40 and $50, nearly new mahogany uprights, 3 pedals, latest style, at ½ Boston prices, reason why, no large rents, big salaries or commissions to be paid on fancy floors, our expenses about $5 a day; Boston warerooms' expense $100 to $300 daily, our terms the most liberal, free carting, free tuning and 3 months lessons with each piano, why not see us at once and thus save the agents' enormous profits? SHAWMUT PIANO CO., 720A Shawmut av., Roxbury, Mass., open till 9 P. M.

A NEW PIANO FOR $185

THE PERSON who can least afford to waste money is the one most often to suffer in buying a piano, because the price is low or the terms tempting; this Wellman piano is made especially for us and we know that it is as good as many a good piano selling for $250, artistic case, beautiful tone and perfect action; absolutely guaranteed, you can make no mistake in buying this piano; write for photographs. HALLET & DAVIS PIANO COMPANY, 146 Boylston st.

THE MYSTERY OF THE ACE OF HEARTS

By Jacques Futrelle,

AUTHOR OF THE "THINKING MACHINE" STORIES

PART 6.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner.

THE solution of the mystery of the ace of hearts only came out several days later, just on the eve of the departure of the Big Show form Boston, when "Wild Dan" Burgess was found dead in his cot with a short, badly spelled note beside him. This note ultimately came into the possession of Police Captain Knott and was closely scrutinized, whereupon it was accepted as true.

Captain Knott only asked one question.

"Who was Dan Burgess?"

"He was an assistant to Stacey," was the reply, "and on those frequent occasions when Stacey was incapacitated by drink he took his place in the show. He was an expert shot, broncho 'buster' and all-round man, but wild, hot-tempered and all that."

That settled the affair. Captain Knott called "Texas Jack" Spalding, Long Luke Aiken, Stacey and a half-dozen detectives about him and told the story. It was like a page from a novel.

"At first," said Captain Knott to the little gathering, "it appeared absolutely conclusive that Texas Jack did kill the girl. There seemed no question whatever about that, because thousands of people were looking on when he fired and she fell. Subsequent developments, the production of the ace of hearts with the teethprint, and the escape of the prisoner from the jail, seemed to confirm this belief.

Suspicion Falls on Aiken.

"But from the moment Spalding called me up on the 'phone and talked to me about things that I frankly admit I would never have thought of, I have believed him innocent. Then suspicion turned to Aiken. Aiken did several things which were, in themselves, suspicious, and yet it seemed that the worst that could be said of him was that he had tried to convict Spalding when as a matter of fact the evidence was all against Spalding anyway. He supplied a fictitious piece of evidence.

"Then my attention was turned to Stacey. Short inquiries proved that he was asleep when the thing occurred, therefore he could not have had anything to do with the shooting. But Stacey owned the only air-gun in the show. I was beginning to see then that an air gun had been used. Therefore if it was used it was used by someone who could readily lay hands on it. Who? Developments were proving it to be Dan Burgess when we found him dead, a suicide and this note:

The captain produced the note and spread it out on the table. It was scrawled on a piece of wrapping paper with a pencil and was orthographically somewhat remarkable. Here it is:

"To them consurned:

I shot Jane Wallden. I done it bekaws I didn't wannt nowbaddy else ter have her when I cuddn't. She throwed down nellie evymann in the showe, pertickuler Luke an Stacey an mee. I was in ther kard game that nite an heeard Luke an Jack fussin. That was after she had throwed mee down. I figgered thatt if shee was shott while Jack was a doin his turn it would look ter be upp ter himm. So I yused Stacey's air-gun. I reckin I was crazie all rite bekaws after thatt I didn't feel rite so now Im thowin my hand in ther deck an askin for a new deal.

(Signed) DAN BURGESS.

That was all of it. There was a tense silence in the little room when the captain had concluded the painful labor of deciphering the scrawl.

"I can understand it all right," said Texas Jack, with conviction, "the man never lived that could know her and not love her."

"And I reckon that's right," added Aiken, solemnly. "If I'd ever thought that boy did it I'd have let daylight through him all right."

Captain Knott turned to Texas Jack.

"Your freedom is now merely a ques-

"Your freedom is now merely a question of going to the commiting magistrate" hanging over you, that of jail breaking."

"If I hadn't broken out I'd have gone to the chair," replied the Texan.

"I think under the circumstances that we might waive prosecution on that point," said the captain. "Do you want us to proceed against Aiken here?"

"Who? Luke? No. It's all right."

Rivals Are Reconciled.

Aiken was apparently heedless of this generosity. He was thinking of that man who could move deliberately to murder a girl, taking advantage of a peculiar situation. His blood boiled at the idea.

"I'd like to have him by the neck," he exclaimed suddenly.

"Who?" asked Captain Knott.

"That Dan Burgess," was the reply. He stopped and stared at Texas Jack for a minute. "I rather think I owe you something, too, Jack," he said at last. "We were both at fault in a way, but I went the furtherest. Will you let bygones be bygones, and put it there?"

He rose and approached the Texan with outstretched hand. Jack looked at him just a moment and extended his own hand.

"I suppose we are both fools," he said quietly. "Let it pass."

THE END.

Have YOU Received An Encyclopedia Like This?

Have You Taken Advantage of This Great Educational Enterprise? Thousands of Families, Many of Them Your Own Neighbors, Are Now Enjoying the Benefit.

You Can Do the Same

The New Standard Encyclopedia

17 Massive Volumes. 9,500 Pages.
55,000 Articles. 900,000 Topics.
3,000 Illustrations. 150 Colored Maps.

WILL YOU ACCEPT

Before It Is Too Late?

If you have not already received an Encyclopedia from the Boston American Co-operative Club, send in you application without further delay. This enterprise is proving much more popular than we anticipated, and although arrangements were made for a very large number of sets which at the time was deemed ample for every need, applications are coming in so rapidly that it now seems as though the distribution must cease long before the time intended.

READ WHAT THESE MEN SAY:

"The New Standard Encyclopedia meets a real want. I have examined a number of articles on subjects with which I am familiar, and find them accurate in all respects. The work is complete."—President Harris, Amherst College.

"It supplements the education that our school system begins. The majority of our citizens do not need ponderous discussions. They want the gist of the matter and the truth of it. They can have it here in the New Standard Encyclopedia."—Professor Sears, Brown University.

"Men and women engaged in any form of public work can hardly afford to be without this encyclopedia, while to the great army of busy, intelligent and up-to-date people it will stand as a library in itself."—President Reed, Dickinson College.

The object of this enterprise is, first, to place an encyclopedia in the home of every earnest, ambitious man and woman, and, second, to demonstrate the practical benefit of real co-operation. An encyclopedia is a whole library in itself. It gives in condensed and digested form the collected wisdom of all time. Here you will find the latest and most accurate information on every subject, written in words that all can understand. For the children it will answer every question that pops into their inquiring minds; for older people it will be a complete reference library, from which they can with little effort secure all the essentials of a college education.

Heretofore good encyclopedias have been sold at such exorbitant prices that only the rich could afford to buy them. This was due to the expensive method of selling by subscription agents. In order to overcome this obstacle arrangements were made with the publishers of the New Standard Encyclopedia for an entire edition, which was secured at an extremely low price, owing to the advertising benefits that would accrue to the work through its adoption for this purpose. The distribution of sets is being effected by means of a co-operative club which entirely eliminates all middle profits, enabling those who become members to secure the books at the lowest wholesale price, and on terms of only a few cents a day — so small that it will scarcely be missed.

The NEW STANDARD ENCYCLOPEDIA was selected for this enterprise because it is the latest and best work of its kind on the market, being specially adapted for the home, for busy men and for school students of all ages. It contains just the information you need every day, in the most comprehensive form. It is the work of America's greatest specialists and educators, many of the most prominent men in our national life being numbered among its editors and contributors. Although only recently completed, it has been widely adopted for use in schools and other public institutions, and is recommended by leading educators everywhere.

FREE

Mail the accompanying coupon to-day to The American Encyclopedia Club, and you will receive, free of all charge, a 36-page book, containing full-page illustrations, portraits of prominent men, maps, beautiful color plates, etc., all taken from the Encyclopedia. This will give you an idea of the scope and magnitude of the work. With the book full information will be sent you about the club, so you can, if you wish, avail yourself of the opportunity that is here presented. Don't delay sending the coupon at once, as the sets are being rapidly distributed, and the offer may be withdrawn at any time.
